culturing

a book of poems

© 2026 by culturing

All rights reserved

This book may be printed for personal use
All other reproduction is prohibited

Printed from https://poems.culturing.net

A man is only half understood when we know how everything in him came into being. If that were all, he could just as well have been dead years ago. As a living being he is not understood, for life does not have only a yesterday, nor is it explained by reducing today to yesterday. Life has also a tomorrow, and today is understood only when we can add to our knowledge of what was yesterday the beginnings of tomorrow.

Carl Jung, On the Psychology of the Unconscious

Man can suffer only a certain amount of culture without injury.

Ibid

About

This is a living tree of poems.

Poems grow out of other poems, like organisms, and out of the life of their author. Cut off from their source, they wither and die. Here is your chance to view them in their natural habitat.

The name "culturing" comes from Darwin. In "On the Origin of Species", he notices differences between birds kept "under culture" and birds left in the wild. The phrase "under culture" troubles me. I don't want to be like those birds under culture. I want to participate in culture, to make culture, to be a culturer. Thus "culturing" is my manifesto.

I wouldn't mind hearing from you. Please spread these poems far and wide.

There is more to come. Welcome to my life's work in progress.

Contents

10 August 2010 44
•• The man who knows 44

22 October 2010 45
•• As I Wander 45

29 January 2014 47
•• Modern times 47

24 February 2014 48
••• Progress 48

05 March 2014 49
•• Birth 49

14 April 2014 50
• Perspicuity (For Example) 50

24 July 2014 51
••• Song of Sophia 51

05 February 2015 53
•• Somnambulance 53

04 April 2015 55
•• Songs of Youth 55

07 May 2015 56
••• Romance Revisited 56

29 May 2015 58
•• Out of Doors 58

04 July 2015 59
•• Inner Harbor 59

15 July 2015 60
•• There is too much noise 60

20 July 2015 61
• I have wandered streets 61

26 July 2015 62

•• There are no words 62

20 August 2015 63
• My people 63

24 October 2015 64
••• Fragments Shored Against Ruin 64

29 November 2015 68
• Egotism spreads 68

23 December 2015 69
• If there are still men 69

24 December 2015 70
•• Megalopolis 70

14 January 2016 71
••• Scents of the Divine 71

18 January 2016 72
••• The Choir 72

26 January 2016 74
• The Great Mortality (Famine, Death, Rebirth) 74

05 March 2016 75
• The Absurd 75

02 April 2016 76
•• Parting 76

02 May 2016 77
•• Song 77

04 August 2016 79
• The bigness of the sky 79

06 August 2016 80
••• For an Old Lover 80
•• The End of Suffering 81
••• Valediction to Images 82

08 September 2016 83
• The day is dark 83

22 September 2016 84
••• If God Speaks, He Whispers 84
••• Another ending 85
••• Child you are the water 86
• Notes for Mr. Pound 87
••• Only Begin 88
•• Three Rivers 89
• Why write poetry 90

17 October 2016 91
••• Longing 91
•• The End of Time 92

28 October 2016 93
••• A poem 93
• After the Fall 94

03 November 2016 95
•• children of terror 95

02 January 2017 96
•• Out to Plant a Garden 96

06 April 2017 97
•• Countrified 97
•• The Bird in the Glue Trap 98
•• The New Science 99

25 April 2017 100
•• The New World 100

28 April 2017 101
•• Dawn 101

22 May 2017 102
• The Muse 102

24 May 2017 103
••• Made In America 103

12 September 2017 105
•• Belonging 105
•• To Men on Women 106

22 September 2017 107

•• Open onto other things 107

16 October 2017 108
•• A silence that no one has heard 108
••• Out came a cry 109

01 April 2018 110
••• A walk through a graveyard 110

21 April 2018 111
•• Aftermath 111
• Hot and Cold 112
••• The Secrets of Country Living 113

10 May 2018 114
•• Naomi 114

01 August 2018 115
•• Mysteries 115

19 August 2018 116
• Bird sits still 116

11 September 2018 117
•• Terror 117

02 October 2018 119
•• Lone wolf howls 119

24 October 2018 120
• All Has Been Forsaken 120

09 November 2018 121
• History 121
• One More Cave 122

14 November 2018 123
•• “Romance Revisited,” revisited 123

13 December 2018 124
• America (Northeast) 124

31 December 2018 125
• Academia 125

04 January 2019 126

• Being 126

13 January 2019 127
•• America or Aristotle 127
••• Nixon at the Threshold of the Lincoln Memorial 128

19 January 2019 129
• For the Love of Aristotle 129

29 January 2019 130
•• Hole 130
•• Milton Usurped 131

14 February 2019 132
•• On Nothing 132

02 March 2019 133
•• On Wading 133

05 March 2019 134
•• King Henry in the Playpen 134
• Not Without Reason 135

09 March 2019 136
•• The New Bird 136

27 March 2019 137
••• I have withdrawn from the world 137

31 March 2019 138
••• Rosie 138

11 April 2019 139
•• Mother and Son 139

30 April 2019 140
•• Marriage 140

05 May 2019 141
•• Sainthood 141

06 May 2019 142
••• The Lady 142

13 May 2019 143
• Against Ice Sculptures 143

11 June 2019 144
• Go not alone 144

28 June 2019 145
••• Crickets 145

07 July 2019 146
•• White Shade 146

09 July 2019 147
• For the Innocent 147

22 July 2019 148
•• Beatrice Among the Daffodils 148
• The Lady Sings for Hobbes 149

03 August 2019 150
• In the Beginning 150
•• Lady in the Dark 151
• The Lady Speaks of Progress 152

10 August 2019 153
••• Lady in the Temple 153

22 August 2019 154
• Twilight Over Virginia 154

29 August 2019 155
••• Lincoln's Memory 155

07 September 2019 158
••• The Lady Knows 158

24 September 2019 159
••• After Lincoln 159

25 September 2019 160
•• Tradition 160

05 October 2019 161
••• Sara 161

13 October 2019 162
•• Kindling 162

19 October 2019 163

- What it is 163

25 October 2019 164
- The Great Motion 164

22 April 2020 165
••• Homecoming 165

14 September 2020 166
••• The Enduring and Unchanging Dao 166

07 January 2021 167
- Heidegger in Japan 167

14 February 2021 168
•• Planting Time 168

05 March 2021 169
- Chrysalis 169

01 April 2021 170
- Flowering 170

13 April 2021 171
••• The wind in the leaves 171

20 April 2021 172
••• All the Tender Pathos 172

28 April 2021 174
•• An Example 174

01 May 2021 175
- The Shroud 175

07 May 2021 176
••• Power 176

09 May 2021 177
- Terror Remembered 177

28 May 2021 180
- All past times are terrible 180

30 June 2021 181
- Predication 181

09 July 2021 182
••• Old House 182

09 September 2021 183
•• Wandering Sheep 183

13 September 2021 184
• Making Sausage 184

28 October 2021 185
•• Lost Forest 185

01 November 2021 186
••• Shattered Image, Fallen Breast 186

07 November 2021 187
•• Love is made 187

10 November 2021 188
•• Beyond Power 188

25 December 2021 189
•• Phenomenology of Science 189

24 January 2022 190
••• Words 190

07 March 2022 191
•• Phalanx of Mind 191

08 March 2022 192
••• Who is in charge here 192

23 March 2022 193
• Saving Earth 193

03 April 2022 194
• After Reagan 194
• Things Themselves 195

12 April 2022 196
••• Technology 196
•• The Winds of Change 197

21 April 2022 198
•• Far Away 198

30 April 2022 199
• Unauthorized thinking 199

02 May 2022 200
• Electricity 200

04 May 2022 201
• Streets I Never Knew 201

31 May 2022 202
••• What calls for poetry? 202

06 June 2022 203
•• Let Go 203

14 June 2022 204
•• Science and Technology 204

18 June 2022 205
•• Fading Feeling 205

19 June 2022 206
••• Light 206

21 June 2022 207
•• Mulch by the Scoop 207

23 June 2022 208
•• Myth at Twilight 208

28 June 2022 209
•• Lyceum 209
• Virgin Queens 210

11 July 2022 211
••• Belly of the Whale 211
•• Emerge 213
•• Liberty and Justice 214
••• Near Mountains 215
•• Who are they? 216

16 July 2022 217
•• Beatific Visions 217
•• Reasonable Measure 218
•• Socrates and Confucius 219

••• Theodicy 220

21 July 2022 221

•• A Platonist declares 221

••• Industrial Man 222

02 August 2022 224

•• The New Frontier 224

20 August 2022 225

• Craftsman 225

• On this rock 226

31 August 2022 227

• Aletheian 227

••• At Sea 228

••• Feet of Rain 230

• Hitler's Bunker 231

••• Lady in the Rain 232

•• Mingled Being 233

••• Such Surprises Must Be 234

•• The Ground is Lava 235

••• Thinking Deeply 236

••• Too Playful 237

12 September 2022 238

•• Old Flames 238

••• One of Us 239

•• Over the Atlantic 240

•• Sandcastles 241

21 September 2022 242

••• Afterthought on the Romantics 242

• Gettysburg 243

14 October 2022 245

•• All Silence 245

• As Ever 246

•• Time 247

25 October 2022 248

•• No Reason 248

• Risible Time 249

04 November 2022 250

- After Tomorrow 250
- It is not for me 251

29 November 2022 252
- No Entry Beyond 252
- Thing in Progress 253
- The Gospel According to Us 254
- Untested Ways 255
- No Will to Deceive 256
- Uncertain Times 257
- After "A Late Walk" by Robert Frost 258
- Freedom's End 259
- Persuasion 260
- Darkness Becomes You 261
- History 262
- Crimson Days in the Depths of Time 263
- In Any Case 264
- Ave Maris Stella 265
- Why Reason? 266
- Hegel 267

15 December 2022 268
- Back to the Mines 268
- Why Obey? 269
- You Are The Way 270
- To Tell This To You, or Changing of the Gods 271
- Spring Cleaning 272
- Vortex Afterglow 273
- Compromise 274
- Marxists 275
- In Memory 276

17 January 2023 277
- Elite Waters 277
- Horizons 278
- Slumber Much Better 279
- Specimens 280
- Wait For Another 281
- Think Not Absolutely 282
- As Life May Yet Be 283
- Sick With Struggle 284
- Strangers 285

21 February 2023 286

•• Emptiness That None Can Understand 286
•• Rest Unassured 287
•• Nutrition by Faith Alone 288
•• Dwindle 289
• The Promise of the Lady 290
• Like No Angel 291
• A more tolerant order 292
•• Night Sweats of the American Dream 293
• The Quest for the Immortal Self 294
• The Sound a Plant Makes 295

20 March 2023 296
•• Ahura Mazda (the Question Remains) 296
•• The Throne of Cyrus 297
• Come Again 298
••• The Drums of Alexander 299
•• Small All the Same 300
• Unfriendly 301
• The Realm of Reason 302
• So Very Greek 303
• Larger Accomplishments (Pragmatism) 304
•• As She Will 305
••• Not even sure who to ask 306
•• Saving Daylight 307
•• Plain and True 308

26 April 2023 309
•• At Eleusis 309
••• If He Would Speak Today 310
•• Some Natures 311
•• What time is this 312
•• On Whose Authority 313
•• Sources 314
•• The Question of Democracy 315
•• Something About Plato 316
•• Who are we? 317
•• culmination 318
•• The Way of the Night 319
• Little Bird 320
•• Good Eyes 321
•• Untold Misery 322
• Wallow 323
• Duty 324

•• Some Other 325
•• The Protestant 326
•• Contrition 327
••• The Scientist 328
•• Stop the Bombing 329
•• Monotheism 330
••• Menagerie of Rules 331
••• The Thin Veil 332
••• They May Be Right 333
•• Where They Can See You 334
••• Wait, Think, Speak 335

16 June 2023 336
•• Banishing Night 336
•• Eudaimonia 337
••• Some Men 338
••• Rolling Waves 339
••• Corporate Man 340
•• Habits 341
••• Uncivilized After All These Years 342
•• Pain That One Calls Home 343
•• Saying New Sayings 344
•• Both How and Why 345
•• Ideal Republic 346
••• Flying Lessons 347
•• No Single Force 348
•• Dreams 349
• Better Judgment 350
• What Surprises Remain 351
•• Blank Space 352

28 July 2023 353
• Wouldn't it be nice 353
• Clarity is like Death 354
•• Inexorably Ever After 355
• Spiraling 356
•• This Way Forever 357
• In the depths of it 358
•• Bind 359
•• Moldy Thinking 360
•• To Even Have a Dream 361
• I have known women 362
•• A Raid on Delphi 363

••• Arrival 364
••• In the Field 365
••• Where it Belongs 366
••• The House of the Dead 367

17 August 2023 369
•• In this hour of wakening 369
•• We were always at war with nature 370
••• Leave Me 371
•• Westward Ticket 372
• Sources II 373
•• With Great Justice 374
•• All Those Ages Ago 375
• Trust or Freedom 376
••• Hitler's Grave 377

23 September 2023 378
••• Through All Our Fears 378
•• Rapt Futility 379
•• Walking the Line 380
• That which wants to be said 381
• Kennedy's Peace 382
•• A Typical Day 383
• We Silly Mammals 384
• Strangeness of the Ordinary 385
• Submission in Disguise 386
• Someone Tell Wittgenstein 387
••• Through the Horizon 388

29 October 2023 389
•• The Most Peaceful Stream 389
•• From Time to Time 390
• A New Way 391
••• Stronger Knowledge 392
•• The Abbey 393
•• Turning the Page 394
• Discard Them Already 395
••• Bones (How Things Stand) 396

23 November 2023 398
•• The House of the Dead II 398
•• Doctor of Words 399
•• Still More 400
••• Origins II 401

••• Ready For Change 402
••• By Example 405
• Crossroads 406
•• Pliable by Nature 407

18 December 2023 408
• Red Tinge on East Star 408
• Home From Elysium 409
•• Out on the Frontier 410
•• Who Does the Promising? 411
• More Than One Power 412
••• To the Girl Behind the Pharmacy Counter 413
••• Vesta 414
•• Touch 415
•• Rule By Consent 416
••• Into the Sea 417
•• Barrel of Monkeys 418

12 January 2024 419
• I speak for the people 419
•• Doubt 420
••• The Ship of Rome 421
• All Man Has Been 424
• It may also help you 425
• Beyond the Locked Door 426
••• Savage Dew 427
•• Life Over Victory 428
••• Never What It Used To Be 429

23 February 2024 430
•• Response to a Query 430
•• The Flux 431
••• Carefully 432
•• More Authentic 434
•• Through the Unknown 435
•• New Healing 436
•• True Healing 437
•• A Time is Coming 438
• No More 439
••• If I Yearn For More 440

22 March 2024 441
••• The Task of Man 441
••• Machine State of Mind 442

•• Seeking Authorization 443
•• Speak It Out Loud 444
•• Whatever Comes 445
• Wait For Me 446
••• All Must Again Be Decided 447
••• Anti-Nature 448
•• In Our Midst 449
•• Upon the Dawn 450
• Cultural Marxism 451

12 June 2024 452
•• Set to Expire 452
•• All as One 453
• A Relief 454
•• Sending Signs 455
• Believe in the Dawn 456
•• Good Enough 457
• Itself as a Prize 458

27 July 2024 459
• Tethered to Freedom 459
•• As All Time Passes By 460
•• Surely We Know Best 461
••• Things Unseen Though Known 462
•• Justice 463
•• The Wind and My Place in It 465
•• A Start 466
•• Assassination 467

11 August 2024 468
•• The Fulcrum of Time 468
•• Kindle the Flame 469
• Somewhere Other Than Belief 470
• Good Left Undone 471
• A Warning 472
••• She's There 473
•• Where You Are Stepping 474
•• The Clock 475
•• On the Verge 476
• Everyone's Wrong 477
••• Ancient Masters 478

26 October 2024 479
••• Plants in Their Soil 479

••• Nothing but Chaos 480
••• Dignity 481
•• The Source of Most Problems 482
• Dreaming 483
• The Discipline of Virtue 484
••• The Loss of Justice 485

27 October 2024 486
• Beasts 486
••• Caught in the Gears 487
• We didn't move 488
•• Genius 489
••• Many, Instead of One 490
• No Leg Up 491
• Journeying Ones 492
• Less Imposing Principles 493
• Care Again 494
• A culture in which we can thrive 495
• Out there in history 496

18 January 2025 497
• Pilgrims 497
•• C'est la vie 498
••• Now and Then 499
• From Beyond 500
•• Light Bent by Earth 501
• Never Been Wrong 502
• One More Line 503
• One of Those Days 504
• Keener Insight and Better Plans 505
• Think with Me 506

08 March 2025 507
•• The Form of the Matter 507
•• Think Harder 508
••• Dream Wisely 509
••• Outside the Law 510
•• Hardly two millennia 511
•• New Hearts 512
••• More alarming by the day 513
••• All Too Soon 514
•• Lord will it also be sweet 515
••• A Time for Beginning 516

05 April 2025	517
••• Ever Ready to Blossom Again	517
•• Hard to Explain	518
30 May 2025	519
•• All Rise	519
•• The Curtain Falls	520
•• Yeats' Footsteps	521
•• Thinking Begins	522
• Somewhere, Somehow	523
••• You Carry It Always	524
• Nothing	525
• How Much Time	526
•• Many Smiles	527
•• Corners of Strangeness	528
•• Had You Been There	529
•• On the Side of the Earth	530
•• Labor Pains	531
02 July 2025	532
•• That Hollow Moon	532
•• I could go to her	533
•• Woken by Storms	534
•• Just One Moment More	535
•• Passion chokes out thinking	536
•• The Presence of Love	537
•• How much love	538
•• Daylight	539
•• Make my dreams true	540
••• As Only You Can	541
• They prefer the abuse	542
01 August 2025	543
•• The one who will understand	543
• Less perfect than it seemed	544
•• Vassals of Despair	545
• Farewell, Isis	546
••• Growth	547
17 August 2025	548
•• Angry, Solid Blue	548
••• Ariadne	549
•• Marriage Bed	550
•• Love is a flame	551

• Broken Wing 552
••• Face the Day 553
•• Plant It 554
•• Civilization for the First Time 555
•• No Way Out 556
• Love conquers little 557
••• All that could be lost again 558
•• If tomorrow will be any better 559
•• How to Garden 560

27 August 2025 561
••• What Waiting Means 561
• Rest and Recover 563
•• Smoothie 564
•• The Other Side 565
•• Wander on Stormy Seas 566

07 September 2025 567
•• I could do no other 567
••• Quiet, Quiet River 568
••• Tools in the Soil 569
•• To be me 570
•• Connections Worth Having 571
• Nothing Changes 572
••• Short of a Miracle 573
•• Calmly Without Fear 574
• New Dawn 575
• That Line 576
•• Flood (Too Much Speaking) 577
• The Present 578
• Miseducation 579
••• Shared Dream 580
•• Excavation 581

26 September 2025 582
•• Few and Far Between 582
•• Beatrice and Penelope 583
•• Scheduled Procreation 584
••• Wane and Dwindle 585
•• Bones on the Inside 586
•• Whatever This Call Entails 587
• The Center (Contra Hegel) 589
• The Hard Rock of Reality 590

••• A Home of My Own Design 591

12 October 2025 593
•• Plurality 593
•• Hope 594
•• The Pain of Knowledge 595
••• Vesta, Return 596
• Wisely in Spite of Ignorance 597
• Another Destination 598
• Decision 599
• The hollow part of me 600
••• Make Me More Worthy 601
• When Called to Build 602
••• Not All is Lost 603
••• Where True Power Lies 604

24 October 2025 606
•• Amidst the shadows 606
•• Help and Not Harm 607
•• Blossom 608
•• Maybe for the Last Time 609
••• Love Must Come True 611
•• Envelop 612

29 October 2025 613
••• Chiaroscuro Girl 613
•• Silent Repose 614
••• The Girl and the Stag 615
• Dark Abyss 616
•• Not Meant For This World 617
• For Once 618

06 November 2025 619
••• A Resonant Ordeal 619
• Not Quite At Peace 620
••• Elsewhere 621
•• Not What I Hoped 622
•• Who You Are (Out of the Chrysalis) 623
•• The Dream of the Birds 624
•• Opened Door 625
•• A Blend of Struggles 626
••• An Ear to the Whole 627
•• Not Too Soon 628
•• Hardly Beginning 629

•• Both True and False 630
••• As She Was 631

16 November 2025 632
••• Phoenix 632
•• When a man loves 633
•• Not Sole Composer 634
•• Calling 635
••• Her Sky (New At Last) 636
•• Through her I see 637
••• Cracks Forming 638
• The soil we have tilled 639
••• A Seat at the Table 640
• So Was I 641
•• This And No Other 642
•• One Too Few 643
•• Coauthor 644
••• Meant For Your Ears 645

20 November 2025 646
•• Another Life Beckons 646
•• Only in the Waiting 647
• Just Let Me Know 648
•• In This Field 649
•• Spelunking 650
•• Love Calls 651

27 November 2025 652
•• Extended Silence 652
•• Approaching Song 653
•• Spin Gently 654
•• The Ring (What Your Desire Is For) 655
•• Sense of the Darkness 656
•• Why and How 657
• Is This Love? 658
•• Just For Us 659
•• I Know How You Feel 660
•• Rising Halfway 661
•• What Your Longing Requires 662
••• Teach Me How To Love You 663

05 December 2025 664
•• Not Today 664
••• Live Wire 665

•• Puella Aeterna 666
•• Another Hand 667
• No Longer Sand 668
••• If Any Vigor Remains 669
•• No Matter How Civilized 671
•• Debut 672
• Shadow (Wherever Light Shines) 673
••• Twin Eagles 674
••• Make Ourselves Anew 675
• Your Eyes 676

09 December 2025 677
• Love Can Be Done 677
• Time Is Coming Soon 678
• Will You Come? 679
• The Punished Become The Punishers 680
• It Takes Two 681
••• Forever To Yourself Be True 682
•• New Moon Phase 683

12 December 2025 684
•• Naked But Unashamed 684
• Seed 685
••• The Troubles of Love 686
••• Only Your Heart 687
• Come and See 688
•• The One That Deserves To Be Heard 689
• Calypso 690

14 December 2025 691
••• Plant in the Dark 691
• What's Best For You 692
••• Carried Away 693
••• Two Black Sheep 695

16 December 2025 696
•• Getting There 696
•• Am I Right? 698
• Fetch It 699
• No Other Way 700
• Clothes Back On 701
•• Can't Be Put Out 702
• Can't Wait 703

18 December 2025	704
••• The View Is Lovely	704
•• Possibilities	705
••• The Eternal Dance	706
•• They Don't Even Know	707
•• No Day But Today	708
•• Starting Again	709
• Not So Useful Anymore	710
• As If Love Can't Be Questioned	711
•• Irrigation	712
••• Dying Roses	713
•• Open Hearts	715
• To Rest At All	716
• Worth Something	717
•• Farewell	718
21 December 2025	719
• Touch and Soothe	719
• Seeds of You	720
• Trust and Open Dialogue	721
• Burning Burning Burning	722
•• Schedule	723
••• Handkerchief	724
•• From Afar	725
•• I believe	726
••• Feet Firmly Planted on Earth	727
•• Finally Alive	729
23 December 2025	730
•• Dual Polarity	730
• The Central Dream	731
•• Talking To Myself	732
•• Deciding What To Do	733
• Demonstration	734
• Jungle	735
26 December 2025	736
•• Classes Begin	736
•• Father Knows Best	737
••• A Signal in Smoke	738
•• Our Next Lives	740
• Somewhere She Smiles	741
•• Can It Make Us Happy?	742

••• This Secret Warmth 743
••• Quarter Moon 744
••• Worth Asking 745
•• Thorns and Briars 746
••• Life Is Strange 747

28 December 2025 748
•• Synchronicities 748
•• Matinée 749
•• Struggle, Promethea 750
• If I Can 751
•• Yet To Be Named 752
••• Toward Some Ithaca 753

30 December 2025 754
••• Lark (She Could Fly) 754
• Ghosts 755
• Standard Repertoire? 756
• Lost Voice 757
•• What You Were Feeling 758
• How Are You 759
• Pull Me In 760
•• Like A Fever 761
••• Drawing Blood 762
••• Abundant Fuel 764

01 January 2026 765
• Critical Velocity 765
• The Dance of Life 766
•• Uncharted Waters 767
••• Eccentricities 768

08 January 2026 770
•• Waking, Dreamlike 770
•• Ariadne II 771
• Friend To Nothing 772
•• Nearly Bound 773
•• Live By Dying 774
• Governed, Not Destroyed 775
• Ebb and Flow 776
•• Flirting With Danger 777
• Tell Me About Yourself 778
• Love Left Unsaid 779

13 January 2026	780
• Two Together	780
••• Overflowing	781
•• Two Birds	782
•• The Other Half	783
• The Path of an Insect	784
•• Crown Jewel	785
•• Not Without Fuel	786
•• From The Tropics	787
•• Motivated	788
•• Regular Release	789
•• Without Fear And Trembling	790
••• Come What May	791
•• Beyond Me	792
16 January 2026	793
• Strong Enough Now	793
• A New Here	794
••• Hors D'Oeuvres	795
•• Eyes Open	796
• Remember The Ladies	797
••• Soon Will I Love You In Return	798
•• Much More Down Below	799
•• Mere Dream	800
••• Practicing	801
•• Make It Last	802
18 January 2026	803
••• Paper Tower	803
22 January 2026	805
••• Blossom II	805
• Vessel	806
• Intuition	807
• Katana	808
• Inner Beauty	809
• How Much	810
• Through This Experience	811
•• Room For Doubts	812
•• Obvious By Now	813
• Thing of Eternity	814
•• Field	815
•• The Night of the Pigtails	816

25 January 2026 817

•• The Sexual Development of Exceptional People 817

• Prepared To Make Good 818

• Entropy 819

••• Presence 820

•• Odds of Success 822

•• New Mountain 823

•• Access 824

•• Very Lucky 825

27 January 2026 826

•• Healing 826

•• Feeling Dry (A Pain From Long Ago) 827

•• Contra Kant 831

•• Culture the Past 832

31 January 2026 833

• Into The Abyss 833

• Free Will 834

•• Marriage Bed II 835

•• How I Hear It 836

• Good Fruits 837

• Waiting 838

••• What You Are Fighting For 839

• Heights Worth Exploring 840

•• Fill In The Blanks 841

•• Evil Afoot 842

• Children 843

•• The Beast In Man 844

• Labor of Love 845

••• Hair on Fire 846

• Only As Humans 847

• Without Losing Yourself 848

••• Anatomy of Shadows 849

02 February 2026 850

•• At The Same Time 850

•• Sweetheart 851

•• Fertility Exam 852

05 February 2026 853

• Sufficiently Motivated 853

•• Memorandum 854

• Mysteries 855

•• Babylon 856
•• Walk Alone 857
• I Will Live Well 858
• Tired 859
•• Venus 860
• Vanda 861
•• Strength 863
• The One You Will Be 864
• Thorns 865
••• Only to Strengthen 866
• Cleverness 867
•• Letting Go 868
• Tragic Figures 869
• Growing Up 870
•• Much In Common 871
•• Whole, Complete 872

07 February 2026 873
•• Cruelty 873
•• The Reason For Discipline 874
•• Second Nature 875
•• Extraordinary Discipline 876
•• The Habit of Loving 877
•• Hard to Tell 878
• Parts of Vanda 879
• Catalyst and Observer 881
•• The Pain of Reality 882
•• Who You Would Like To Be 883

10 February 2026 884
•• Perhaps Not 884
••• Hook 885
• Imagine 886
• Fire 887
• Rupture 888
• Stand Up For Yourself 889
•• Holy Brew 890
•• Ruling Rod 891
• Keep It Sharp 892
• Surgeon or Assassin 893
•• Blaze 894
••• Next to the Flame 895
•• Black Sheep 896

• Sex 897

11 February 2026 898

•• The Burdens of Pregnancy 898
•• Resist Nature 899
• Falling 900
•• Real Strength 901
• Not Rational 903
• Burn 904

14 February 2026 905

• Sexual Awakening 905
•• Teachers' Lounge 906
•• Let Your Body Explain 907
•• Sweetheart Like You 908
•• A Moon of Surprising Size 909
• Eternal Winter 910
•• Vulnerable Narcissist 911
•• Stronger Still 912
•• Blaze II 913
• Whitman 914

16 February 2026 915

•• More Than Power 915
•• At the Entrance 916
• No Ken At All 917
•• Do What I Say 918
•• Forgive My Sternness 919
•• Inexperienced 920
••• Strength II 921
•• Master/Slave Dialectic 922
••• Velocity 923

21 February 2026 924

•• Cruelty II 924
• Lonelier 926
• Better to Know 927
•• Messy Heart 928
•• Dance of Hope and Doubt 929
•• Succubus 930
• New Future Begins 931
• The Darkest Possibilities 932
•• Wild Stallion 933
•• Innocence 934

••• Inside You, Dormant 935
••• The Hard Road In Between (Madonna/Whore) 936

25 February 2026 938
•• Closed Door 938
•• Thomas, Not Vanda 939
• Heloise 940
•• Stable Hearth 941
• Body/Mind 942
• Altar 943
• Respect 944
•• Lovers' Bond 945
•• Repressed Lover 946
• Any Longer 947
• Transformation 948
• Labyrinth 949
•• Journey of the Self 950
• Touched 951
•• Bitterness 952
•• Playing with Fire 953
• Worth a Try 954
•• Phony 955
• Girl Who Cried Love 956
• Game Over 957
•• Fantasy 958
• Dealbreaker 959
•• New Beginning 960
• Pain 961
•• Never One-Sided 962
•• Final Diagnosis 963
• Just Time 964
• You Have Helped Me 965
• Self-love 966
•• Parting Words 967
• Epilogue 968

27 February 2026 969
• New Clarity 969
•• Seed of Love 970
• Shadows 971
••• House of the Dead III 972
•• The Rebuke of Venus 973
•• Lover and Guide 974

•• A New Day 975
•• Transference 976
•• Friend in Need 977

02 March 2026 978
•• Unyielding Peace 978
• Initiation 979
• Youthful Infatuation 980
•• I went to her 981
•• Something Serious 982
•• Hollow Moon Rises 983
••• The Lady Will Not Slumber 984
•• Sophia Again 985

03 March 2026 986
•• Paper Tower II 986
•• Worth Fighting For 987

05 March 2026 988
•• How we grow sane 988
•• Turbulence 989

07 March 2026 990
• Strange Predicament 990
•• For So Long I've Dreamed 991
•• Gaseous At Last 992
•• If I Could 993
•• Full Gravity 994
••• First Dance 995
•• Raphael's Madonna 996

10 March 2026 997
• When God Dies 997
•• Your Future 998
• Floating Castle 999
• Send in the Cavalry 1000
• Legion of Incubi 1001
•• Half Mad, Half Civilized 1002
•• Uncomfortable Peace 1003
•• The Game of Life 1004
•• At the Matinée 1005
•• Peeking Eyes 1006
• Woman Now 1007
•• Calypso Returns 1008

• Some Penelope Awaits	1009
11 March 2026	1010
•• Better Care	1010
• Only Shadow	1011
•• A Woman You Admire	1012
•• All Else Could Be Forgiven	1013
12 March 2026	1014
•• Needed Alarm	1014
• Care For Yourself	1015
• Already Thinking of Love	1016
••• Paper Tower III	1017
•• Bitter Taste	1018
13 March 2026	1020
•• Parting Words Reconsidered	1020
• Participation Mystique	1022
•• On the Meaning of Blue at the Matinée	1023
• Strange That I Do Not Regret	1024
15 March 2026	1025
• Grains of Salt	1025
•• Take These To Heart	1026
•• Truce	1027
• The only thing left	1028
16 March 2026	1029
•• L'amour n'est pas	1029
23 March 2026	1030
• Earnest Contemplation	1030
•• Poor Man's Lover	1031
••• The Mad Goddess	1032
• Wayfarer	1033
•• From Place to Place	1034
• Warm Light	1035
•• Paper Tower IV	1036
••• Theseus Says Goodbye	1037
31 March 2026	1038
••• The Mad Goddess II	1038
• Inventory	1039
• Still Point of Wholeness	1040

•• Anima 1041
••• Look Inward 1042
• Cities Are Natural 1043
• Waiting to Heal 1044
• Whoever You Are 1045
•• Uncertain Certainties 1046
• Anima Dialogues 1047
• A Man at Last 1048
•• The Simple Self 1049
• Where Daylight Touches Earth 1050
• For What Purpose 1051
••• Dig For Some Hope 1052
•• Soft Inner Knowledge 1053
•• Home Right Here 1054
•• Inside You All Along 1055

07 April 2026 1056
••• The Goal 1056
•• Narcissism 1057
••• This One Lesson 1058
• Congregation 1059
•• The Work of the Anima 1060
••• Offerings 1061
• Sturdy Example 1062
•• Finding Sophia 1063
• Why Not Both 1064
• Truth or Power 1065
• What You Offer 1066
• Head Held High 1067
• What Are They? 1068
•• Firm Beginning 1069
• Contempt 1070

13 April 2026 1071
• Seeking Shelter 1071
• Token 1072
•• Ready 1073
•• Pain, Real Enough 1074
• Helen 1075
•• Rarely Tempted Again 1076
••• Preferring Penelope 1077
••• The Promises of Birth 1078
• Spelunking II 1080

•• Blanche	1081
• Full Strength	1082
15 April 2026	1083
•• Needed Inner Work	1083
•• Pile of Handkerchiefs	1084
• Fire and Earth	1085
•• Paper Tower V	1086
•• Caretaking	1087
•• What Waiting Meant	1088
•• Some Happy Song	1090
20 April 2026	1091
• Scattershot	1091
• New Vitality	1092
• Dreaming	1093
••• Find Your Way Home	1094
•• Animus Possession	1095
•• Mild Bitterness	1096
•• New Adventures	1097
• Burn What Must Burn	1098
• Beneath the Willow Bough	1099
•• Tell Me I'm Pretty	1100
•• Beyond Good and Evil	1101
•• Anima Song	1102
•• Postscript to Venus in Fur	1103
•• Dionysus at the Matinée	1104
01 May 2026	1105
••• Beatrice Laughs	1105
• Make the Growing Things Grow	1106
•• Integrate the Shadow	1107
•• Hero's Journey	1108
• Solitary Bird	1109
• New Self	1110
•• Searching for Occupancy	1111
•• Start at the Center	1112
• Here on Earth and Now	1113
08 May 2026	1114
• New Opportunities	1114
••• Eudaimonia	1115
••• For the First Time	1116
•• Ursa Major	1117

•• Hetaera 1118
• Not Even Rebirth 1119
• Energies Flow 1120
•• Trauma Bonding 1121
•• Love Yourself 1122

14 May 2026 1123
•• This and No Other As Well 1123
• Against the Cold 1124
•• Wrong Turn 1125
•• Better Things 1126
• Who is the One 1127
•• Ghosts From Another Room 1128
•• Children of Earth and Sky 1129
• Savage Humanity 1130
• Fuller Integration 1131
•• The Alchemy of Ourselves 1132
•• Light and Shadow 1133
•• Female Deity 1134

21 May 2026 1136
• Venus and Apollo 1136
••• Love Waits 1137
•• This Holy Place 1138

27 May 2026 1139
•• Truer, Higher, Deeper 1139
•• Openness to Pain 1141
• Motivation 1142
•• Christian Siren 1143
• The Right Occasion to Strike 1144
•• Unveiling 1145
• Another New Day 1146
•• Strength for Love 1147
• Hiccupping Whiskey 1149
•• That Door 1150

02 June 2026 1151
•• The Dark Lady 1151
•• In Open Air 1152
• Codependency 1153
•• The Purpose of Power 1154
••• Not the Sky 1155
•• Sacred Fire 1156

12 June 2026	1157
•• A Glimpse	1157
•• Love to Believe	1158
• Man of Peace	1159
• Journey Begins	1160
• Glass Castle	1161
••• Out of Myself	1162
••• The Stag Returns	1163
30 June 2026	1164
• Loss of Power	1164
•• Some Brighter Day	1165
• Only Together	1166
•• Stop Being Human	1167
•• The Sacred Feminine	1168
•• Even In Our Own Hearts	1169
•• In the Mind Alone	1170
•• Her Cool Touch	1171
•• Ongoing Flow of Dreams	1172
07 July 2026	1173
•• A Bed Neglected	1173
• Troika	1174
••• Show Me the Goddess	1175
•• Always	1176
•• Stardust	1177
•• Jesus Again	1178
•• Life of a Certain Kind	1179
13 July 2026	1180
•• Too Many Nightingales	1180
•• Meaning	1181
• The Man Who Speaks Plainly	1182
27 July 2026	1183
• I Would	1183
••• She Stands For Something	1184
•• Two Lives	1185
••• Sacred Candle	1186
•• Whence We Have Come	1187
•• Through Sacrifice	1188
•• The Real Thing	1189
• Heaven and Hell	1190
•• A Sudden Joy	1191

29 July 2026	1192
•• She Waits As She Waits	1192
• Come Again, Vesta	1193
•• Encounter For Solo Violin	1194

03 August 2026	1195
••• Adagio Romance	1195
•• Searching For You	1196
• Not Out of the Woods	1197
•• Jesus Calls	1198
• Forbidden Fruit	1199
•• Another Me	1200
•• The Canyon of Life and Death	1201
•• Finding Herself	1202
•• Thanks	1203
•• Dark Passion	1204

10 August 2026	1205
•• The End of It	1205
•• Heaven's Feigned Bliss	1206
• Nothing Says I Love You	1207
•• Flying Lessons II	1208
• Under the Sweetest Desire	1209
• If Not Hers	1210
•• Seeds of a Dying Rose	1211
• Sweet Sophia	1212
••• Into Mortals	1213
•• Rainbow	1214
•• I don't want to let go	1215
• Think	1216
••• I Met the Goddess	1217

17 August 2026	1218
•• Dry No More (Real Enough)	1218
•• A Culminating of Destiny	1219
•• A Possible Salve	1220
•• Still Human Beings	1221
•• For Eternity	1222
•• The Right Person	1223
•• Saint Teresa	1224
•• We Have To Believe	1225
••• The Missing Piece	1226
•• Other Skies	1227

- In the Kitchen 1228
- The Habit of Silence 1229

29 August 2026 1230

- The Whole Story 1230
- Storm Still Raging 1231
- In Search of the Face 1232
- The Fragrance of Love 1233
- Predicament 1234
- Self and Stars 1235
- So Wrong 1236
- Machines and Their Servants 1237
- Act of Worship 1239
- The Answer 1240
- Perfect Timing 1241
- Mad Dog 1242
- Madness of Stars 1243
- Devourer 1244
- Toward Sunset 1245
- Ritual 1246
- Penelope's Bed 1247

08 September 2026 1248

- How Hope Feels 1248
- Patient Expectation 1249
- Somewhere New 1250
- How Close 1251
- Ravens 1252
- House of the Dead IV 1253
- The Call of the Wild 1254
- Erotic Domination 1255
- Disagreement 1256
- Home Once More 1257
- From Kananaskis 1258
- Still Burning 1259
- Waitress 1260
- Bikini Preview 1261
- Bikini Studies 1262
- Orpheus and Ariadne 1264

15 September 2026 1265

- What's Good For Them 1265
- Orpheus and Ariadne II 1266

••• Diminishing Love 1267
• All Poisoned 1268
••• Cruel Disregard 1269
••• Keep Wishing 1270
•• Puzzle 1271
••• Beating Heart 1272

28 September 2026 1273
•• Shared Dream II 1273
•• Sleeping Angels 1274
•• Homesteading 1275
•• Men and Women 1276
••• Awakening 1277
••• To the Girl on the Bus Tour in Banff 1278
••• In My Head 1279
•• Dwindling Light 1280
••• Unreal Happiness 1281
•• Dignity 1282
••• All Told 1283
• Slice 1284
•• Knead Through 1285
•• Dimwit 1286

07 October 2026 1287
•• Love Reimagined 1287
••• Dragon 1288
•• Meatloaf and Peas 1289
•• 'Mid the Pines 1290
• Fugue of Space and Mind 1291
••• Sliced One Last Time 1292
•• Insane Freedom 1293
• Shame 1294
•• Snare of Delilah 1295
••• Self-sacrifice 1296
••• We're All Traitors Now 1297
••• Ariadne's Shadow 1298
•• The Dance of Men and Women 1299
••• Vesta Still Answers 1300
•• anti-identity 1301
••• Four Birds 1302
•• Last Train 1303

15 October 2026 1304

••• Romance Revisited III 1304
• Who Knows Why 1306
•• Husk 1307
••• Shape of the Goddess 1308
••• Lady in the Temple II 1309
• In My Experience 1310
• Both 1311
••• Two Moons 1312
••• To the Girl in the Library 1313
•• Soothing Illusions 1314
••• Bottle 1315
••• Staring Still 1316
••• Remembering Well 1317
••• Holy Invitation 1318
•• Glance 1319
•• Beyond Words 1320
••• Negotiation 1321

24 October 2026 1322
•• Democracy 1322
•• Article of Faith 1323
••• Strange Breeze 1324
••• Inner Beloved 1325
••• Beatrice, Not Virgil 1326
•• Not Afraid 1327
••• Cold Disregard 1328
• Brown Hawk 1329
••• Call on Her 1330
•• You Still Are 1331
••• The Chase (She Who Flees) 1332
••• Starlady 1333
•• Well-Nourished Soil 1334
••• Abundance, Not Need 1335

The man who knows

10 August 2010
https://poems.culturing.net/2010/08/the-man-who-knows/

The man who knows
knows he doesn't know
and loves to sing to sing,

because as water flows and flows
he can't control a thing.

As I Wander

22 October 2010
https://poems.culturing.net/2010/10/as-i-wander/

As I wander down this path
I face my friend my fear,
and gaze upon the fading footsteps
that I followed here.

I find my heart quite trodden down
and no tranquility.
I find I'm not who I have been
I find I cannot see.

I gaze at beauty all around
but nothing moves my soul.
Backward forward endlessly,
it's out of my control.

I pause a moment, stop to feel
the rippling tree-born skin,
and wonder how I've come so far
but never seem to win.

I kick a stone and watch it tumble
down the mossy banks,
and for a moment I can almost hear it whisper thanks.

A bird in song gives me a start and whistles in my head.
Sharp I rise from battling,
so wounded yet undead.

But it is still my fate it seems to wrestle with my mind.
While others just enjoy the view
my thoughts are in a bind.

Alas to see and hear and feel,
this gift a lovely curse.
I wish, I wish I could ignore
And yet…it could be worse.

So I walk, I keep on walking
it's my only choice,
but if I write it, I am free;
this is my only voice.

Modern times

29 January 2014
https://poems.culturing.net/2014/01/modern-times/

Fog ungloves all skin
Amid a swirling superego.
Lovers lose the wisdom
to restrain a rough libido.

Holy water freezes
in the absence of a flame.
Knowledge fails to melt
a snow-capped plain.

Icemen master phenomenal things:
Darwin sneezes.
Einstein sings.

Progress

24 February 2014
https://poems.culturing.net/2014/02/progress/

“Soggy feet no more will creep along the droll, mud-wooden street.
The hills will linger, moaning.”

Ten by ten the honest men endeavor to bequeath, the end of younger things yet forming.

“Sulfur streaks and acid leaks
will simmer as the factory speaks, while Gaea gives to groaning.”

Sluggish men must hear it said that satellites are on the mend
and cast aside their stonings.

“Out will go the stonings,
and about will rise the loneliness
of dark and lamplit streets.”

One must seek atonement
for the backhills and their moaning,
but the workforce must ascend.

“Gaea’s unheard groaning will raise heartache for the droning of the melancholy steel entropic beat.”

One must think of honing
all these younger things now formed.

Paltry flecks of wisdom reach an end,
and there is laughter,
there is blood about the street.

Birth

05 March 2014
https://poems.culturing.net/2014/03/birth/

Birth is a slow and painful thing,
a tumult,
longing toward an end,
but staggering,
a shallow wake
of nascence,

For which death doth rend.

Perspicuity (For Example)

14 April 2014
https://poems.culturing.net/2014/04/perspicuity-for-example/

Note the indiscriminate vortices which haphazardly coax the vector
into misalignment,

Or the malignantly languorous
koala supping on divinities.

Song of Sophia

24 July 2014
https://poems.culturing.net/2014/07/song-of-sophia/

I. Akrasia

> When there were no depths, I was brought forth,
> When there were no springs abounding with water.

Time slipped, fell through black holes
to where I dwelt,

Stillborn in a rotting womb,
with histories untold.

I cut my own cord.

Day by day I played between Olympian plains
and Horeb,

Learning nothing,

For the ground had been well-tread
by tanks and wise men
teaching shadows

HEY
THIS JUST IN HEY
ERECTILE
DYSFUNCTION
HEY
LOOK KITTENS
HEY
BIKINIS
HEY
HAVE YOU SEEN
HEY
YOU THERE ??
HEY

I LOVE YOU.
HEY
LOVE ME <3
HEY

II. Nostoi

Does not wisdom cry out,
And understanding lift up her voice?

Thunder roars,
and as a man who pants for water
sees the rock break,

And sees the streams long dried by drought
begin to flow,
and drinks,

So too I flee the wasteland.

III. Paideia

To you, O men, I call,
and my voice is to the sons of men.

I gaze upon a field grown ripe with wheat and feel the warmth of rosy-fingered Dawn who has not failed to rise. I grip the scythe,

And take upon myself beginnings and their ends, and find this meaning sicut erat in principio.

Somnambulance

05 February 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/02/somnambulance/

Screams of seven thousand thousand haunt the seven decades
since they exited throat.

Auschwitz undigested sticks in throats generations removed.

We drift in echoes
that cannot be heard,
that pierce if heard.

We have not heard
but drift through echoes and time.

How does one cope?

Before the screams,
there was Darkness;
into Darkness came War,
and Fire began.

Who has not seen the faces?
Who has seen any face?

War consumes Light,
begetting Scream;
congeals to Shadow.

We are children of Abram.

Shadow is our womb,
coddling like a cocoon
of darkness.

Have we seen anything?

Battle has moved on.
Convictions make screams

and Law perishes.

Dare we impose?

We wax somnambulant,
Drifting through slumber.

They were like us,
those screaming, and those making them scream.

Fire burns at back of Mind,

And Blazeless, blinded,
We shiver, huddled in masses,
Fearing sparks.

Who will relearn the melody
under the memory,

The song which can bend fire
into warmth, and teach us hope?

Songs of Youth

04 April 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/04/songs-of-youth/

I remember being young,
Daffodils our trampled shrine.
I know how the songs are sung.

Music prances on the tongue.
Thought is out of mind.

Time itself is young,
And on its breast are hung Narcissi, taught to ripen
As the songs are sung,

For thus it must begin.

But if the songs are ever sung,
And if the blossoms hung
Are never hardened

We are young forever.
We are ever young.

Romance Revisited

07 May 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/05/romance-revisited/

Unsurprised when she appeared
atop the stair,
unsought and yet on cue,
I smiled.

There we were again.

More than sounds were heard,
more said than words
as we relieved the burn
that itched for all those years.

Something in that breeze
put love at ease,
and all those memories
in Sunday Best conceived
some reparation,
some demand.

But lives diverge,
conform to their courses,
drive towards their ends.

This, then, too must end.

But if we flee from time,
abandon all but dreams,

Elide the pulls of Jupiter
and Venus,

Would we weary of the world we'd made?

Must immortal Love's embrace ignore all time and place?

Rage for futility,
Rage for bleared horizons,

For rage itself,
which vanquishes sages,
and for the mortal dream.

But though to many moons I've sighed,
and though those eyes when met with mine still come to life to think of all that was
and what could be, it is not time.

Though it is right.

For time flows suddenly to exit youth.

Let us go then, you and I,
to die, and not trace ways across that sky
where the Immortals lie.

We belong implanted
where the bloom that Spring provides by Autumn flees, and we get by on hardened leaves.

Out of Doors

29 May 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/05/out-of-doors/

He crossed the doorway
one last time.

The hinge, grown stiff,
came to
and turned.

A vacuum grew
where air had been,

But more rushed in and clicked in place
from somewhere deep within.

Too long had he suffocated
under indoor air.

Outdoor paths
proposed some inspiration,

So he left,

And going door to door
curled way on way

And found that wind not quite as bold
as it had seemed within,

And he discerned
that inside is something worth grasping.

Inner Harbor

04 July 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/07/inner-harbor/

I spend my days inside,
my nights beside the water watching young things draw and quarter lives not yet their own.

This they call maturity,
this ever lack-of-surety,
to be out on my own, be big
but still not fill the throne.

There is too much noise

15 July 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/07/there-is-too-much-noise/

There is too much noise
inside, between walls,
reverberating through skulls

Which grow empty.

Is there not solace, rest
from Self?

Is there a balm?

I have heard of places,
heard tunes of theogony,
but is there any calm?

What remains are ashes,
What remains are gems?

And must we know the difference?

I've yet to stumble through Eden
but I've heard her song,
I've seen blossoms rise.

If there is a balm, it lies behind still-naked eyes.

I have wandered streets

20 July 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/07/i-have-wandered-streets/

I have wandered streets,
Each entrance blocked by blood of lamb,
And I have seen no faces.

These are empty places.

There are no words

26 July 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/07/there-are-no-words/

There are no words --
no words, but only sounds
with no meaning.

Is there a balm?
What is a balm?

Nowhere are we to find solace.
Nowhere are we to find others
without lawlessness,

And I know why the free bird sings,
for lack of a cage,
for lack of any air on which to glide.

My people

20 August 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/08/my-people/

A generation raised by a generation raised
by lies knows no piety.

What deserves respect?

Souls, the old superstition squashed to great relief,
cry foul no longer.

Life is good.

Fragments Shored Against Ruin

24 October 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/10/fragments-shored-against-ruin/

1

You are the last fighting chance
for yourself,

A chamber, a kingdom
-- Cordelia!

Where is the throne?
What is flesh?

A clock in the hall
A clock and no walls

And spinning
Rome is burning

Tick Tick Tick --

There are things that move the will that even the atom cannot kill --

There are things there are things

-- If you do not control yourself,
who will?

2

The executive has surrendered
all — anarchy ensues.

The state in which one cannot say no,
when one cannot stop,
is called chaos today is chaos
and we are revolving in kaleidoscope houses that looked fun

who am the last fighting chance for myself, the only opportunity to be free of that doggerel wretch who sits on the mind-throne

while, usurped, the executive wastes
in heaps of sentiment and flesh that wash over all
and bathe with the lime of body.

soma. soma soma soma
take and live.

3

My body waffling through space
and undigested time conceives Idea — floats, as it were, above itself into ethereal otherlands

and waits.

Up, from where is only down,
I fly, and divide this self into slivers, abandoning each at the foot of age-old Mind

Who takes them, warping tomorrow with hands of iron, cold.

I am left unanswered.

4

I fear the smallness of my mind
surrounded by mysteries,

The abstract cave,
philosopher's chains
unbroken,

Bound,
and sinking down.

And are there here no sunbeams,
no exalted forms that dance
on more than cavewall?

5

There are no tunes or strings to play
unbloodied by the rage, unbridled
by fearful faces, names turned dusty with shame.

How far the sky has fallen,
how far! deep within our bowels

We cannot digest
or swallow.

There is only us — only the rage
and the cold, swollen cage.
The bruised age.

6

Listen. We will begin to repeal soporifics
only in the light of more pure harmonies and form.

There can be no freedom in extravagance.

Love is the beginning but not the fruition,
which comes only through discipline
and a kind of violence.

Once we have established ourselves
at the end of ourselves, and only then,
can we draw from the ashes
some kind of beginning.

7

Is there still a Song,
and can I sing along?

This man, boy, heart beating hard and strong,
'tis mine? And may I be wrong?

I have wallowed verily, wallowed long in the avenues and twisting ways
of ecstasy and sorrow,

But there is forthcoming joy,
awakened noise which learns to balance
and to hope with poise

The truth of which is There is There is There.

Egotism spreads

29 November 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/11/egotism-spreads/

Egotism spreads against
the backdrop of the morrow,
leaving little room for ecstasy
and far too much for sorrow.

If there are still men

23 December 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/12/if-there-are-still-men/

If there are still men,
if there are still those who do not depend,
who when aroused
defend,
then fate can be bent --

If not good God relent!

Megalopolis

24 December 2015
https://poems.culturing.net/2015/12/megalopolis/

"What are eyes? I see none
under crushing skies.

Are things under skin
worth time?

Nay,
Whatever —"

This, our kind sucked dry,
dissolves all hope of lives combined

And we trudge on, responding to slights
in kind.

Scents of the Divine

14 January 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/01/scents-of-the-divine/

Wonder is the pollen of belief,
and faith, the leaf;

We know only wafts
of distant breezes.

The Choir

18 January 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/01/the-choir/

By silent seas we sit and sing
Of life's unwrought enamelling
As each day gathers into storm
And reasons with our untold ire.

Rise fair song and banish woe
For we must fear the foreman's blow
For though our fathers built with stone
We build the world again each morn,

And tremble in the shade of steel,
And ache for poison salesmen sell,
And whirl in this ungrateful gyre
To placate pioneering fire.

What is this? What is my own?
What good is a peopled home
When urge and urge and urge inspire
Epitomes forlorn?

Hope, where are your lovely feathers?
All your crumbs are swept — this weathered Leaf deceives — these grasses wither.
There are only bog and mire.

Who would dare to ope
Pandora's vessel once again? What's left?
All can see that Zeus has scorned
Those Foresight has adorned.

But summon those old voices hither.
Sing a song against the dither.
Won't a mythic world reborn Reclassify revealed desire?

Make again that age-old beat.
Forget the words that spell defeat.

Abandon prod and thrust.
Embrace the courage of the calling horn.

For we have feared the shades of steel,
But harbor dreams of living well,
And dream of lifting off the pyre,
And lift this chorus as a choir.

The Great Mortality (Famine, Death, Rebirth)

26 January 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/01/the-great-mortality-famine-death-rebirth/

We sow dark energy against our host
With no more remorse, for here the ghost
Drifts sadly before the eyes of none,
Ancient among foregone hills.

Those who know

Hope! What is hope?
Sacred thoughts cope,
and merely cope.

know the ashes know

Float on, you faithless.
There is time to decompose.

know the rose

The ash of genius grows.

The Absurd

05 March 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/03/the-absurd/

The struggle for words and the urge for definition,
The epiphany that there is no epiphany,
The inner flame, the old names,
The lost boy, the dark wood
The cry,
The silence

Parting

02 April 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/04/parting/

Time takes. We weep.
Such tears are not for sorrow,
but for grace --
that we should live at all to know the embrace --

Alas, parting — the sweet sorrow -- ever pitted between truth and marrow,
which bends fate, concedes,

And then leaves no trace.

No ducts are so deep
to not swell at endings.

But there are beginnings,
sorrows saved and joys awaiting,
a haunting horizon --

Nay, this is no sheathing
but a brandishing.

Song

02 May 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/05/song/

I have seen beginnings
  I have seen my end I have seen some tomorrows and I've walked behind
the curtain to where nothing lies I've seen
the ancient hills
  but I could not make out their markings and I've heard the distant Elves
  but are they coming or embarking?

There runs deep a Song,
    and we have all been taught wrong.

I have listened closely I have waited near I've book-learned much and quavered I have loved but not enough and I have caught the scent of Juniper
I've swooned amid the leaves and I have tasted bitter Lucifer
in all the bitter leaves.

There runs deep a Song,
    and we have all been taught wrong.

I have raged and hungered
  I have severed
I've torn self from home I've cackled I've corroded I've disowned
  and I have been an unborn self alone.

There runs deep a Song,
    and we have all been taught wrong.

I have seen beginnings
  I have seen my end, I've tried to sing along, along,

For there runs deep a Song,
    and we have all been taught it wrong.

The bigness of the sky

04 August 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/08/the-bigness-of-the-sky/

See that thing above us,
floating here and everywhere?

Wonder if one tumbled up and never came back down.

Fear the fat foot-fallen finding roots for flesh and soul.

Hear what coaxes upward
and what promises the rest.

Think perhaps that atmosphere is lofty and above.

Find a reconciliation,
some true thing to truly love.

For an Old Lover

06 August 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/08/for-an-old-lover/

I held you in a dream-worn land
and felt upon this hand
a subtle war that ne'er was sparked by man
but burned in this mind's eye.

Surer forms of idol worship walk just like a woman, but are tenderer,
and spirit us forgotten things,
and give us ghostly wings.

Lover, you know beauty flies.
Enclose again within my soul
that morsel of eternal grace
you burned in this mind's eye.

The End of Suffering

06 August 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/08/the-end-of-suffering/

I've heard that once there was suffering.
One hardly thinks of it now.
Pallbearers took dark bodies away,
And even steeple-bells tolled.

Now these thoughtless mortals
can but burn for lack of shade.

Shadow, rend the heat.
The night is meet.
And devils love conceit.

Valediction to Images

06 August 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/08/valediction-to-images/

Image of forgotten beauty,
Face of fire, flesh of music,
Laughter-loving Aphrodite,
Be not high or mighty
  By the altar of my heart.

Rosy cheeks on satin faces,
Eyes that call the heart to race,
O, sculpture of amazing graces,
Shatter. There are empty places
  Deep within my heart.

Come instead, you hidden song,
You dying fall withholding all,
And I will hear you long,
For I can hear you call
  From deep within the altar of my heart.

The day is dark

08 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/the-day-is-dark/

Oh, the day is dark;
The night is all aspark
With visions.

We are no one's children.

Is there any heart?

If God Speaks, He Whispers

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/if-god-speaks-he-whispers/

I have listened long to murmurs, echoes of myself impersonating holy song.

No, the stillness knows.

There is still a place
where winds will blow,
and it's a place we can still go.

Another ending

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/another-ending/

I guess this is the end.
I'm not sure what of.
They say time is no friend.
Things slip away.

I guess it must be so.
But how should we know?
Something moves about,
and I can hear it rumble now.

So I write this down.
Embark with me I pray.
Other thoughts have flown,
or gone some other way,

But within is the promised stay of woe,
and that is where the old roads go.

Child you are the water

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/child-you-are-the-water/

Child you are the water — have you heard?
It trickles softer words.
Don't be tricked by desert people.
Fear the curse of birds.

Notes for Mr. Pound

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/notes-for-mr-pound/

Ezra, you've gathered the fundaments.
This is how they cohere:

Consider the blackbird singing,
just one, not yet perturbed
and yet disturbed by something somehow, into song --

How singest thou?

Still I sing along, I too must sing because your song is ours
and we have sung it long:

A song of walls and boundaries
and chains defying reason, giving Form a bad name.

But peeping o'er the maze I see a light which answers praise.

Only Begin

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/only-begin/

For J. Alfred Prufrock and his admirers

If I could only begin,
I would end alright.
But time is riddled with sin.

Lovers never win
with all their might.
If I could only begin

To tell you all of thick and thin
I might get things right.
But time is riddled with sin.

So let me come in,
up out of this night.
Then I could begin

To speak in both sound and sight
of ample groves and measured flight.
But time is riddled with sin,
so I could only begin.

Three Rivers

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/three-rivers/

Until the end has spoken,
until all have been awoken,
until no more tongues are broken

Sing sweet Thames, oh sing sweet Thames.

And by the dusty jailhouse,
by the ladder wracked with stars
and by the tree branch burned with scars

Oh Mississippi sing, oh sing,
oh Mississippi won't you sing.

And like the friendly moon,
and like the trees that live here too,
like able-bodied men who swoon,

Monongahela you must sing.

Why write poetry

22 September 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/09/why-write-poetry/

Warm smiles illumined by a central hearth
in days to come.

Longing

17 October 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/10/longing/

I long for things I've never known.
The shadows curse my eyes.
The scars run deep. They run at least to bone.

And though thunder grants atonement,
Always questions come from other skies.
I long for things I've never known,

And candles burn and scholars moan
And ashes creep beneath the tightest mind.
The scars are deep like bone,

And all the ancient empty tomes
Provide no lasting prize,
But only point to things we cannot know.

The ache for bluer skies,
The ache for home,
The scars that run through bone,
The longing is the only thing we know.

The End of Time

17 October 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/10/the-end-of-time/

I sing unto the end of time,
And not of loss or life between.
Beginnings, endings have no rhyme.

I do not walk the line
Toward a promise unforeseen.
I sing unto the end of time,

And hold my breath, for it is mine.
I think the only things are green.
Beginnings, endings have no rhyme,

And dying, it is fine.
Although I prize what lovers dream.
I sing unto the end of time

For lies have made us mean.
At the dawn is no more me.
Sing unto the end of time
If nothing else will rhyme.

A poem

28 October 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/10/a-poem/

begins like this:
a note, a phrase,

But then goes deeper,
seeps just under,
slakes upon a thirst,

and ends in growth.

After the Fall

28 October 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/10/after-the-fall/

I dislike Rome
  (he whispered to no one in particular),

Her dead-head poets,
her worldliness,

But then I am a Platonist, who finds no
succor colliding
επιθυμια with time.

What Good are monuments?
All of them fall.

No, no, no Godot,
no Reason,

But I make with you,

and sing a nascent treason.

  Is that true?

children of terror

03 November 2016
https://poems.culturing.net/2016/11/children-of-terror/

past crayon drawings of plane-crash buildings, heaps of America broken

down by a sort of conflict with nobody everywhere,

you who were learning to read:

stand.

your legs will do.

Out to Plant a Garden

02 January 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/01/out-to-plant-a-garden/

I am out to plant a garden.
Will you tend it?
I will put the seed on air.
It will not grow without you there.

I am out to pull the weeds.
Are you coming?
I will put my shovel down.
I'm in no rush to break new ground.

Countrified

06 April 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/04/countrified/

I have heard the wail of cities,
  I have felt their steely cry,
And I have prowled upon the pavement
  And been burned from eye to eye.

I cannot hate the people
  Who have known no other way,
But I don't think their crippling must darken my own day.

The Bird in the Glue Trap

06 April 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/04/the-bird-in-the-glue-trap/

It wasn't meant for you, that much is clear. But how those little wings beat such a fearsome rhythm
just to pull you
those two-hundred bird-lengths,
sticky trap in tow,
I'll never know,

Or how you ripped your body free
to soar on lighter wing.

Ah, those feathers left behind were not worth dying over.

I am only glad, my friend,
that I did not extinguish you
to put an end to pain.

The New Science

06 April 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/04/the-new-science/

Under the stars a hundred bards
  drop still, dead silent,
to look for a law in the cards.

They know the stomach is violent,
  a flame that retards,

And also that men have bodies,
  are bodies, whirling
in an endless whirl of leaves.

Therefore they crucify Reason, that cold Inspector
who murders the seasons,

And go on unvarnished
  but do not think that makes them tarnished.

Can we place blame
  for this treason?

Might it be just
  that in spite of stars
Man hasn't come that far?

The New World

25 April 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/04/the-new-world/

Raised among wolves,
  we've learned both bite and howl,
but there is a new kind of life coming now.

An old life more truly,
  one ought to be sure.
Allow me to answer, I've no sinecure.

Upon an old hill
  there stood men young and old.
They bore a fierce wind and were bold.

As one with one purpose
  they built there together
foundations to outlast all weather.

That edifice fell,
  but the ruins remain.
Do any dare build there again?

Dawn

28 April 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/04/dawn/

Onward, on to other dreams!
Awaken, you silk-tethered sleeper.
Rip apart the seams.

The Muse

22 May 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/05/the-muse/

Sing, oh great sleepy Muse, sing.

How we long for the ring
of your voice once to bind us again to the melodies of life and the rhythms of death.

There is no joy apart from you,
no pain but parting from you,

There is no song that is not you,
no answer dreamed without you,

So sing, sweet Muse,
do sing.

For else all is an empty thing.

Made In America

24 May 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/05/made-in-america/

For Allen Ginsberg and against many others

America I've given you my mind and now know nothing.
America have you lost it?
America let's come together.
America the times have changed.
America I have nine Facebook friends.
I text them all the time.
America is this what you meant?
Sorry if I'm oppressing you.
Sometimes I eat cholesterol.
I just can't relax.

America I spent twelve years staring at tile growing limp you paid for it nobody noticed is this Progress?

America are we There yet?

America where do Rights come from?
I've turned off my mind but I won't float downstream.
America why Columbine?
America why Ted Kaczynski?
America have you tried thinking about it?
It must be those damn video games.
America this is a problem.
We'd better get out and protest.
America it's those damn liberals.
America it's those damn conservatives.
America I can't believe you.

America I won't watch television.
You really can't be serious.
Three minutes is not enough time.

America millions of kids have no clue about meaningful conversations after years in your schools. I guess they need more Science.

America it confuses me when you bully me into tolerance.
I begin to doubt your sincerity.

America why do you hate the dead?
Are handicapped people more equal than me?
America help I feel alienated.
America this is my inside voice.
America have you read the Bible?
America it has sex in it.
I mean that literally.
America what is the meaning of this?
America why so many pills?
America let's be friends.

America I'm getting anxious.
America is this the end?
America why are your shelves full of poison?
America I don't like corn.
I almost have my energies aligned.
But why is there so much pornography?

America I had a dream that when I grew up I would be strong and capable now I'm not so sure.

America I'm not finished can I have an extension?

Belonging

12 September 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/09/belonging/

Come, my friend, and be whole.
Whose waters are these?
They won't hurt a soul.

For there is no rest among men who only keep death out so long.

Come be made one by the river and learn what it is to belong.

To Men on Women

12 September 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/09/to-men-on-women/

We have left behind the women,
and they roar now, at least some of them,
and we are still not sure which way to lead.

We hear them though,
and wonder that they bleed.

Something there is not in our control,
and if it were, would not be whole --

Let's take this answer and begin.

Open onto other things

22 September 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/09/open-onto-other-things/

Open onto other things.
A mind has many wings.

A silence that no one has heard

16 October 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/10/a-silence-that-no-one-has-heard/

There is a silence that no one has heard.
It says so much more than words.

Out came a cry

16 October 2017
https://poems.culturing.net/2017/10/out-came-a-cry/

Out came a cry
  from beneath the great Nothing,
but no one was there to believe it.

An oomph went woomph,
  and the meaning went missing,
and no one was there to retrieve it.

And day was like sand,
  and the moon went away,
and nobody was there to be free with.

A walk through a graveyard

01 April 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/04/a-walk-through-a-graveyard/

A walk through a graveyard reveals a peculiar slumber —

the men of tomorrow.

The sign reads “Help,
we’ve been civilized,
there’s no going back.”

But there never has been any going back.

And the life urge resigns itself
to smallness,
and this too is good,

For too much growth makes weeds,
and we cannot tolerate weeds.

Tomorrow, then, comes anyway.
This is a walk through a graveyard.

Aftermath

21 April 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/04/aftermath/

I have heard the wild
  ramblings,
felt betrayed by man
  and steel,
and I cannot keep on good clothes —

  but madly naked
run through city streets,
  cry “Kung Fu Tze!
where are you?”

Hot and Cold

21 April 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/04/hot-and-cold/

For Peter Dale Scott

The morning began,
and would end consequentially,

buildings collapsing,
BANG!

We have lived, have we not,
in an age of terror,

By George,
an age of Terror.

I have seen my own soul and felt afraid.

———

It began, of course,
earlier,

with a bang
down in Dallas,

or Berlin, 1945
and after,

but in any case, it's ours,
the children.

We are not sure what to love.

———

Cool me, gentle apathy,
with all your mists.

Placate as you vacate,
oh my soul.

The Secrets of Country Living

21 April 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/04/the-secrets-of-country-living/

For Robert Penn Warren

I do not know what

you will find up there in the brambles
among inhibiting growths,

but I have once
heard an eagle call out its name.

It was a sound like Truth.

Naomi

10 May 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/05/naomi/

What a sweet thing,
when those eyes have the look of eyes
that are received.

I no longer find it hard to believe.

Between you and me are all secrets,
and we and the earth
are three.

A young man would swoon,
and an old disapprove,

But a man of both worlds gives soft praise.

Mysteries

01 August 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/08/mysteries/

O stolen time,
wandering there by the sea,

what will you do with me?

Unfurl your grasp of life,
make plain the age again!

No sooner does one cope
than some new younger hope steps in and whisks fidelity away.

O vanity of vanities,
great necromancing age!

Tear down thy veils with rage
if that will set you free,

but I will not be free.

For there is still truth in old books,
and the walls will not fall for sly looks.

Indeed, there is room at all tables.

Bird sits still

19 August 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/08/bird-sits-still/

Bird sits still in vacuum,
  waiting.

No hope of gliding.

Squawks again,
why not.

Pecks self,
prunes wings.

unused,
abused?
confused

Squawks.

  again,
why not?

Terror

11 September 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/09/terror/

Planes, flames, wreckage.

Images played, replayed
in certain ways.

Oh, the horror.

News inspires terror terror acts of terror terrorist muslim extremist terror

all day long,
even though there are children.

—

Loyalty is not at all times virtuous,
but neither is disloyalty.

Either keeps things moving.

For those who have known terror,
what of love?

Can such things be?

—

I hear the Bush
in the wilderness,
burning,

Take off my shoes
and wait.

It cannot speak.

And this will not be easy.
We must live with ourselves.

—

But one may ask,
what is treason?

And more than one may answer.

And we have been like this,
and with good reason,
but we will not dwell on that now.

—

I fear the Bush has burnt,
and we are alone.

But then a cry comes from the desert,

“Keep those embers burning!
Night is coming!
It is growing colder!”

And I wonder without wonder when the world would rather freeze.

Lone wolf howls

02 October 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/10/lone-wolf-howls/

Lone wolf howls,
jaw deformed.

Heart disease.

Bite marks prove:
no hope.

All Has Been Forsaken

24 October 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/10/all-has-been-forsaken/

I have built my house on a swamp.
Nobody can reach me here.

All has been forsaken.
That is clear,

but what new dawn
comes with the new year?

History

09 November 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/11/history/

Where do we come from?
Primordial slime.

I would love to explain it,
but there is no time,

and thinking is a crime.

But then, why rhyme?

One More Cave

09 November 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/11/one-more-cave/

When Philosophy‘s just one more Cave, take heart,
for there is still room to start,
and an almost but not yet lost art.

“Romance Revisited,” revisited

14 November 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/11/romance-revisited-revisited/

I saw you there
atop the stair,
it’s true,

And you were me
and I was you,

And ocean blue bore love away.

It chastened him right through.

Alas! they say
it is no use to sing,

But I’ll take wing, for lo!
Minerva’s owl has perched
upon a husk, a lifeless stump,

and there will be no going on without new songs from flesh and blood.

America (Northeast)

13 December 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/12/america-northeast/

O child of burning night!
O fire undivine!

When will you put on some clothes?

Let old Walt rest!
He never knew best,

For he has let Medea
have her way with the children and slinks off to Bethlehem to be born.

Academia

31 December 2018
https://poems.culturing.net/2018/12/academia/

These old metaphysicians have not reckoned with Bob Dylan
or the rest of rock and roll,

but make love to pure abstraction
in the heat of musty bookshelves.

What is it to be?

Still their queasy deity
impugns all souls of freedom, ‘til they dream not of escape.

Those who have been through it never quite think straight again.

Open up, it’s me.

Ah, profoundest nonsense,
most inebriating charm!
which empowers all corruption,
doing simple folk harm.

Take the path of flesh and bone,
if it still lies before you.

I must stay to point the way,
but wish that I could join you.

Being

04 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/being/

For Heidegger

It is all jumbled together,
yin and yang,

at once the thing
and the corruption of the thing,

and we all know the dirty bath may need to go,
babe be damned,

But then,
how can we hope?

How does one cope?

America or Aristotle

13 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/america-or-aristotle/

O land of confusion, burning bright!

Land with no middle term,
where “why?” is forbidden
because unanswerable,

Flee from thyself.
Find God.

He’s out there somewhere.

Nixon at the Threshold of the Lincoln Memorial

13 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/nixon-at-the-threshold-of-the-lincoln-memorial/

> Something that is completely clean can also be completely sterile
> Nixon, Dictabelt 75, May 1970

What language could there have been between that tiger, battle-scarred, and these young cubs, German-tongued
and fearful offspring of Philosophy in ruins?

Ah, one tries to merge with Being as the sky collapses.
Those with thorny crowns spy deep oppression.

Nixon mutters, "What is there to save?"
allows no motion, grins a grin that says
"All shall be well, stop feeling."

This has happened before.

I stood there as a child
repeating "up steps!" in innocence,
for I had not yet learned what there is said
of History or Freedom, or the other vague ideas men have died for.

I was born too late for that,
and though things have not changed
some hope, yes, even now,
though with less force,
for some renewal,
this time unendorsed.

It will not come on wings
or save us, probably,
but it could make things better,
keep them moving.

And as for the children, well,
they've never mattered much to us,
and who could build a home from such raw material?

For the Love of Aristotle

19 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/for-the-love-of-aristotle/

I feel the burning pressure push upon my brow.
The beat of every moment,
inescapable somehow.

What fathers bore this curse,
and thereby drenched the land in sweat?
What mothers bore them children,
who don't know how to relent?

America! America!
There is still time, you see.
As long as we have bodies
we have possibilities.

Recovery must come.
The other options are too dire.
Behold yourselves, begin again,
for this way leads to fire.

Hole

29 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/hole/

And as a hole where a house once stood begins to fill with moss and soil,
so too he took a wife, and had a child.

Milton Usurped

29 January 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/01/milton-usurped/

> I can't go to Paradise no more.
> I killed a man back there.
>
> Bob Dylan, Spirit on the Water

But what is to be made of Milton's hearse?
One victim of the newborn myth of books,
he dreamed of glory. Can he still be true?
We did not get to Paradise in time,
and listen, John, it's over, that whole thing,
but we can still be friends. We set you free,
though some would have you bound and gagged,
for you are fertile soil.

It is time for growths
not tethered to the sturdy oaks,
and you know how this works.

And so the burnished throne, bleached white,
is smothered by new vines,

And O! Alas! rest easy, friend,
for we no longer gnash the teeth.

On Nothing

14 February 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/02/on-nothing/

O emptiness, O void supreme!
Unfill us, leave only urge,
yes, all is false. We long to be ugly, unwrap the heavens, tatter the shawl,
break the boundaries, and ourselves,
at blood on walls, which fall, scream, “Is this all?”

On Wading

02 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/on-wading/

Successful waders
know a few things,
resist a little,
do not get carried away.

They choose streams carefully,
can be lead,
avoid the rapids,
rarely rest on banks.

A wader can manage the flow.

King Henry in the Playpen

05 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/king-henry-in-the-playpen/

The Virgin laughs
like a mother whose child
does not know he is seen.

She is recovering from Plague,
and watches, near flowers,

her little tyrant storming through his own world.

O silly boy,
your mother waits.

Do you not know her?

Ah, she laughs so gently,
so as not to weep,

and thinks, “Go on.
Thy rampage is almost done.

You will need me soon.”

Not Without Reason

05 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/not-without-reason/

The question remains
the same:

whether to live alone
or drift among the formless.

It seems either choice is vague.

The New Bird

09 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/the-new-bird/

The idea waits upon a bough.
The bird is in the parlor though.
Tomorrow never comes for us,
and so he sings for now.

But over in the city though
the trees all stand erect,
where there is no sought communion
and the love is all in trust.

I do not speak for them,
and only know the words I know.
But for who would still hear,
I have endeavored to show how.

Idea waits upon a bough.
The bird is in the parlor though.
Tomorrow has not come,
and so he sings for now.

But over in the city now,
the steel trees stand erect,
and there is no more communion
where all love is held in trust.

The song is not for those who sing of things one cannot know.
The new bird sings, alas!
for those who have no other sound.

I have withdrawn from the world

27 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/i-have-withdrawn-from-the-world/

I have withdrawn from the world
  for the world's own good,
I have bound my own hands.

But not with the usual cords
  and knots,
not well-fashioned marriage bands.

I come for the darkness,
  and whisper it slow:
that this is where all the young tulips go

Which have failed to grow in dead soil.

—

Whence comes new song,
and will it be long?

The embers are dwindling,
the hearth has grown cold,
and the vagabonds grow old.

I say only this,
that is this not sure bliss,
to belong, to behold, and to bless?

Rosie

31 March 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/03/rosie/

Rosie works
so hard to please the factory man.

It is a matter of time.

She has been on hands and knees
since seventeen,

And does not know
what moves her so,

To longing, maybe, for something.

Meanwhile
somewhere blossoms,

but she cannot go,
for it is a matter of time,

though she does know
the way things grow.

Mother and Son

11 April 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/04/mother-and-son/

“Come,” she says,
“the broth is ready.
Medicine is almost brewed.”

“But mother, I am well.”

“No, you are not.”

He takes a sip,
and starry ships,
and dreams of other hips,
slip out, beneath her smiling whip.

And what of other women?

“Mother, you know best,” he says,
and sits stock-still for days.

Marriage

30 April 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/04/marriage/

Ah, the fall,
‘twas most to be expected.
Not the landing.

Lost within some woman’s world,
maneuvering and bent,

the forces pull,
and they will not relent.

This life will be well spent.

Sainthood

05 May 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/05/sainthood/

By Hippo's pearl-white gate we stand,
imbibing every reprimand,
embodied and ashamed, we wait
for worldless fame and deathless man.

O Sorrow! How forsaken, we,
in dour, lifelong misery,
implore a ghost to hear the cry
of spirit's flesh-born agony.

O sleeper, wake! and dread no wonder.
Seek Aquino's shores, and plunder.
World awaits, and those who know are thus drawn out and under.

The Lady

06 May 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/05/the-lady/

I dreamed I saw a Lady perched atop a milk-white stair, overlooking starry oceans
and defining what was there.

Beneath her golden tresses
opened up a gnawing void,
which catapulted us to freedom.
Soon all motion was destroyed!

The Lady did not stir, but crooned,
and smiled a softer smile
than wisest men have dared to dream.
Then she turned her back awhile.

The void kept belching fire,
and the only thing we knew
was its bedevilment and whirl.
It proved that all things are see-through!

The Lady meanwhile, laughing, stayed atop of how things are,
and by the time we knew what hit us,
saw we hadn't gotten far.

The morning came as always,
and we, naked on her shore,
cried out, "Dear Lady, let us near!
Your sweet forgiveness, we implore!"

She looked at all our nakedness,
saw through our praise and plight,
and said, "Fools, get yourselves together,
or else get out of my sight!"

Against Ice Sculptures

13 May 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/05/against-ice-sculptures/

Alas, I see them still in solid ice,

encased against all will but Power.

O, that they were free,
as liquid flowing
to the sea!

To break, and dance again!

Go not alone

11 June 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/06/go-not-alone/

There is a place beyond all stars. It is no home for what we are.
Go not alone.

Crickets

28 June 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/06/crickets/

Up upon a hill I heard
the crickets chirping words:
O boy, come here, come near,
and stay and talk awhile.

My answer was to smile,
and I did no more favors then,
but crossed the valley of denial
and arrived within their ken.

O boy, I heard more echoing,
and sat, and stayed, and then felt all around a queer commotion stir the leaves, and break, and end.

And oh, ‘twas cool November,
and the birds did softly sing,
and if there’s one thing I’ll remember,
it’s my softly taking wing

Upon the backs of those cold crickets,
on the hill, who chirped with words,
for as they chirped about salvation,
they made sure that I had heard.

White Shade

07 July 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/07/white-shade/

A shade of white,
not quite opaque,
disturbs my sight.

It has no form,
but haunts the night
like one unsteadily born.

The ashes of a pyre lay where
She was burned bright.

I do not see the Lady,
and her absence
haunts my sight.

For the Innocent

09 July 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/07/for-the-innocent/

Listen, for I will tell you what you were left wanting.

It is not a pure loss of violence
for some unseen cause,
nor a fire that goes with the heating.

You long for an energy which is itself.

It may grow
where men both
work and pray.

Beatrice Among the Daffodils

22 July 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/07/beatrice-among-the-daffodils/

I see the beloved, dancing
in a field of purest gold.
She is not mine to have or hold.

Her body, like her soul, is what she is. And these together make one whole.

O friend in white!
Come down from heaven,
where the air has grown too thin.

Here are some daffodils.
Your spirit lies within.

The Lady Sings for Hobbes

22 July 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/07/the-lady-sings-for-hobbes/

What sayest thou, clear thinker,
about friendship?

Have you cherished love?

Though Power, yes, is sought (there is no doubt), is every motion just a chasing after clout?

What would your mother think?

I do not speak for her
or for myself,
but for the Lady,

who has sent me
to remind you who you are.

In the Beginning

03 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/in-the-beginning/

The question
I have been asking

is in the beginning,
was there nothing,
or was there God?

And what is the difference?

It may after all turn out that we are just malleable.

Lady in the Dark

03 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/lady-in-the-dark/

Beneath the moon
I saw her too,

alone,
where null is true.

I did not dare come near,
but felt that here, of all
damned places,
least deserves her.

The Lady Speaks of Progress

03 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/the-lady-speaks-of-progress/

For Langston Hughes

I have known progress.
My soul has grown weak just for progress.

I have known progress from London to New Orleans,
and my soul has grown weak just for progress.

I have walked out at night among men without bones,
and my soul had grown weak just for progress.

I have ridden in cars and smoked,
and found God to find myself revoked,
and I have known all the dark secrets that you would swear you would never invoke.

And my soul has grown weak just for progress.

I am not now nor will I ever be the kind of lady who belongs by making family, because my soul is weak.

My soul has grown weak just for progress.

And oh, I have machines,
and shiny things,
but they don't speak.

And oh, my soul, why are you so weak?
Is there nothing new to seek?
Speak. The men have not fathomed your needs.

Lady in the Temple

10 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/lady-in-the-temple/

She looked around like one bound
to be free,

excited truly,
and so rapt
that she saw none
of the holes in the roof.

Twilight Over Virginia

22 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/twilight-over-virginia/

I thought I saw Virginia
calling over mountains home,
and oh, I thought I knew tomorrow
like the back of all my bones,

But yesterday and cold forgetting left me stranded unawares,
and now the moon might still shine sometimes
but the twilight wouldn't dare.

Lincoln's Memory

29 August 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/08/lincolns-memory/

So favored forms of power
shall not perish from the earth,
would you please sing for us, O History,
about the urgent birth
of these great, terrible, united States, which, though conceived in Liberty,
did break, some say, that vow?

This nation under God, twice founded,
ever failing, yet immortal,
did embark toward the dream of Freedom led by that one stout Kentuckian who hated much as loved and took a promise unfulfilled
and made it law to bind on all.

This promise, called Equality,
our hope in days to come,
arose, O History! through violence,
and herein lies its song.

Twas eighteen-fifty-eight, whereon a Senate seat contended led the folks of Illinois to dream they saw a President.
One Lincoln-not-yet-Deity, preparing for debate, stood by a portrait of old Jefferson, to whom he could relate,
and said,

"Old predecessor tongue with wings, remind me,
whence came our brave truth,
that all men are created equal.
Knew you this in youth?"

To which the painting said,
"It was a growth of many years,
first born on England's hills
in faithful regicide."

And Lincoln asked,
"But had you heard of man's first disobedience and the fruit?"

Came quick reply:
"Our Massachusetts friends knew of such things,
but I did hope to purge all superstition,
and robe God in Nature."

"Ah, in nature," Lincoln said.

"That's right. For all can become noble
if they're only left alone."

Great Lincoln, growing ponderous, stroked his chin
and paced before the painting, murmuring, "If left alone..."

He did not dare to broach the question,
burned on his and other minds,
of Slavery, but rather urged this thought:
"Suppose we find all men not equal. Who's at fault?"

But there was no reply.

The painting would not speak,
and Lincoln found his affirmation.

As the sureness grew,
he pondered long
and nursed a budding song.

This Lincoln after many years appeared before the dead and spoke the words
we will not long remember,

for we must not hallow,
must not consecrate that ground
where many died and killed.

Thus Lincoln willed,
and thus we must obey.

But Oh, how Declaration had sent shocks across the sea as Mr. Jefferson endeavored to give ground to that new plea
which was come forth just then,
at last!

And when ‘twas time for tea in Boston,
there was Paine in every head,
and ‘twas ideas, sir, ideas!
which would leave so many dead.

Lord, such war and terror
bled from North down through the South
until the only ones remaining banished God and punished doubt.

To devastation wrought,
and to the horror not quite heeded,

To man's ultimate obedience,
friend History, give song.

The Lady Knows

07 September 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/09/the-lady-knows/

The Lady knows
when she is not wanted;

She walks alone at dawn.

After Lincoln

24 September 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/09/after-lincoln/

Alas, there came more wars,
at least as brutal,
oddly spirited,

And Lincoln, growing old,
was placed on coins, enshrined in brooding stone
for all to see and know.

And speakers came and went, the tanks
went on parade,
and progress dreams
were sung, and listen, listen,
you there, listen,
but don't listen for too long,

because too many have got stuck there
and we may have got it wrong.

Wrong and wrong and wrong.
Must we go back to 1619?

Cease your wailing, History!
That brutal, trifling song!

If back we go, then back,
but all the way,
past slaves and ships
to Milton, Christ, and Socrates, as Lincoln surely knew.

And History, sweet Dame,
it's true, we cannot quarrel long,

But oh, your song, your song!
it will need rearranging before long.

Tradition

25 September 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/09/tradition/

I think the future
does not belong to the past,
and things are passing,
present and future.

I think things will not last;
though nothing does,
those less than most
which grow from baseless ground,

things passing all around,
and we do well to grasp
for any which are present,
future or past,

those most the old things
which are known to last.

Sara

05 October 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/10/sara/

It was the flowers,
yes, you know,

those, in your hair.

It has been a long time since I was carried away.

Have you come to show me how?

Kindling

13 October 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/10/kindling/

If sparks are not enough,
it will take flame,

but all the same,

one must go gently
into heat,

and mind the game.

What it is

19 October 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/10/what-it-is/

I think She grows
like a flower of wind,
and fades with time.

The Great Motion

25 October 2019
https://poems.culturing.net/2019/10/the-great-motion/

Love is not it all, she said.
He smiled. It had been some time since last they spoke,

and when he awoke
the morning seemed like fire,
bright with dreams and smoke.

What song was in the breeze!
And every sneeze, a new commandment
to be free,
and be at peace.

Oh, dream once more, cold world, old world.
There are still so many suns.

Homecoming

22 April 2020
https://poems.culturing.net/2020/04/homecoming/

Awaking comes in turns,
the day is bright before it burns.

I walk down streets I never knew.
They are familiar, but I, the knower, have changed.
I did not know what little I knew.
Maybe this is what poets mean by recurrence,
why they return so often to the same things.
I did not know the familiar streets
because I, the knower, had not yet been changed.
But what can bring such a change?
An encounter, a question, another knower?
To know is to be known and vice versa.
This means the streets must know me,
and where the streets have no names
there is nothing to know.
But this is all begging the question,
why knowledge?
Because I, the knower, have not yet been changed.
Maybe this is why poets recur and recur.
If change comes it comes only for now, not forever,
and so I walk down streets I never knew,
the same streets, but I, the knower, have changed,
and so have they.

The Enduring and Unchanging Dao

14 September 2020
https://poems.culturing.net/2020/09/the-enduring-and-unchanging-dao/

People die, new people are born.
The timbre of civilization changes,
like always, and we, those merely progenitors,
progenerate, again, at the horn.

What beast,
what rough or otherwise, comes forth
to taste the light of day?

This surely is no newer way
than all the old ways,
dying, dead, or buried.

So what special hurry?

Those come forth go under,
this is so, and temple shrouds,
once rent asunder, can be made,
remade, again, again.

If vanity, then vanity.
The proposition's chord
strikes hard, and oh,
we grow so bored.

What light from yonder room?

'Tis Juliet? Nay, knave, just one once loved
in some forgotten tongue.

I say be such that every longing touch
remembers love,

But do step cautiously
through darkened rooms,
and listen for that horn.

Heidegger in Japan

07 January 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/01/heidegger-in-japan/

For John Rawls

What a journey, eastward
to a land no less devoted to its nothingness
than Martin's own,

and yet one prone
to wholeness nonetheless.

How much to learn,
to see,
and maybe dream
on long-abandoned beaches
near the silent sea.

Old Martin,
having conquered Europe,
set his sights on Asia,
found himself there, conquered,
none the wiser,

Then returning to a Europe
plain and bright, devout but dour in appearance
as in mind,

what did he hope to find?

No more the plainly spoken
One, to rule us all, no more!

But maybe some forgiveness
for us, mortals after all.

Planting Time

14 February 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/02/planting-time/

In the spring time of the year,
as dawn rises, dusty, over the fields,
I wait, anxious, with my plow.

It has come again, the time for planting,
but this crop is strange to me.
The soil is like all soil, firm but supple,
and I am like all planters,
firm but supple.

Tomorrow rains will come,
and old seed wash away
as new seed takes its root,

And who will then be standing here in planters' shoes
to cast a growing shadow?

I hope one who knows a little,
treads with greater care.

For people in the village,
I plant days and years

And see strange fruit come harvest time.
I wait for what will grow.

Chrysalis

05 March 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/03/chrysalis/

I sit quiet,
fetal in the void

and what light
comes?

Is it the East?
No, not the East.

It is like morning
after many nights,

and I awake at dawn,
perform my miracles.

This morning (oh what morning),
is it ever to be believed?

Yes,
though not for long,

because eclipse will come in soon to snuff it out.

And yet still now
this moment, stay with me,

and we will have our chrysalis
in time to speak of things.

Flowering

01 April 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/04/flowering/

This shall be my flowering
And this my flowing forward

As of yeasaying
As of naysaying

Thus my buds
(what are the buds?)
come forth

I have these leaves bunched up within me
I must set them free

The wind in the leaves

13 April 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/04/the-wind-in-the-leaves/

Thunders crash,
The wind moves through the leaves,

The paths grow walls,
curve into cages,

Thunder asks,
A certain volume of man,
suffices?

No, it never suffices,

Always more
past overflowing

Thunder crashes,
Floods tear down the trees,

The wind moves through the leaves,
A certain volume of man,
so certain

Thunder, why
O thunder

move through wind and leaves.

All the Tender Pathos

20 April 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/04/all-the-tender-pathos/

> Every human heart is human
>
> Longfellow, Hiawatha

Remember how the river moves,
Remember warm embracing,
Bring them here, to this steel jungle,

And know love.
Put down thy burden.

Remember once the wigwam,
Old coyote and the moon.
Relive the sorrow,

Breathe the pain.
Put down thy burden.

See the colored faces,
Out of place in this steel jungle,
Housed in spite of fear and hatred,

See them here.
Put down thy burden.

Know the pain of ages,
Know the sorrow of the moon,
The midnight moon that every age sees,

Warmed by tears.
Put down thy burden.

Dream as one soul dreaming,
Move toward the common dream,
And in the moonlight,

Build a home.
Put down thy burden.

Wait for dawn, and as she rises
Greet her with her own surprises,

As a people wildly singing

In the river's cool disguises.
Thus forget thy burden.

Hear the coursing river,
Hear it coursing, hear it roaring
On its journey to the ocean,

And be human.
Leave behind thy burden,
Leave behind thy burden.

An Example

28 April 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/04/an-example/

I pause before the church and wonder,

here is an example
of the best that man can do.

That's not to say that this one way
will do,

but here is one example.

There are others,
have been others,
will be others, sure.

But here is one example
of the best that man can do.

The Shroud

01 May 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/05/the-shroud/

What is this thin whisp,

this blow of steam,
this flop of paper

streaming by you,

is it all of us?

I think it is
the unmixed soup of dreams,

the shroud of temples
not yet built.

Tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow
begins again, as always,

but be better for it.

Power

07 May 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/05/power/

Power brings its many blessings,
Though it comes by other names.
This is what we find by singing.

Days were young and love did sting us.
All young people feel the same.
They mix themselves with power's blessings.

Some find laurels, others cling
To lovely children's games.
Thus they lose themselves in singing,

Thus they fall before the morning,
Thus they are to blame.
But power brings at most mixed blessings,

Power puts off dark of dying,
Power's light must wane.
Therefore, find thyself in singing,

Make thine own some other name,
And know I feel the same,
Because this power mixes life with blessings.
This is what we find by singing.

Terror Remembered

09 May 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/05/terror-remembered/

I.

> To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely.
>
> Edmund Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France

We who have known terror must know love,
from the hearts of those who died and killed,
from the souls they willed to live,
and from the dreams that spilled on every bloodstained street while we with banners blazing terror forgot love.

We must know of love
if we are ever to forgive ourselves,
or ever to again lift up those banners
which to many once meant hope,
and still mean something (this, here, now,
is where old plants become new soil)
and with this toil we must know love,
this loving toil of generations,
for the burden never lessens
but the joy arrives with spring.

We who know of terror
must plant love in fields
once sown with mortal error,
and if joy comes in the morning
it will shock us,
but we must not let it stop us.

Joy is the reminder
that all things, from nothing, journey thence,
and we who have known terror
must know joyful toiling love.

Enough of burning buildings,
and enough of bloody deserts.

We know love.
We will not live for less again.

II.

> But power, of some kind or other, will survive the shock in which manners and opinions perish, and it will find other and worse means for its support.
>
> Edmund Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France

Burke
We live here, slowly,
on these ashes.

What can grow here?

One wonders
how much Abu Ghraib remains,
how much the screams have done their work
and keep on working,

But one never wonders,
oh my soul,
that life goes on.

That is for another place and time,
across some ocean,
on some barren rock
where men and what remains are left to speculation.

You and I live here,
and we must grow things from these ashes,
if not only to have grown them,
but because we otherwise
must fear what grows unhindered.

So kill the weeds,
the poison leaves,
the ash-plants, naked, dancing on the hill,

and scatter seeds
for fruit and flower,
pleasing sights,
yet good for food.

Remember this place, though, child.
and do not dwell here for too long.

III.

> The usurpation…will hold power by arts similar to those by which it has acquired it.
>
> Edmund Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France

Burke
Terror is terrible,
on this we agree,

But why have we been terrible?

Perhaps it is the proximity of conflict,
the inevitable germination
on both sides.

Or was it usurpation?

Or just another slough
of body becoming body?

We are not like the stars,
we are too wet,

And we must find within ourselves,
that something, turning,

that holds them apart.

All past times are terrible

28 May 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/05/all-past-times-are-terrible/

All past times are terrible
to those who look back now,

Just like future times are hazy
to those gazing forward now.

Only now is real,
and now alone deserves the seal
of approbation,

For each solid nation
breaks when stretched too far.

Predication

30 June 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/06/predication/

Day turns into day. Each fades.
All things become another.

But can this always be so,
or does this change?

What use is predication?

This is true, not that, for now,
and who can know another?

Therefore say it is true,
if not for me, say it for you.

Old House

09 July 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/07/old-house/

I walk down old avenues,
aware again of impermanence,
perennial friend of the weary,
and stop before the family house.

What otherworldly dominion is this,
where manflesh met with womanflesh
to make me?

Yet other worlds must be,
or else our high anxiety
is treason of another kind.

It asks us, whence these beams,
this wood, this angled frame
with memories of forest?

What cold river brought us here?
If not the Thames, the Mississippi?
Say the Susquehanna, rolling slow.

And yet, don't answer.
Let me linger here, and grieve,
until our waters are surpassed.

Old house made new,
another world's anxieties
are haunting you.

Wandering Sheep

09 September 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/09/wandering-sheep/

Up upon a hill,
the sheep go wandering.

Nearby cars zoom thoroughly
over the highway.

Not a few sheep find themselves in drivers' seats
at eighty miles-an-hour.

Would they not prefer to graze
on some unfettered hillside,
near the setting sun?

They are still sheep,
though silly ones.

I think that they should think again.
The hillside is still there.
It has not changed.

It grows less full,
but some say
this is part of its purpose.

The cars make terrible noise where wandering sheep once spoke of pleasing vistas, unknown springs.

Making Sausage

13 September 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/09/making-sausage/

The bird has a story.
It sounds like a song.
But I wouldn't worry.
He wouldn't sing long.

The people are coming.
They haven't a care.
The people are stunning.
The bird wouldn't dare.

The people make sausage.
What else could they do?
Their story is ugly,
But this much is true:

The bird has to learn how to live with clipped wings.
Indeed, this may be why he sings.

Lost Forest

28 October 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/10/lost-forest/

The bulldozers are out today,
are blazing in what once was forest.

I was in this forest
as a child.

Do the workers know
the sound of crickets here
within leaves, the sound of song that matches oversong?

I am not sentimental,
for I know it to be earth
becoming earth,
and yet I wonder what earth is,

Because the poets ask, and keep on asking,
though they cannot answer,
for we find the question worthy.

Something in the wind
this time of year
must stir uncertainty.

What shall we ask the bulldozer?
What does it know?

Shattered Image, Fallen Breast

01 November 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/11/shattered-image-fallen-breast/

At midnight in the basement of a museum, some forgotten grotto
deep in Mediterranean soil,

I walked slow and silent,
deep in thought,

When lo! the image of a woman,
be it Aphrodite, Juno,
or some other, rose before me.

I came to her side
and noticed lying at her feet
a fallen breast of stone,
hers surely, lying prone,
as though some vandal strove
to make her pure.

I put it back where it belongs,
and held it there,
until her firmness made me sure,

But sure of what,
I do not know.

I thought I could discern
the faintest sigh,
but only she would know
who fills the mind with wonder,

so I wondered
if the earth could be her home,
or if she comes from some far-whispered plane
that only makers know.

Love is made

07 November 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/11/love-is-made/

Love is made,
not found,

and if this making
is to succeed,

it must know
where it is going
and whence it comes.

I ask you,
hoping you will know.

Beyond Power

10 November 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/11/beyond-power/

If Nietzsche were asked,
"Why power?"

He might reply,
"We grow helpless."

But humans
have always been helpless, are helpless
for decades at least,
and even then will need food.

What purpose has power,
if not to supply
our infirmities?

Oh, but how free we would be,
to be free, very free!

To not be born of woman,
no more of a people
in time and place.

I beg you, dear reader,
be cautious, and do not embark on a journey that ends in death.

Phenomenology of Science

25 December 2021
https://poems.culturing.net/2021/12/phenomenology-of-science/

From Hegel's brain
thou, spluttering,
spreadst thy wings.

Thou art one more mythology,
nothing more.

Thou cannot transcend culture, or fly
as Zeitgeist.

No, thy thinking is primitive, alas,
just like thy body.

So give up the geist.
Make way for some new mode of knowing,

Or rather, some old,
deep-rooted thought, the kind
you were made to destroy.

Words

24 January 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/01/words/

The words tumble
down, jumbled,
stumble over
bumps and rumble
into town, past
rows of corn that wonder at the world.

I wonder what the world means.

Someone asks me why I choose these words.
I think these words chose me.

And when they ask directions,
well, I think if words are lost,
then I must find them.

I must guide them.

Phalanx of Mind

07 March 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/03/phalanx-of-mind/

Those Reformers,
in order to flee from imperium,
fell for an earlier vice:

That phalanx of mind
wherein each must stay sturdy or die.

But our world is better equipped for peace.

Though the devil in man
never sleeps.

Oi! must I now know my neighbor?
And how can I, knowing him, sleep?

But were he restrained
by imperium, phalanx, or rights,
love could be,
but alas, he is free.

Therefore,
what will he make of me?

Who is in charge here

08 March 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/03/who-is-in-charge-here/

I think I shall spend the rest of my life
searching
for who is in charge here,

so that I may ask them
where they have been.

Saving Earth

23 March 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/03/saving-earth/

We have taken lightning captive,
  we have made the sky our slave
on our relentless quest for vengeance
  on an Earth we cannot save.

If all is lost, then songs cannot be sung, and yet
this song goes on, so all must still be found somehow.

If we cannot save Earth,
  can Earth save us?
Or is it not a matter
  of saving, but of trust?

After Reagan

03 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/after-reagan/

We have been pre-sliced
individually, wrapped in money.

But oh, he was funny, well-spoken, and phony.
A pity so few will remember
the lens of that time,
or look through it to see what might be.

Are we free?

I have heard so much talk about liberty,
so little wondering,
"what does that mean?"
that I wonder,
is Freedom for me?

And does Freedom need me?

Things Themselves

03 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/things-themselves/

Until I met a woman,
and her presence strengthened me,
I did not know that God lives
not in books, as Calvin claims,
but in the world of things themselves.

What mystery lies here remains to nourish those who care
to take the secret that is there into a home, and let it steer
the very lives of things themselves.

But can we dwell among the secret song, the hidden call of Earth's long fall for the abyss?
We have our churches.
Are they tombs for things themselves?

I think we have to think this through,
for God has been a long time dying,
though he rises from the dead,
and he is not the only one.
We know this too of things themselves.

Technology

12 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/technology/

The Word
became machines
and dwelt among us.

The Winds of Change

12 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/the-winds-of-change/

I listen for the winds of change,
but hear so many sirens blare.
They tell me it's under control.

Control is such a forceful word,
so I just stand here unaware.
I listen for the winds of change,

Which bring me scents of other places and, I hope, will take me where they tell me it's under control.

But now as children age,
so too a people ages and grows bare.
I listen for the winds of change

And see my people, scared.
I wonder what could make them whole.
So I just listen to the winds of change,
and let them have control.

Far Away

21 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/far-away/

There's someone powerful far away,
our voices and our stories claim.
I can't hear what they have to say.

This power haunts us, still in sway,
and in submitting we grow lame.
There's someone powerful far away,

And he insists, so we obey,
with voices tuned, though not the same.
I can't hear what they have to say.

And why obey? All power fades,
as every dying day explains.
There must be powers far away,

And yet, away they stay,
As if we here must give things names.
Alas, if there be powers far away,
what do they have to say?

Unauthorized thinking

30 April 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/04/unauthorized-thinking/

> You'd make me laugh if it wasn't forbidden.
> Beckett, Waiting for Godot

So I've discovered Plotinus.
Have you never heard?
He has shaped your own words.

He is waiting to meet us,
but don't be absurd.
He would never disturb

Your most serious dogmas,
for me put them there.
What a curious bird.

All I want
is mystical union
with the Absolute --

is that too much to ask?

Augustine doles out freely fruits of Temple and Academy with no thought
for the plants on which they grow.

Electricity

02 May 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/05/electricity/

The wires, I think,
house an evil god.

I hear him questioning physis,
doubting that all life lives
of its own volition,

and claiming, instead, for himself,
the sole governorship
of all things.

He who can read the signs has now not even
the comfort of solitude,

given this god's omnipresence.

I wonder how long it will be before happens some shocking conclusion.

Streets I Never Knew

04 May 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/05/streets-i-never-knew/

I walk,
and keep on walking.

When I am old,
will any of what I have seen be left standing? Or will it be rubble or, worse still, vapor?
But is that not always
the fate of life, to vanish?
I doubt we could make it permanent,
given that all things are not,
and yet where does it end?
In the place it began,

So I walk,
and I keep on walking.

What calls for poetry?

31 May 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/05/what-calls-for-poetry/

She does,
the one
whose voice you know.

Let Go

06 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/let-go/

Wandering, questioning,
 as before Dawn,
I am sure of this much:
 that we hold our beliefs
far too tightly.

I think back,
 I think back,
  I think back,
 but hear only more riveting.

Rosie, poor Rosie,
 no place for a woman here.

What is the other beginning,
the one without steel-plated Mind,
where things grow as we all know they do?

In the mountains,
I hear baby truths being born.

Begin here. Nowhere else.
This is where you were born and will die.

A rowdy patron observes: "You had to be there!"
I think this is rather apt, and tell him so,
but what more could I tell him?
He knows what it is to know.

Science and Technology

14 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/science-and-technology/

I would like to see
science and technology,
like religion, kept separate from government
and the lives of regular people, who cannot understand
the implications, the power,
the ideas embedded therein,
and are harmed,
who cannot make themselves
from steel, let alone make their world,
and who must let things be.
This means letting them fade.
It's true, science has parts to play,
small ones, since stems
without roots surely wither,
but the point is to till the new soil
'til the new crop comes in.

Fading Feeling

18 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/fading-feeling/

In our peculiar way,
we were always ones
striving for form, and by form
we meant something enduring,
unchanging, but how much upheaval
and violence it took to learn how now this striving must change.

For Helen's sake, let us remember
the ways of our fathers,
sea-tossed as they always were,
reaching from darkness
like tentacles on Ocean's floor.

We are like them now, and must be,
having seen once for all the formation of cracks
in the old Greek edifice,

And thus we must not always be,
knowing full well that not every Greek bearing gifts can be trusted, but also that we are not trustworthy either, so long as we think with stiff minds, and that after all this is what Plato meant. But in our peculiar Greek way we are stiff like ones trained for a phalanx, though soft and bourgeois enough,
not fitting in with ourselves, and not really belonging here either, no better than anywhere--

Thus we must not always be,
we must fade, like a breeze on a soft summer night,
or the call of an eagle near mountains,
and make some new way for the feeling to come.

Light

19 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/light/

At a red light,
when there is no cross-traffic,
a silence deepens
like the space between man and God.

How stupid it feels,
to wait for nothing.

According to some theologians,
God occupies space above beings,
and waits for us there,
as the father of light.

But I prefer when the light changes and things keep moving.

Mulch by the Scoop

21 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/mulch-by-the-scoop/

I am living in the country again,
back after a long sleep,
and I wonder (at times like this)
what that highway is doing here,
near to the place that sells mulch by the scoop.
It is part of the landscape now (we forget but have signs to remind us)
though we don't embrace it
where we are all cow, horse, and buggy.
But do we, too, not love machines and their progress?
We use them to market our mulch by the scoop
and to haul it and bring it home,
and to heat those homes and to light them
and to plug in to our wider world.
Yet mulch by the scoop enchants us
with the call of the earth and convenience,
the call of abundance and freedom from pain.
I have known of no earth like this,
unless broadcast by LED lights on a neon sign,
yet my heart knows these things must remain.
We are proffering mulch by the scoop.
Will you come over highways and see?

Myth at Twilight

23 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/myth-at-twilight/

Will we ever be free of the myth
of some craftsman in the sky
wreaking form over all that must shudder?

I shudder to think it,
but over with the rising sun,
I see others who do not think it.

Lyceum

28 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/lyceum/

Aristotle and friends walking amiably
over a concourse of trees discuss beings, assert that no thing can both be and not be.
In the next room the Christians,
grown weary of faith, re-learn logic but treat it like faith. Thus the Schoolmen indogmafy plausible maxims,
sit firm and erect in the shade of Lyceum.
Aquinas the only true thinker mourns moanfully.
Science emerges, a novum organon,
a new quest to find what things are,
but old faith, an old cast of mind.
The old school now an archeological find,
remains buried, its questions once answered for all.
But the Germans are not quite convinced,
keep on asking why we are not free to defy and to blur. After all,
we are protean beings, and know the old stories well.
But what course still remains for those bred by the ruins of Lyceum?
One looking over the shoulder
to Greek or Medieval or Modern models?
Or one looking forward, which has travelled back,
with a prayer of thanksgiving, a new apprehension
for what every thought must lack?

In the East Room, Dionysians revel agnostically, thrilled to find God scarcely knowable, free from the Categories at last,
but what darkness stirs, waiting to pounce
on those not yet prepared for the mysteries?

Virgin Queens

28 June 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/06/virgin-queens/

Nobody can hurt a man more than his wife, except maybe his mother. They simply have more opportunity, knowing where all of the pain points are, because they,
on good days, massage there. That is one kind of love, but another is taking in stride all the pain dealt
by mother and wife, so that all can belong.
After all, only suffering brings us together,
as all women know. They require it.
I've come to remind you of this, so that you,
unlike many, avoid the allure of false dreams,
which would make virgin queens out of maidens.

Belly of the Whale

11 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/belly-of-the-whale/

Consumed by the fool's errand of making life painless,
we could never be bothered to think along lines that were not predetermined,
defined by the will of the faceless consumers
like us, who ran everything. Speechless, we floundered through chaos and form,
but from time to time one had to wonder what all of it meant, else succumb to the roar of consumption enduring through slogans and signs and most firmly in minds made of mud baked like stone. I was never a part of this, never aligned with the spineless
who bear no weight, who will crack under any demand,
for demanding betrays their life's purpose.

Again, these are errands for fools, but of course fools speak louder than thinkers and rule all but auspicious places, those private lands governed by men who will tolerate no more,
who instead choose to stretch themselves out before knowing and learn what the gods have in store.

The beatings continue, morale doesn't care,
and one wonders how punishment ever was thought to cure suffering, or how anyone stands it.
But stand it they do, if they must.
Deeper silence where agony once named a people.
How now to take heart and oppose this new ocean of troubles,
or else turn to brooding for future's sake?

I sing from the belly of the whale,
which pursues its perfection for all,
which leaves open no quarter for others,
which swallows each culture in all,
which cares nothing for time past or future,
whose whiteness is barely a memory,
whose grayness is given by all.

With the hour both hidden and late,
I cry out for the sea-foam to hear me.

Emerge

11 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/emerge/

In America, we know God changes his mind. We oblige him with all of our talk about time and Democracy. Where, after all, does one find something permanent.
Surely not here, where we bind ourselves freely to change, and await the next Mind, with its talk about how all is fine.
But ennui is outdated, and we feel confined by ourselves
and our origins, soaking with brine, emerge fresh from the foam to remind us
how we know God changes his mind.

Liberty and Justice

11 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/liberty-and-justice/

Someone should tell New England that God has not made up his mind about how to best organize life,
nor should we, being free.
But why freedom? What do we achieve in that ecstasy known by frontiersman, and by them alone? The achievement is justice, though fleeting it be,
and it is not your grandfather's justice.
Then liberty, justice, and us here and now,
in the swirling of time, decide once and for all (not for long) how life is, what it is,
and shall be. But how free shall we be?
Free enough to revisit these questions
posed back at the start, and all answers so far,
with an eye to revision, but not revolution,
assuming no violence is warranted, knowing that violence can never be totally barred,
for it comes from a failure to question in depth and in time. So let's question. Thoreau may have been on to something, and so we may be,
if we ask ever deeper what meaning dwells here,
where we are. What is Liberty? Why it and Justice?
Could either be without the other?

Near Mountains

11 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/near-mountains/

When I consider the electrical wires,
the works of our hands, and when I consider
the cars, and the buildings made of steel,
I ask, what is God that we are mindful of him?

You will think I am being facetious,
but surely these things are our gods.

How have we gone astray? Is it maybe that no one is driving the ship, that our voyage,
once rudderless, must now be captained?
Or is it that someone is driving, and driving badly,
and therefore the crew must resist?
Or is it that both have been tried and retried,
such that now we no longer know which to try?

I suggest thinking harder, and longer,
in some place more tranquil, near mountains.

Who are they?

11 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/who-are-they/

They have built all our highways.
They change how we think.
They've invented vaccines.
But who are they?

They've improved understanding.
They've conquered the moon.
They're enlisting our help.
But who are they?

They speak in equations.
They think like machines, and They dream of control.
But who are they?

Beatific Visions

16 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/beatific-visions/

I doubt those people on television realize they're dressed like angels,
calling us back to a realm we reject,
and I think it's a bit out of place
to put these hopes in masters of commerce,
when such hopes are sky-born or nothing.
What see we in movie stars anyway?
Billboards, book covers, and internet ads
still elicit our peasant repentance.
What for? For not being divine enough,
same as before, and yet let me explain:
none are holy. You're made it this far,
you must know that by now.

It's amazing, isn't it, just how much thought there has been about everything.

Thereby I wander, but what does it mean to be lost in a place that is lost?
It means everything. Stand here with me and observe that at last
all the cracks in the firmament
outline a God-shaped hole.

We are ready for solid food,
culled from earth,
even that which comes only through violence.

Reasonable Measure

16 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/reasonable-measure/

At the end of life's journey
I awoke, not aware yet
of where my road had taken me,
but brightness lit my mind up like a flame. I'll never be the same.
Discursive Reason failed us. Here we wait for some new measure to make chaos something straight, without demanding that it wear the guise of form.
I beg to differ, if by differing
I bring new thoughts to table,
and as far as I am able,
guide our way. But beggars all would trade their place for one in heaven, yet to me that path is barred,
so I use reason in new ways,
feet deep in earth, head free of daemons,
closing in on what it means to be here now,
where I awoke, at journey's end.

Across the sea, I glimpse an image,
be it shade or beast or otherwise,
I only know its visage.
But it calls me with its message,
like a work of human craft.
I say, deception is insidious.
I tell this lonesome image
to release my gaze to this shore,
where I make my only home.

But what home is, I cannot say,
nor can this homely image tell me.

Socrates and Confucius

16 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/socrates-and-confucius/

In Persia, some say the great thinkers
once met on a precursor to the Silk Road.
They discussed how things change and how some stay the same, legend has it, but most they discussed
how beginnings occur, both well-versed in this,
one saying History, the other Rationality.
Neither equipped to dissemble his equal,
they talked after dark, in the desert
where lately Zarathustra laid waste to the mind.
Who can say now what echoes remain there,
or which will endure?

Theodicy

16 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/theodicy/

The Nazis proved that God's law can be violated with impunity for a time. It was, after all, America who stopped them. God was mute.
And if there still be any who would claim that Auschwitz fits some higher plan,
I say I do not wish to serve such Planning
or a God who makes such plans.
With this, I often wonder if Herr Hitler has his final laugh,
for though, of course, we beat them,
one long draught of their Nepenthe
has us losing our identity.
They proved that God is silent
in the midst of desperate anguish.
Who believes now that he listens?
Do the screams not matter much to his big mind? But let us alter here, and ask God what he is. We may be wrong without discarding years of questions. We may ask without demanding certain answers. We may think without deciding in advance. Must God use reason? Why?

A Platonist declares

21 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/a-platonist-declares/

A Platonist declares that all is Soul, but now we doubt it. Rather, we believe in clocks that wind themselves, and Nature too.
But what makes Nature go? We'd love to know, but still we don't. Though answers sometimes run their course, some questions last forever.
But has no one noticed Plato's chosen mode?
In discourse questions outrank answers
two to one. So when a Platonist declares on any subject, greet him with a question,
see how well he knows his master's teaching.
Yet let's not discard a theory for a worse one.
Ask, who makes the clock? Not I. And then ask: Why?

Industrial Man

21 July 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/07/industrial-man/

When I survey Industrial Man
in his anxious glory, his endless competitiveness, I still doubt that his station is final,
that any part of his nature is fixed.
If by now one knows not to assume that the spectre of Progress can save us,
perhaps we can doubt, too, its wrath,
which still animates workers,
machine-like and futile,
in cities all over the world.
You have heard this before,
but my question is different.
It grows from a deeper uncertainty.
Reason defies observation. The chaos is plain, and our planning has ended in time. So the wrath can be doubted, the wrath of the godless mind-in-the-sky
who defies observation, whose wrath
is our animus, naked and pure,
like the God of before, without love,
but that wrath drives its heart I am sure.

There is something uncanny about reality,
sitting out there in the ether,
like a renegade neighbor,
the kind that can never be trusted.
Reality, too, can surprise
even those with the best educations.
I wonder what more it will say,
once the moss has grown over broken traffic lights
and deer play through shattered parking lots.
It likes these places best, because less resists it there. Even here, where traffic flows,
I can hear it call like the sound of bird-shot through tin, the eccentric neighbor
readying himself for adventure.

The machines never sleep, nor do we,
being imitators of our environment,
and somehow we have to compete,
feeling threatened by gadgets
that do it all better than we can,
and so we assert our own dominance whenever we can. Apes that shove one another to the mud, the slow endless endeavor to be king of the hill,
on a hill now maintained by machines
bred by science in underground labs…
Why is there no more sunshine here,
in our minds, where in earlier times
gentle breezes brought birdsong to bear on a plant's slow endeavor to blossom?

The New Frontier

02 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/the-new-frontier/

> It is and it is not, and, therefore, is.
>
> Wallace Stevens, A Primitive Like an Orb

What have we learned in seventy years?
What are the lessons of that war which lately ripped both Europe and Asia
to pieces, that broke our faith, but left us here?
If God is dead, what takes his place?
Or must the place itself change, into something open, free for exploration, undefined?
It is, is not, and therefore is,
just like ourselves, our lives, and our surrounding aura.
Who would dare to pin things down again?
Yet how could beasts like us survive
without restraint and limitation?
We have known the pain of man and his machines on heaven's throne, have suffered Cromwell's vengeful reign for nigh four centuries. This war (the one succeeding, recall, the one to end all wars) is but the climax of the heavenly interregnum. But what person dares to sit on such a throne again?
Are we so human? Human still, despite our deepest cravings, loyal subjects to an absent king. Why can't we let God rest in peace?
We hear the wind disturb the leaves, those covering his grave.
It's us, the ones you chose to save,
and then abandoned to the formless blur,
which is, is not, and therefore is.
Let's on with it, then, to the new frontier,
where our longings are answered more plainly
and with less fear.

Craftsman

20 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/craftsman/

The craftsman in this body (not the one above the stars) devised this poem. Would you know him?

On this rock

20 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/on-this-rock/

On this rock,
I have placed my insignia,
placed it where all can see,
as a warning against what has been
and an omen of what must still be.

On this rock,
I explain my old purpose
in words not yet known to most people, to teach and explain what we're doing here,
lost as we are on Promethean shores.

Aletheian

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/aletheian/

Some do not wish to join the project of empire, even after all these years. I shall call them Aletheian, to distinguish them from Roman soldiers eager for command. They rather seek what's hidden in the inner world of things, a world forgotten in the mad rush for imperium. But be things as they may,
these few are hidden, too, unnoticed in the roaring crowd,
the crowd as blind as ever, and no less so for their service.
Oh, the Aletheians have endeavors too, like maybe breaking through the cycle of hereditary bullying, which, for Caesar, would make servants of us all. But serving whom?
But more than this, these simply watch for signs,
believing that a god, or something, speaks and can be heard. I like this last pursuit
a little, and much more than I like empire.
I think I am just half an Aletheian, and part Roman,
but would like to be much more. I dare say you,
dear reader, many years from now, shall be much more.

At Sea

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/at-sea/

Once in awhile, despite expectations,
you run into someone who knows what they're doing.
Surprising in times like this, but then also familiar, as if in response to a call that you heard all along. It won't last,
but for that moment you'll know what it means to be human. For that moment, all small uncertainties crystallize into a sculpture of rain,
the most precious made permanent at last.
But time chips at it, wears it away
like a vandal, adolescent, without shame.
You thought maybe it could be like before,
when the stars spelled out stories of heroes and mankind obeyed and endured, but time had other plans. And then slowly a new thought emerged, not quite visible, but certainly there like a ship in the fog or an iceberg or some other sculpture. You thought, is this mine or must I wait for another? It has been so long since the last one, you thought of absconding whatever the terms. But this is not your ship, not your voyage. Your journey is here, where you are, on this ground.
I had better remind you that ships come more often now, maybe the old way of choosing won't do, or at least, won't suffice.
I must know where I stand, on the prow
or on land, but in either case, these legs will do.
So will yours. On the ship, watch the seamen so proud and hearty, assured of their artificial discipline. Of course this is mastery, of course this is justice, of course, of course.
But the course is precisely neglected, already decided, not open to question. On land there are always new flowers. Who we are is never so certain.
I like the land better, although I think men
do learn something at sea, to tame chaos,
a Faustian bargain if chaos is in us,

if taken too far, but a call from the sky
to those drowning in worlds without form.

Feet of Rain

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/feet-of-rain/

You learn the way but the way changes.
You walk with feet of rain.
You fear the changing more than the storm.
You sink while looking down.

That is one way of doing it,
but others press in from all sides,
demanding a show. You hesitate, not being a dancer, not being at all. The way is through the rain.
You think you have heard this before,
but the words change. Why won't they stay still? Why can't they remain?
They are not, that is why, and they never were.
The rain moves through the way…

Hitler's Bunker

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/hitlers-bunker/

Americans closing in, after ravaging much of Italy, I wonder, did any ask, "What have we done?
What rubble becomes our heritage?"
If any living would know themselves,
I counsel reflection upon these years
when fascists strove to make Rome stick for all.
But now the rubble (no more storied columns, monuments of power believed), becomes a doom.
Destruction has a new allure, the fasces christen every room, and man no longer wills to be alone. It is the total will that governs even "freedom-loving" people. Where is safe?
There are still mountains, true, but mankind cannot thrive outside the law, and in our time
the law abuses some for fun.
This must be known if we still wish to be made human. Both hard sides of contradiction must be grasped and known.
We need the law. The law abuses.
If there be an easy answer, I don't know it.
This I know: some govern well, but others
move within the doom of Hitler's bunker,
where all hope is lost, the only option death.
Be not like them, consumed by hate,
nor hating them, for then hate wins,
but neither drown in naive love, for man
loves dominance most, for reasons unknown, and this will never change. Carve out a home away from man's cold quest and rule it well. This is called happiness.
One wonders that the Hitlers could not find it seeking total domination from the bunkers of the world.

Lady in the Rain

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/lady-in-the-rain/

Evening mistful after rain,
I saw a woman's perfect form,
no halo, but a song fell from her lips.
She said to hope again,
and all was like the rain.

No, it was not a dream,
no journey through Lothlorien could pass this way,
though she draws from that well,

And who's to say just which
of us inhabited the other?

Mingled Being

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/mingled-being/

What is it that calls for children?
Why do women weep to see their offspring leap through flowers? I suspect it is like that which summons poetry,
what one has called "the unreserve of mingled being."
Hear now how the many voices speak
of loved camaraderie,
as though this be essential to their frame.
I do not know what calls if not enticement to the game of mixture,
turning one and one to something more.
The dance is waiting ere we learn it,
blending what presents with what we are.
So travel cautiously. Beware the swamps that pull things down. Avoid the soggy groundless ground. Instead recall the energy of youth, and how your mother wept.
They were not tears of pity, no, of joy,
to see herself in you, of you, with you.
And mingled with you, Being, in its full array of flowers,
alive to tell.

Such Surprises Must Be

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/such-surprises-must-be/

The way scientists mishandle surprises,
you'd think they were born in a lab
with all variables controlled, where the mother deduced from first principles that a good time had come.
They go on to the end of surprises,
but there is no end to it, no world
of babies by babies for babies.
Can anyone handle the unrest of history?
Nature has laws! they will say,
thus forgetting that emperors need not obey.
So who then shall be emperor?
I'd vote for one who rules justly,
loves mercy, and cares for his country as his own,
one who knows with compassion
the suffering drawn from surprises,
and that such surprises must be.

The Ground is Lava

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/the-ground-is-lava/

Late one morning, I ventured to know myself, like the thinkers demand,
but before I had gone through the threshold,
I saw that the ground had returned to primordial soup.
As I gazed at that chaos, I thought of how children
pretend that the ground becomes lava.
How wise they are, unlike ourselves,
who pretend that foundations are solid
in order that we might erect some grand edifice.
Children know well that foundations are fluid,
and that we just do what we can.
Ask the children how much they believe,
or, importantly, why they believe.
I suspect they have far purer reasons.

Thinking Deeply

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/thinking-deeply/

I have been to the place where truths are born, I have heard
the sirens call me there,
but I rarely return. It is dark there,
and cold, and no homes endure
the hard swirling of winds.
But I'm still thinking deeply, traditions in mind, because
this is the only way to think.
All else is chaos breeding chaos.
But stiffened traditions expire,
a new generation arises,
and all that is left to the thinkers
are keen ears for cold winds of change.

Too Playful

31 August 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/08/too-playful/

The poem grows from the same place
as child's play, the soil of human possibility.
What can we be? Maybe doctors or lawyers or dragon-slayers, or maybe plants or gemstones or rye. But children grow older, and most forget play, though its lessons stay with us, for
we are our playthings, we are what we play,
and at one time you knew that.
I write to remind you, though it is no use,
because patients are sick, because clients are angry,
and dragons are burning down villages, but you are too busy to play with me. If only you knew that your play is play too, we'd grow wiser together,
and maybe you'd learn about truth
and its too playful hold over you.

Old Flames

12 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/old-flames/

As I sit, I remember the point of the story,
the struggle to keep out the cold.
It was always getting colder, no matter the weather,
and we, like frontiersmen, built houses and fires
to keep ourselves warm. But the houses grow old, fires dim, and the embers are hardly remembered.
I say, as I sit, I remember those embers,
how long-dwindled fires once burned in our hearts,
or if not in ours, then in our grandfathers' hearts.
But we are the ones who are here (they are not, or may be but are not as they were), yet their embers remain unremembered. I think that is sad, but not new.
As I sit, I remember a time, and another,
when history was not remembered. I will not give names,
but you likely know that this is true.
There's a cold wind breathing at the door.
It's for us, and against us. I think we do well to remember it. Even the best insulation will never make heat. We will need a new flame.
We must ask where the old flames have gone.

One of Us

12 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/one-of-us/

The veiled criticism always says
how dare you not be one of us.
Yes, be yourself, but first be one of us, of us, of us…

I cannot do it, not with thirty legions,
not for all the world.

Over the Atlantic

12 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/over-the-atlantic/

How many voices drown in that wind, unable to make it across?

Sandcastles

12 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/sandcastles/

I am watching the children build sandcastles.
I know they won't mind, though I think they will wonder what keeps me away. I am not one to join where I know that the wind and the waves will destroy.
But I do not mind watching. Sometimes their achievement is marvelous, but I cannot silence
the sound of the crashing waves. It's like time, you know, after a long day, when the quitting bell rings.
That bell rings for me always, and over such noise little castles of sand have no hold. I don't mind, though, watching, and sometimes I wish I could join them.
It would be like hope, you know, after a long doubt.
But I cannot shake loose of the grip of the sea.
I will watch these new sandcastles fall, like the last,
and leave only some footprints behind.

Afterthought on the Romantics

21 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/afterthought-on-the-romantics/

They strove to bring the dark into the light.
What evident folly, yet an understandable urge to see the dark, there, always. It is there, but it cannot be seen. It is the absence of sight,
a lack of presence. To make this present is to hollow what remains. Instead, we now learn how to build, with subtle lighting, some cool nave
of stone, where light and shadow interplay.
This way we can keep both, and keep them well.

Gettysburg

21 September 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/09/gettysburg/

Before the dawn one evening, I went down to Jackson city, to remember why we here do not live there. It was a cool miseducation in the ways of segregation, but it was not what those elsewhere like to say. I saw a people, many hungry, some devoted, some misguided, one or two with hope to spare – in other words, they were a people like the rest. True, they owned slaves, or those before them did, but this fact cannot be washed away with any amount of blood. We ought to know by now that history is fickle, and remains despite our sternest glare.
There is no way to make it vanish. Nonetheless,
we can move forward, and have done it, though with golden thread to bring us home. Have you observed how every poem stacked in order waits in reserve?
They are like people under the lash of cold machines.
Our words have suffered. They have lied to you, although they had no choice. The words are not the problem, though they are a symptom, and I hope by now you know the disease. I am at ease to write,
it's true, but we are not at ease while living,
and eternal life makes us less easy still. Before the dawn, consider what can still be spoken, and,
more troublingly, think what can speak no more.
It is the silence calling us this time of night.
Beware the apathy of drowning in the noise.
I hear the call of many chain-gangs in the wind.
I hear their rattle, and they will not be ignored
but seek no vengeance. They would like to sleep again and be released at last from pain. Could we oblige them?
I think so, though it would take a serious effort
and one not like what we've dared to try before.

I do not believe in Lincoln. I cannot.
He was a feckless Hegelian, couched in Biblical tones.
He did not govern well. I've said it and will say it again, he cowed to violence, could not admit that states wished to secede. Oh, what a sneaky devil, blind in the face of the obvious. There is no forthcoming millennium where all peoples of all colors live as one. De Tocqueville said so. Yet we try and try and try. I do not know what else we could try, but we at least could notice the obvious, that humans are still human despite the violence.

We are here, as we have always been, as prone to hate as love.
It will not change. What wars are necessary to teach this once and for all?
I fear the answer as I fear the blight of winter.

Why am I here, able neither to remember nor forget? To absorb solemnity left by dying men? Or to be thoughtful about how little we know? These men, brave men no doubt, died hard, but why?
Should we dare also to die? Again? But why?

Had Freedom died? Or was it just then mortally struck?
Why was the new birth necessary, and could it be needed again?
And needed by whom? I may digress, but you would not forgive serenity at a time like this, when lady liberty labors to bring life into the world. Would we, then, also be reborn? Some time ago was one, and yet another, who spoke hauntingly of birth. Where have they gone?
Where have we gone? I think old freedom lives and could not be *re*born, for it was never born.
It merely is, beyond the pale of all that ever comes to womb. It merely is, on its own terms, in its own time. Say Lincoln knew this.
Likely he'd forgotten, like most others of his day, but say he knew it. Could we have a greater leader? Could mankind then rise past folly after all? Just say he knew it. Say he knew it for the scores of years of bloodshed we've endured.
War is not pretty, no, but neither is our peace.
The fools immortalize his words, against the wishes of those very words. I'd have this plaque removed, along with all the noisy monuments, and rather listen closely as the ghosts here tell their tale.

All Silence

14 October 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/10/all-silence/

This moment I'm writing to you
as a man who has lived to see death not in morbid obsession but only in rapturous reality. Yes, it is true, there are things and not just me and you.
Answer softly, my sweet, when I ask you to be near me now as things fade.
We are dying as sure as we're living.
But listen for me past the hearth flare, in chill air.
I wait for you there in all silence.

As Ever

14 October 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/10/as-ever/

We no more renew the song
of time wherein by masquerade
the "mortal dross" transforms into eternity. No more! We live, as ever, in the flowing, thingly river, day
by day dissolving in new ways of speaking thought, and so we ought,
if time has brought us here, if time itself
would like to bring us near.

Time

14 October 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/10/time/

Walk here on this beach with me, where time is, in the evening of its missionary gaze, the goal to save all who will hear. Walk here with me, where gods can die, and often do.
Walk here, but slowly. Know these waves,
the ones you've learned how not to hear.
You'll hear them now, so gently falling down upon all things. So time falls, so it goes,
and so we go, into the crypt of time,
where all days are reborn, are born, and die.

No Reason

25 October 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/10/no-reason/

Many things happen for no reason.
We dare to admit it now.
The future, hazy, approaches.
We hold a wet finger to the wind.
It answers thus: mankind unfettered,
the child a universe at play.

Risible Time

25 October 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/10/risible-time/

Born against odds in a risible time, thou shall rise, as thy parents
before thee did rise, and shall fall
up and back to that risible sky,
with its emptiest center, near time.

After Tomorrow

04 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/after-tomorrow/

I remember from time to time
how those moments when humans are worse than isolation resolve into moments when all one can do is sit quietly, staring off into tomorrow, as if it won't also be much like today, and I wonder what happens the day after tomorrow when all of us wake up anew.

It is not for me

04 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/it-is-not-for-me/

Here they are, as ever, making the weaker argument appear stronger, uneven in thinking, so tipsy in mind. What great folly, if even the end of historic progressions or else
the result of some King's stiff command.
We are tired by now and its restlessness,
drawn to all corners of the imagination
by a call no less real than a fairy-tale and no more real than the earth. It has drained us of every ambition, but this is no reason to scream, no, the screaming is part of the problem. I ask you for once to be ruled, if you will, if you can,
but it is not for me that I'm asking.

No Entry Beyond

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/no-entry-beyond/

We are free now after long bondage,
no longer seeking to mate with the Truth,
but instead care to know it, as thinkers, not lovers. I dare say this was a very long time in coming, not empty
but full, at long last, of ourselves and our families, countries, and tribes.
We are full of reality's emptiness,
brimming with void, and in love
with each other, as passion demands.
We are free, very free (can it be?)
We are wise beyond years, beyond tears, beyond ghosts of some greater beyond
who no longer hold any sway here.

Thing in Progress

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/thing-in-progress/

I shall pull back the curtain,
peep under the veil, at the thing
in its progress. It is not done yet, and yet is the progression in it or in me? This is by now old music.
We may do more asking for origins.

The Gospel According to Us

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/the-gospel-according-to-us/

If you'll listen, I will tell you of the day before the stars were born
like yesterday, but more in tune with now.
This is the gospel according to us,
not some forgotten fairy-tale
from days gone by, but this here now
by us for us. This is our gospel, by the power of consensus, reigning free
across America, where we decree
what each thing is and dare
no other. We have tasted majesty from sea to shining sea, now dare to speak, and be not worried
if this flag speaks not for thee.
We'll make it speak, with every fiber of each being, named by us and therefore there, existing solely for ourselves, who, speaking, make the world of images derived from prior times, the sea
of echoes pouring through our lives
as history. Are these not also here, informing things? Are we so free that each decree becomes a law?

Untested Ways

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/untested-ways/

I am wondering what will become of us, after all this time. I am wondering just how strange time is, and how strange
we are, living here, at the end of it.
We're aware now that Jesus never attended church, so we follow his footsteps at last, but what of it? I suspect there is more to this story, and until we get down to the bottom of it,
I wonder if we will find peace.
There are many paths forward, but each
is a severance from what precedes.
This is saying the road does end here,
but some new ones begin. I think I shall explore a few untested ways,
for your sake, and for mine. This way,
one of us at least keeps moving.

No Will to Deceive

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/no-will-to-deceive/

God has grown neurotic these last few centuries, ravaged by ships sailing seas where no ships had dared dream before, but this is nothing, just men chasing power, yet power is what makes God go. Are we listening now?
I remember, I can never forget, how the days before ours were like fire in the night, but the night lasted longer and swallowed that flame. We're the same when we ask for forever, though knowing full well it's beyond us. Where we live time reigns, and the best we can do is believe. I can only remind you again and again, but I'll do that with grace in my heart and no will to deceive.

Uncertain Times

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/uncertain-times/

Lincoln roamed over the cavern of godlessness
like a leader
in uncertain times.

After "A Late Walk" by Robert Frost

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/after-a-late-walk-by-robert-frost/

My walk is later, yours
is later still, the animus the same, no time until we reconcile. This winter carries history, this harvest has a name (it's you). I warrant that the aftermath dishevelled all of truth.
But there's no matter, so they say.
Who'd even try to go some other way.
Perhaps a strong-voiced bird will rise and sing another day.

Freedom's End

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/freedoms-end/

I stand upon a precipice,
the great cliff white as snow,
and fear a darkness coming yonder
over fields we used to know.
The day is cool and feckless,
but the night is coming in,
and we are hungry, we are tired,
by the gravity of sin.
There are no words between us,
no embraces bring us home,
and in the darkness I descry
the end of all things we have known.
I am no meager prophet,
and this is no meager poem.
I believe in new beginnings
grown from darkness overgrown.
So take this next step with me.
Through the doorway we will wend
and walk along the newfound pathways
on the way to Freedom's End.

Persuasion

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/persuasion/

It is strange how our rulers pretend to believe that they serve us, as though we don't know that each offering merely entangles us more in their web. Still we go on, each feeling prescribed
by the business of business,
but free! we are free! very free!
If that is what we call it to be inauthentic or else.
Who could want any service
besides what is standard?
I tell you we could,
with a bit of persuasion.

Darkness Becomes You

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/darkness-becomes-you/

In darkness I am reaching from a still place, in this empty space for you, whoever you are. It is not clear that we are here, but in these moments darkness becomes you, and I can see that after all is said and dreamed,
there is a silence and its teaching.

History

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/history/

It occurs to me now and then and from time to time that our role must be: preserve the living and keep out the dead.
This is history, this is our role in it,
let us respect and partake of this process.

Crimson Days in the Depths of Time

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/crimson-days-in-the-depths-of-time/

Into the sea he dove, toward another land,
this one no less deplorable, unneutered, never filtered,
and he swam. The currents pushed and pulled his form, and twisting, writhing, he found sand, the stuff of mountains long eroded, then descended. Were these not the sands of time, at last, now freed here from their hourglasses?
Time would tell, as only time could tell.
And so he fell, but falling, not as out of Eden,
rather falling as one drawn to depths by kinship
to those depths, or maybe drawn by some dark gravity.
Leviathan in chains, he feared, would wait for him down there,
or so they say, but on this day he little cared what fate awaits him, little cared for self at all when put against the call to sink or fall below the waves.
In crimson days, in patterned waves, he feared the rise of troubled years, nor dared to counter them with tears,
for they demanded something more, a new beginning,
if a new path could be won, and so he dove to chart a course, lay some foundation. He struck rock the second time, this not surprising. He had heard of rock before, though never seen it.
These he saw, and knew at once that they could serve him. He delved hard, and threw himself against the rocks, and when few broke, he knew again that these were firm. But when he moved them, when he placed one on another, both proved worthless, turned to sand. He groaned, but, still resolved, took sand and pressed it in his hands, until as glass it stayed.
He now had made his way, and none could take it,
so he claimed, but came a rumble from those depths of things forgotten, drifting memories of all that sand has been. This troubled him, his glass was cracked, but there could be no going back. He cut his hands there, leaving drops of blood reflecting throughout time, and though those depths had proved unkind, it's said that he still loves them, like a child, like a patriot, to the end.

In Any Case

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/in-any-case/

Those with the higher sense, who observe our way of life,
can only say "it's all wrong" so many times before they go crazy, so most just stop saying it. But none can stop feeling it. Why, after all, make things permanent?
Process is all, and the process itself is in process.
Or am I repeating something said before?
I am certain that this much is true, we know little, no more than our forebearers, and we all know how that all ended (or have we forgotten?) In any case, let me remind you that change can be friendly,
but so can the law, so we'd better plant one foot in each.

Ave Maris Stella

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/ave-maris-stella/

Stella, bathed in lapis, azure
waves of sky, pray tell me
whence thy rays of amber light?
Am I your child, or am I self-made, as prophets say who guide our way tonight?
If any be whose thoughts are free,
I say they well may think of thee
yet still be free, but more to those who find some thing objectionable inside,
I write with hope to change their minds.

Why Reason?

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/why-reason/

I have come to you, naked like this,
in the death throes of God, being pregnant with words and with meaning,
to answer your question with another:
Why reason? To make ourselves stable?

Hegel

29 November 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/11/hegel/

What did they do to you, Hegel,
to make you so blue and somber?
Perhaps they withdrew when a staying
was due, or perhaps they demanded the truth.
It is sobering, isn't it, being here dead
as a log, in these pages, just one more firm concept to break through?

Back to the Mines

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/back-to-the-mines/

I think sometimes we shall never escape
from the general, all-around clusterfuck (pardon the language, it applies) of humanity always and everywhere, in general confused about what it all means, about what meaning means,
or why meaning is so indispensable.

Oh well, let's back to the mines
for another long spell of formation through labor.

Why Obey?

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/why-obey/

Could it be that for some definition of "we", we must leave on the pathways of time
some beliefs etched on signposts
for others to see?

You Are The Way

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/you-are-the-way/

Listen to me. Listen (I will speak) to this beginning out of no-thing (yet not nothing). There no more shall be interminable deductions from infallible first principles, not even if those principles be liberal. We are all that's left, my friend.
The way is you, my friend from afar. You are the way to me.

To Tell This To You, or Changing of the Gods

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/to-tell-this-to-you-or-changing-of-the-gods/

I walk out one morning like any other
and come back the same as myself, for once chosen and spoken for one and no other. I am well-versed in things farmers know, also tech-savvy, and neither thing
will be relinquished, but I relinquish (kenosis)
the past in the present, the future in the imagination. So notice the soldiers, so stiff and so rigid, turn cold to attention, about face, and march one last time to a palace now vacant, and we,
we are not who we thought we would be. If stars change, I guess we must change too.
I am writing to tell this to you.

Spring Cleaning

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/spring-cleaning/

Morning comes, and birds no longer silent fill the air with song. The night was long, but this day comes with cheer. Today is cleaning day, when old mess goes where order comes to stay. It is the only way.
Note how the sky is flushed with light,
new colors wash the old away. I wish for you alive and gay to meet me in the garden. There we'll talk our cares away until the day is spent. I have a special gift for those who only can obey, and one for those who never do. It is no wonder which are you. The moon is rising, and the night is crisp and clear. It is the air that you have been so troubled for, at last,
so clear that one is wondered to the core.

Vortex Afterglow

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/vortex-afterglow/

In the afterglow of the morning, I walked to the edge of a growing circumference, never in doubt,
not resolved, but still present, like one from another room,
and I saw there before me an image, but what it portended no words can express. Yet it took me by eye and led into the nearest horizon, that place where the shadows have form and vice versa, and there I saw only my dreams of tomorrow, a fantasy littered with chaos and rhyme. There the sun never set, but stayed stuck in its setting, a sculpture one mis-takes for living.
Soon after the journey reminded of home, so alone
I walked backwards, until stretched by hands unlike mine through the vortex of time to beginnings, as well as to ends, before all as my witnesses ready to go and to find.

Compromise

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/compromise/

The schools are at it again, with their furor
to make a new movement, or else make an old one.
I'll tell you, this will not end well, nevermind
how the old ways have fared. I say clearly,
I want to keep liberty and biology, sir,
and I am not now willing to compromise.

Marxists

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/marxists/

The other day I walked so far
I could not see my home.
The Marxists say such has to be for any who would roam.

But I remain uncertain, even though they know my heart.
Yes, I remember, yes, I know,
and yes, I still do see the stars.

In Memory

15 December 2022
https://poems.culturing.net/2022/12/in-memory/

I open the door. It is not clear whose being-there disturbs my being here, but waves of pure vibrations meet me there. I am a man
one says, another soy un hombre, one je suis etc…
here we are in memory all the same. We differ outwardly, perhaps inwardly too, yet all recall the lessons of a teacher who knew something. Open the door upon a field, a pasture, castle in the distance.
Is it home? Or are you longing for another?
What is longing, just be-longing without being?
Let us long, then, till we find a set of beings
we can store within our memories. I'll wait here for you, patiently, recalling what I know.

Elite Waters

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/elite-waters/

I have dipped my toes in elite waters,
but they proved too cold for me. So instead I am here (I am writing to you) about love and its answers to questions.

Horizons

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/horizons/

> Where did we get the sponge that could wipe the horizon away?
> Nietzsche, The Gay Science

From Cromwell it came, with vengeance,
for days were not trusted
as long as a Catholic lived, and with Providence on our side
we strove forth for Britannia,
Science and War side by side.
It was then that the ground
was made firm,
and thus all are now born
in laboratories, laboring, true,
for some queen they know not,
some Elizabeth mouldering probably,
but no true woman. No man of science fares well with a woman, no wonder,
for women require horizons, and science requires the sponge. But no matter, has Germany fared any better, or must we look deeper and learn of Greek/Roman horizons?

Slumber Much Better

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/slumber-much-better/

Again I find myself alone in the dark, while the Christians dance madly in imaginary light.
What a pity that all of this suffering goes on unpunished.
I think there will come a time for licking these wounds, but until then I slumber much better without interference.

Specimens

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/specimens/

Are we to remain collections of human specimens in the test-tubes
of America, or are we to become men?
And what would that mean?

Wait For Another

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/wait-for-another/

In the aftermath of clockwork decaying,
from prisons of the mind, arise new men
of stone unbroken and yet brittle to the end.
What for? If Übermenschen all, then we are lofty though we fall, for with some hopes a certain madness lurks in wait. Say more, bon esprit, with less. Do be the best, but know of other figures at the door.
You are no child now, new friend, you grown-old thing,
yet I have seldom felt such shelter from your wing.
Is this, then progress? Or must we wait for another?

Think Not Absolutely

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/think-not-absolutely/

There's a shimmer on the air, comes flowing over days and years, to us, who here and now decide to make things clear no more, who think not absolutely, then think pure and free with obstacles removed, and breath returning.

As Life May Yet Be

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/as-life-may-yet-be/

Wordsworth said of a poem:
emotion recalled in tranquility.
Now I say otherwise. Mine are like ships tossed by storms, lost at sea, like reality, never
at port in the kingdom of sheep
who fight no significant battles and want things done for them -- adventurer poems, explorer poems,
as anxious as life may yet be.

Sick With Struggle

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/sick-with-struggle/

Here we are, still monotheist saints
or else old hoplites with no phalanx, sick with struggle, and yet knowing of no other…
what voice calls? Is it the morning dove,
or is it just fair Juliet, the wise man's bane?
She has no other name, for she is fair
no longer than a season. All loves end
the same, as sorrows waver, with a whimper,
and mankind remains enthralled to thee,
O time, the muse of all deep divers,
dwelling as you do beneath the waves.

Strangers

17 January 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/01/strangers/

As I sit by candlelight,
I know the strangers of the night
who creep by windows fair and bright
to haunt the streets of all delight,
and all the days of love grown cold,
and all the stories never told,
and all the crying eyes behold
the lying eyes both young and old.
I see them in their shadows waiting,
see their fearful forms debating whether love or lies abating offer respite to their waiting,
whether love or lies can stir
the shadows that have stolen her,
the one whose love was soft as fur
who bristles now with prickly hide.
So come sit by my candlelight.
Come feast your eyes upon the sight
as strangers in the strangest night sit man and man, sit side by side.

Emptiness That None Can Understand

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/emptiness-that-none-can-understand/

We have not proved that life be regular,
only have made padded cages for ourselves
where all is regular. Life remains the same,
a formless void apart from us, so full of mystery
and emptiness that none can understand.

Rest Unassured

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/rest-unassured/

With the shadows dawning, with dawn descending,
I call for you, weeping, alone in the meadow,
with words for renewal. I say rest unassured, be aware but not pure. There are days on horizons not noticed before. As for us, it could be that this setting defines us, but that is no reason to wallow.

Nutrition by Faith Alone

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/nutrition-by-faith-alone/

> Dinner options: (1) Take it (2) Leave it
>
> Local Sign

In America we believe God somehow powers
our food with his majesty, making infallible
all of our culinary experiments.
Call it Nutrition by Faith Alone. All that matters is that we believe, as if no thing has substance,
as if, to use Plato mistakenly, thoughts are more real than things.
But we doubt that, and say so, but know of no other.
I wonder what Asia would think?

Dwindle

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/dwindle/

In the midst of plurality, egos must dwindle (somebody tell Whitman) but maybe they need not extinguish.

The Promise of the Lady

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/the-promise-of-the-lady/

Come to the temple,
the Lady is waiting,
with courtesans towing
the train of her robe.
She invites you to enter.
She patiently gazes
upon your small splendor
but does not refuse you.
Her form soft and slender invites you again
to become what was promised
long since at this temple.

The gateway before you,
your form soft and nimble,
she beckons you and you must go.
But don't worry: her promise is good and her temple will still stand long after.

Like No Angel

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/like-no-angel/

Wandering homeward, overland past German towns destroyed by too-free thought, past English clocks unwound and French hearts broken-hearted, stands a man,
not quite your size, some large American, unsteady on his feet.
He knows too little, feels too much,
but means to help in any way he can.
He feared one day
the old world would cave in and need the new. It never did. Instead it hardened into something like itself, with just a thin veneer of tolerance. And so it wandered, as he too would wander,
homeward, like no angel one had ever seen.

A more tolerant order

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/a-more-tolerant-order/

We cannot replace law with tolerance, however much we try. I suggest instead aiming for a more tolerant order, a law that embraces diversity but does not enforce it.
For tolerance never puts bread on the table, though lawfulness can, through cooperation (and don't be deceived that cooperation comes through more tolerance). Laws create trust and cohesion
but also cause friction where not all agree.
It may be that universal laws must be few,
but I hope we agree that our mutual survival is something worthwhile, to be cherished.

Night Sweats of the American Dream

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/night-sweats-of-the-american-dream/

The Radium Girls, the serial killers,
and all night sweats of the American Dream…
how many kinds of peanut butter
does a civilized people need?

All products of experiment,
all experiments neverending,
all the people entertained.

And yet I feel no disdain
for this ship or its sailing,
for as it goes down I go with it.

The Quest for the Immortal Self

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/the-quest-for-the-immortal-self/

> After all, it is you and I who are perfect, not the next world.
> Allen Ginsberg, America

Have we found it? I've looked under every belief, and found nothing.
Not even despair, nor ecstatic self-reformulation (the new dialectic) can grant this old wish. But I wish that our days were more even, that sunshine and moonlight spoke softly together and on equal terms. Do you hear?
There are so many hours left, then no more.
This is how it always goes, not enkindled
by immortal flame, but descending in whispers, no longer itself, not the same. But this is not the cause for more triumph, no celebrations here.
Rather, sleep, with its own quiet permanence,
must end each day, most men say,
yet it also begins the next day, fresh, anew.
I am speaking to you, and for you, but you know more than I can ever say.

The Sound a Plant Makes

21 February 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/02/the-sound-a-plant-makes/

Will any number of plants relieve the pressure?
No, the iron rages on toward tomorrow, restless, without reservation. Do any remain who hear the moan beneath the steady drone of sure-footed, still uncertain electricity? The moan of earthly things, those things, alas, that are not standardized, because the earth, alas, is not a factory. Try as we might, it still is what it is, and, troublingly, is what we are.
No number of plants will relieve the burden of care, nor the pain of our carelessness. There is a tight symbiosis of everything, always,
and some humans know that. But this is no
amicable reverie, longing for forgone perfection, which never existed. This is but the next step forward.
We've learned well that nature can harm us,
that not all its processes will be beneficent.
Now we must learn how to pick and to choose
and to nurture those things that sustain us.

I have inscribed some future epitaph,
forged in times of strife unlike our own.
It is a tale of war inscribed on bones ne'er brittle, by command. These bones speak now, or so the story goes, and yet I weep
for those who militarized the world,
who could not demilitarize their souls.

Ahura Mazda (the Question Remains)

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/ahura-mazda-the-question-remains/

All hail Ahura Mazda, all hail!
Or fall by the Great King's sword!
I am Cyrus, slayer of nations,
and builder of all that remains.
In the name of Ahura Mazda
I rule over Persia, the land of my fathers.
Begrudge not my epitaph. You also worship Ahura Mazda. If not, then how do you remain?

The myth of Progress is Ahura Mazda,
The law of money is Ahura Mazda,
The pain of tolerance is Ahura Mazda,
The god of feelings is Ahura Mazda,
Deified sexuality is Ahura Mazda,
New-age bullshit is Ahura Mazda,
The cult of personality is Ahura Mazda,
Democratic Values are Ahura Mazda, Both you and I are Ahura Mazda,
or else we could never remain.

Socrates versus Ahura Mazda,
the philosophic struggle against all of Persia remains undecided, though not for lack of trying.
The question remains whether any accomplishment stands with finality, or whether any question remains.

I disbelieve you, Ahura Mazda.
No power controls the totality of events.

The Throne of Cyrus

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/the-throne-of-cyrus/

I feel the weight of Cyrus,
feel it pulsing, feel it moving through these very words, within though not without. I feel inspired and afraid. When bones are laid in stone-faced mausoleums, when the Shah himself weeps madly, when the architects
of rule both here and there speak only well,
I am afraid. What fingers clutched the sceptre as all Persia trembled? Then sang highest praise?
Perhaps the victims of abuse defend abusers,
love abusers, with a love that can't be tamed.
If this be so, how would we know?
With minds beclouded, thoughts well-trained,
we'd sing the hymns of him who put us in our place. True, Greece and Rome have put up manly struggles, to what end?
To place themselves upon the throne?
And what of us? Do we dare disabuse, again,
before that mighty throne?

Come Again

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/come-again/

It has come again, this time
so new, having punctured the sky
I am writing to you, asking why,
and do not even try to deny it,
no, this is here now, here and now,
and tomorrow comes true
if once listened through you.

The Drums of Alexander

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/the-drums-of-alexander/

Alexander stood finally tall on Persepolis burning. This was the vengeance Ionia craved, the dream of a thousand hoplites realized at last.
But what was that wind? O great King, have you done this? And had you no doubts?
Later on one will stand here and wonder as you failed to wonder. Were not these baths lovely, with children at play in the spring?
Rubble now, though perhaps all ends thus,
though perhaps not as swiftly as this.
Have you done it, or does some Ahura still haunt these hallowed grounds? What was really at stake, basileus, in so much destruction?
And why do I still hear your drums beating, louder now, over the Atlantic?

Small All the Same

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/small-all-the-same/

Caught up withal in the most divine madness
we crash through the Phrygian stables and lather on filth, with such glee that no shepherd or pen can contain us.

We crash also through all white fences
on main street, or any street — crash
as those wild as we are who have seen through the curtain the man at the machine.

What a small man indeed. Shall we triumph, or are we still small all the same?

Unfriendly

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/unfriendly/

After all these years one would have thought that deleting Facebook would be easier. After all, it is only a website among many. But strangely pernicious, its popular draw, even buying and selling turned into a struggle for approval (to say nothing of genocide).
What is this pull, which determines so much, means so little. I cannot escape any other way than the old coward's way, or the nobleman's way of thick walls. I can still keep it out, have no fear, but lament that we cannot cooperate. One would have thought this would be the point,
not to lord my success over others, or over myself
lord successes of others, but rather to speak together, quietly, under the setting sun. Until Facebook supports this,
I abstain, and expect next to nothing.

The Realm of Reason

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/the-realm-of-reason/

Have we tired yet of clocks and steamships?
Maybe old Corcyra, maybe Salamis can shake these rusty bones, but maybe not. This realm of reason, sacrilegious blend of Greece with Persia, shall soon end, and maybe then new thoughts of empire flecked with liberty shall emerge. But is it rather that Hellenic freedom simply can't be 'suaged? Apollo gives his dictates pure, non-partisan, so irony befalls those who are partial to Apollo. It's a structural deficiency belying all our thought. Let's think again, with rightful honor paid to Greece, with due respect for Cyrus, Xerxes, and with half a glance to China,
just to have a fuller picture.

So Very Greek

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/so-very-greek/

It is sad, don't you know, to be living here now and to know that the runner from Marathon
lost his way, for he founded an empire of thought,
not a tribe of free families, so very Greek was he,
and like no Greek had ever been before… I think Plato would mind being kin to such savagery, such wars
as turn on their victors, devour them, then reign forever.
This is not Platonic, nor Roman, nor English,
but oh it was Greek, was so very Greek indeed.

Larger Accomplishments (Pragmatism)

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/larger-accomplishments-pragmatism/

Must they be true to be useful, or is it that laws grease the wheels of society,
giving us form, and through form, giving trust?
Perhaps this is their value, not cosmic obedience to cosmic justice, but immanent trust in each other which leads to much larger accomplishments.

As She Will

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/as-she-will/

She grasped my hand, and off we flew toward a prior world, with gods yet true.
We turned to you, and said Remember what was said by those lain hundreds dead before the sun set sadly on the few who still remained. For here was Greece, where once a Lady clothed in stone
called forth at Athens for all Greeks, and here was Ch'in where that same Lady pulled her maidens to the River.
Know their stories if you dare to live as long as they
and burn forever after, but take care that you do not become too loyal, for she comes in many guises, as she will.

Not even sure who to ask

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/not-even-sure-who-to-ask/

Even the clock on my HVAC adjusts itself automatically, like some divine conspiracy of old, but these gods of technology want us to keep life ship shape, want each detail aligned with some higher design of pure reason. Whose reason? We ask now pathetically, not even sure who to ask.

Saving Daylight

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/saving-daylight/

When is there an end to it, the wailing drone of time, the fleeting hours, days or seconds of our lives, the nonstop blow of death's lone foghorn? Not in this life nor another. We must live among the vanishment, and live as best we can. But does it not belie our hubris that we dare tune time itself for maximal efficiency?

Plain and True

20 March 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/03/plain-and-true/

I watch them working slowly, barely knowing how they serve
the growing tyranny, the urge to please the people, as in Greece so long ago. They are no better, when libido dominandi reigns,
as it does reign, in Europe as before.
But Christian chains could not restrain the beast,
so what hope do we have? Some say more earthbound hopes, like those of China's past,
to give all dignity, a place upon the stair.
No more enslaving, no more liberty,
but letting dialectic rest in peace.
Give each his duty plain and true.

At Eleusis

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/at-eleusis/

Follow these steps, if you dare descend here unaware, and be made known before a demos that is known. First wander here, then there, but watch! for grasping fingers in the dark. They cannot harm you more than life can harm you. Step here through this opening, join these others, soon you'll know. Behold! the goddess flies!
She rises from the tomb! It is Demeter, goddess of the corn. Consider how the corn,
with many seeds, may grow, when this plant
sinks below. There is no other way.
Consider well, and be thus nourished,
threefold blessed by life, by birth,
and by their cousin death.

If He Would Speak Today

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/if-he-would-speak-today/

If he would speak today, the Poet must be modern, must be metal, but he must as well be living. He must vivify the modern soul.

Some Natures

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/some-natures/

Some natures are harmful,
despite all theology to the contrary,
and we are responsible for knowing
the good, not the bad.

What time is this

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/what-time-is-this/

They are proud to have learned their lessons and never question. I wince in their presence.
I have never learned their lessons. What time is this,
that comes when all are sleeping, like a cock about to crow?

On Whose Authority

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/on-whose-authority/

The people demand a show, like always,
but now ever ringing between their ears growls a question: On whose authority? Whose?

Sources

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/sources/

No more the uneducated masses,
now the miseducated masses,
squished in one mass by a craving
for universalizable maxims.
O Kant! Father Kant! Hast thou wrought this?
Or must we look deeper for sources?

The Question of Democracy

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/the-question-of-democracy/

The People are not worthy of their servants
when those servants serve with honor, when "most people" rule the hearts of men, when servitude is servile and not grand. The People groan at honor, moan for pleasure, lack the common ground which makes men noble, who are products of that ground and of no other. Thus those fight for what produced them while the People (hear me!) claw and scratch the same.

But now what of it? Shall we have another war, or is it simply undecidable, this question of democracy? I say no war can answer what remains so fundamental. But why only Greeks and their inheritors have wrestled with this question is more likely to bear fruit, and bear it soon.

Something About Plato

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/something-about-plato/

There's just something about Plato that led to his preservation. Was it the lofty ideals, or was it simply his extra gear, the secret room of the mind
that would open to him, and him alone?
If the latter, we do well to praise him
but not to emulate him.

Only through turmoil does genius bear fruit. Many could grow but don't, because peace does not call out for change, only troubles bring change,
only change summons genius, but genius endures. We do well to take care before summoning genius. We may not like what it says.

Who are we?

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/who-are-we/

The peoples of the Mediterranean
were always pretending to be gods or descended from gods or becoming like gods, and one wonders how far this can take us. If creatures like us act like gods, it would surely destroy us, but if we do not,
then who are we?

culmination

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/culmination/

You would think that by now
we'd be perfect, we've striven
so hard all these years
that no pain could emerge
which we could not destroy,
that with gods on Olympus
surrounded by heroes and victors of various wars and games
we would celebrate, nectar
in one hand, machines in the other,
but why is this always just out of reach?

The Way of the Night

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/the-way-of-the-night/

Like no one's business, I entered the place of the skull, on a mission to root out those staining the temple.
'Twas a dark and stormy time in my mind,
but all indications say all is fine.
After some deliberation, prepared for denial and banishment, into the tomb I crept, and was swept by a wind like no other, from beyond, toward death, but then also toward something outside of death, to some origin speaking through dreams. I believe it was something like truth,
but not nature, for nature cares little for truth, or for us. It was empty, but this was alluring, a void that could drain the false fullness of things,
so I leapt, and some part of me left me for ever, to wander the shores of Elysium, or else to die
but to die in a way more refined,
with more grace, with aplomb,
in the way of the night.

Little Bird

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/little-bird/

Little bird sings of the break of spring,
new wonders appear, but a soft note
of warning reminds her companions that some dangers lurk past horizons.

Good Eyes

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/good-eyes/

I was born sighted in a tribe of the blind,
who, never seeing, are never aware that there are things to be seen. I was born nonetheless, and pay homage for that, if for little that followed. With my eyes
I've seen man betray man, finding pleasure
in cruelty, time after time, but no wonder,
since wonderful things must be seen.
Would you like me to help with your unbelief?

Untold Misery

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/untold-misery/

How can there have been so much and be so little remaining? Time with its cup of lethe, panacea,
so they say. But what good is it,
being lost, without even wounds for guidance?

Wallow

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/wallow/

Who can stand them, obsessed with appearing divine, only half aware of humanity or of its frailty,
lost in the heavens pulled earthward
to wallow away from it all.

Duty

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/duty/

There are those who accept the old Duty
and those who make smashing a Duty,
but where are those moving past Duty?

Some Other

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/some-other/

Upon the way backward to what Plato meant (it's for you, bon esprit, all for you)
in this desert I stand with no road and no path and no map
and where even the sky is blank and I wonder what anything means in this way, with myself to blame
or to praise for the barren expanse,
but not satisfied owning it,
searching instead for some other whose cause is as good as my own.

The Protestant

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/the-protestant/

The Protestant weeps alone in the corner,
his own priest,
and not a very good one.

Contrition

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/contrition/

I believe we are waiting for Caesar,
although we won't like when he comes.
Diversity often breeds unity,
but by the sword, through an act of contrition.
If Greece, if Rome, if Persia, if England succumbed to this, what hope have we?
Praise the emperor? Thus keep your head?

The Scientist

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/the-scientist/

The scientist pauses, haunched
like a cat of the mind, poised for pouncing, emboldened by Truth which has turned out to be a simple case of precision in measurement. He is ready for mysteries to explain themselves
clearly, distinctly, without hesitation.
But after the clock strikes five,
as he hangs up his lab coat,
a question arises which he is unable to answer:
what are we to measure?
and how shall we choose?

Stop the Bombing

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/stop-the-bombing/

Amazing isn't it, how easily one now can say what once got one killed.
But if one or if many rebel, one must ask, to what purpose? If done
as a duty and not mere licentiousness, surely some pause is demanded, or even required. So stop the bombing, so Christ is risen, and so the new faith, when it comes.

Monotheism

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/monotheism/

Will monotheism suffice?
Or must we look under?
Revise the old questions,
discover the author(s) of nature.

Are they One? Or Many?
If many, are they equally wonderful?

Menagerie of Rules

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/menagerie-of-rules/

There are no universalizable maxims,
no fixed rules, no solid ground
which we could bring from place to place.
All rules are local, but perhaps there are good habits, good technique, for those who swim within the sea, that cold menagerie of rules which never ends.

The Thin Veil

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/the-thin-veil/

How many graves will it take before somebody notices? Aye, you will say some have noticed before, but few feel what the dying must feel. Let me tell you, it is not less hostile than life, nor more cold than compassionless love.
You will answer, but I cannot hear,
being rapt by the shimmering veil,
the thin veil that divides men from murder
and rustles against drums of war.

They May Be Right

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/they-may-be-right/

I was here before, but did not know it.
Now I know, but that has not made me any wiser.
See the lovers entwined on the beach before dawn.
Unassuming teachers, little did they know that I saw.
But rising beyond them the sea was a formless expanse.
The light broke through the horizon and cracked the surface.
I could not remember who I was waiting to meet.
It was like every dawn in uniqueness, though still being dawn.
As the lovers shuffled I saw ever clearer day coming.
It was and was not meant for them, nor for me.
The shadows grew longer but this time that just felt okay.
The lovers departed before the full sun was in sight.
I have never doubted the feeling that they may be right.

Where They Can See You

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/where-they-can-see-you/

Your feelings may threaten their power, but always remember that they once had feelings, before they were monsters, and could feel again. Until then, remain wary,
and do not cross where they can see you.

Wait, Think, Speak

26 April 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/04/wait-think-speak/

Stillborn I fell through the silence of water past life-forms and fishes uncouth to my eyes
and descended, awakening once more in Asia, no longer afraid. She was cunning and charming but little did I know she'd tempt me to give myself up for her dream, that that dream was the flower of five-thousand years. What was I in her thrall? Just a subject of political experimentation, unburdened of freedom, near dead with remorse or from absence of light. I would counter with energy pure from the true well of Hellas, or if this too sickens, then out of the well of humanity, some substance comes.
And I take it and groan at the weight of it,
knowing though that such is mine, throughout time,
and that only tomorrow will tell what we do here
but I for one lend time my hand and my ear,
and by this you will know me, for this is my sign,
this remembrance of time in its service despite the loud claims that all clocks are manmade and need manual winding. My silence speaks volumes against these blasphemers,
who never could wait, think, or speak.

Banishing Night

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/banishing-night/

No great poet has ever made a difference,
for he could not have been other than he was.
He could only sing, and by singing bring hope. But no matter. Do suns make a difference, or do they just shine, as if banishing night?

Eudaimonia

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/eudaimonia/

In a room of thinkers, I was quiet, until each had taken his turn. I heard the arguments of Socrates and Zoroaster firmly interrupted by Confucius, who thought he might intervene and end the struggle.
But all any of them wanted was to understand what man is, even Nietzsche, who embarrassed countless Germans, and his protegé, one Heidegger, who smoothed those rougher edges.
Now all thinking ever was was thinking,
this much we endorse, as thinkers,
as the only ones. But what of friends sent from afar? Brought near by ritual?
Is not this eudaimonia?

Some Men

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/some-men/

Some men are born
with insatiable drive
to ascend the mountain of History,
to go to the source of river Culture
and drink her voluptuous streams.

Rolling Waves

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/rolling-waves/

I am going out to sea,
wish you would join me.
It is rough to go alone,
and no fair hands can grasp the terrors that await those who set sail. But do go with me, and I'll promise you enlightenment
without the heavy falsehoods
of the earthbound ways of man.
I hope you'll understand.
I have no more remorse for life
than dead men have for dying,
but the rolling waves are calling
all the same.

Corporate Man

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/corporate-man/

It's a god! It's a hero!
No! It's Corporate Man!
Able to leap reality in a single bound!
Able to fulfill all wishes!
Just sign on the dotted line!
Free from the shackles of justice!
Free of all badges of honor!
Who can defeat him?
Not even his mother or father restrain him now!
He is master of both earth and time!
He begets even these exclamations!

Habits

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/habits/

Where is it going, this spiralling void
of the mind of Hegel, sent Nowhere
on purpose, to dream in some darkened cocoon?
I say off with it, off with the fuzzy delusions of Reason, whatever their object, and on to the habits conducive to honor and hope.

Uncivilized After All These Years

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/uncivilized-after-all-these-years/

By the power invested in the personless rationality of the universal world-spirit or whatever, we wait here
uncivilized after all these years.

Pain That One Calls Home

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/pain-that-one-calls-home/

We are out here searching for something,
a meaning of some kind, some explanation,
but all that we really needed was in us,
they say, all along. Is it, though? Or are we still adrift in a godless nothing, at last on the verge of discovering forms that administer the pain that one calls home?

Saying New Sayings

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/saying-new-sayings/

The Supreme Intelligence in all of its forms must be killed, but then maybe it's already taken a mortal blow, dealt by wizards of German extraction, and some have moved on, some have not,
but how are we to organize friendship in commerce, political life,
or religion, without the old sayings?
Perhaps start by saying new sayings?

Both How and Why

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/both-how-and-why/

It is unwise to blame bad sheep for bad shepherding. Where are the greener pastures? Not near the factories, that much is sure, but one also begins
to wonder if shepherds have ever known,
or if they have simply usurped
both the crook and the staff, out of lust for power. But then, some sheep thrive and we must ask them both how and why.

Ideal Republic

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/ideal-republic/

Asia has had no ideal republic,
no city of God, and yet notice how greatly she prospers. Must we then continue to dream a false city or can we live here and live now and live well?

Flying Lessons

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/flying-lessons/

Soaring bird large and bird small explore sky
both entwined

No Single Force

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/no-single-force/

I think that we know
very little, that what we predict
may come true, or may not,
that no laws constrain nature,
that nature is plural,
that no single force drives it all.

Dreams

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/dreams/

When I consider the teenagers over the way,
I'm amazed that they have not been disciplined, growing so free and inviolate, much like I was when I thought men could grow up like trees and touch clouds. Now I know, as we say, growing never gets old, and all youth is perennial, transferred across generations, but what is this secret? If not the true meaning, how shall we decipher one deeper? The struggle for youth to make good its ambition for harmony shall never die, though we shall. Shall we scold them? I say it's no use, because life is quite able to punish them all on its own.
Let them dream, and let us still remember that dreams are the province of youth, across time, even ours.

Better Judgment

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/better-judgment/

It is time to reflect, to remember what words have been spoken, to justify all that precedes who we are. It's not easy, like life, and like all of life's dreams.
But go with me toward it, and we shall be we, not afraid or unbalanced as they,
but as free, we shall breathe different airs,
contra Kennedy, and against our better judgment.

What Surprises Remain

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/what-surprises-remain/

With a small bit of horsepower, with little to lose, I have gone
and sublated Hegel, just as he requires, but what, then, remains?
If not Plato or Aristotle, maybe Aquinas?
But these three won't do
in a world that grows tired of λόγος.
Let's try on Confucius,
and see what surprises remain.

Blank Space

16 June 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/06/blank-space/

In a field of blank space
a German appeared, out of nothing, and talked to himself of becoming,
and was not afraid.

Wouldn't it be nice

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/wouldnt-it-be-nice/

Wouldn't it be nice if we could live morally, as heaven-sent, not as we are. Would it be nice, to free ourselves from dark places, to glide in the shimmer of light?

Clarity is like Death

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/clarity-is-like-death/

Clarity is like death, disallowing surprises, and hardly the one to revise what one knows,
what one is, and the tragedy
comes when one little expects it.

Inexorably Ever After

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/inexorably-ever-after/

Is it time for a new beginning?
Have we gone past the great men
and their great trails of corpses,
or do we still dwell in their shadow?

I say time will tell, and she always does tell,
as she will, as she must, inexorably ever after.

Spiraling

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/spiraling/

Spiraling, spiraling, into the whirl,
asking what is the value of heaven,
no longer unsure, yet in peril
lest someone acknowledge all mysteries.

This Way Forever

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/this-way-forever/

I have been trying toaster ovens,
and all of them make me sick.
It's a wonder how far we have come.
The design is immaculate, the interface delightful,
the fumes so toxic I could die.
I have been testing toaster ovens
just to find out what I've known all along,
that the smiles of the marketers lie,
that we live at the mercy of industry (never one known for its mercy).
I've been testing ovens like propositions,
but this simply can't be refuted:
I dislike machines and their toxins,
and will not accept
that we have to live this way forever.

In the depths of it

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/in-the-depths-of-it/

In the depths of it, wondering why the Chinese have still never become good Englishmen (mysteries abound) and, still further, why Palmerston thought good to try…

Bind

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/bind/

Wonder, wonder of the mind,
what has we humans in a bind?
If not too-certain categories,
maybe too much wind?

Moldy Thinking

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/moldy-thinking/

I can smell disaster ahead, but nobody will listen. It's like moldy thinking, the kind that has sat in the sun for too long, gazing
stupidly skyward, festering, waiting to be discarded.

To Even Have a Dream

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/to-even-have-a-dream/

What a crazy swirl life is,
when stress subsides, when freedom breathes again. It is like liberty was never taken captive by an empire,
or like spirit never had to stand in line.
But we can't live here, not like this,
not as we are, for we are more than dreams,
we mammals, who need sustenance
to even have a dream.

I have known women

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/i-have-known-women/

I have known women (I have known them well)
but what women are thinking I never shall tell,
for one dreams of a home as one dreams to be free,
and another is cursed by the blessings in me.
I shall answer with questions and this much avow,
that the life of the living is death anyhow,
but the solitude curses the wanderer fair
with the foul and pestilent, pitiless, bare,
until ragged or richly he comes to surmise
that with women he was at least somewhat prized.
But too late, alas, they have all found their homes,
as he sups with the misers and picks at the bones.

A Raid on Delphi

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/a-raid-on-delphi/

We were the last to arrive, and by then
it had all been taken — the gold, the weapons,
the scrolls — but how little we knew, thinking
we with our plans could best Fate. Call it Hubris, whatever it was, but don't tell us
to kneel before gods who spoke Greek, even here.
We are here to rob temples whose keepers
have long since passed out of Memory,
brought by temptation or will to power,
to seek restitution for years of disgrace,
but not here. Even here there are ghosts,
where the skeletons slumber for ages,
where rough beasts, awaiting the turn of the wheel,
shriek to fever at mankind's injustice
and roll out new images and gods.

Arrival

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/arrival/

I have been on a journey towards myself,
but how shall I ever arrive (who arrives?)

Like America, I am a mixed breed,
but that is not to say I am formless.

We are all of us formed by each other,
including the others both past and future.

I have been on a journey towards myself,
but arriving is never that simple.

The others have been on a journey too,
towards me and away from me.

I must care for them, since we have formed each other,
and hope they will care for me too.

This is the one who arrives.

In the Field

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/in-the-field/

As I survey my field, I remember how last season's crop came up fallow.
The soil has had no time to heal
and the seed is exhausted and shallow.
I know what I have to do now,
though it pains me to look on the barren
and doubt that here ever could grow something worthy of effort. But pain could be pain of new birth, not this field or this labor, but pain from some far away effort to find a new field and to build a hearth near it where children could play in the morning and old men retire at evening,
but children would notice the dearth of the field
of the hollow seed, and would surely have questions
as I, gazing blankly at Nothing, remain unresponsive. Oh well, it was nice as a dream, though the field and myself are the same,
and though nothing has changed,
I must gaze at it, penetrating
into some essence not well understood or explained,
like an artist, but not like a rabid one,
waiting for what's there to speak. Of this field
I know nothing, hear nothing, and therefore expect to grow nothing. It's always this way with such fields, which were not well maintained,
though it happens in even good fields.
I do not tell my neighbor what to do with his field,
and I ask for the same in return,
but in my case, I'll know when my field has run dry
not to hope it will grow if I try.

Where it Belongs

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/where-it-belongs/

I am coming to the point,
this time for certain. With you standing there, I had simply forgotten society, lost in your ocean of words,
not yet sure, but approaching it,
waiting for final discovery. True,
you were not one to wait in the past nor the present, but always going just one step further, then another.
I never could figure out who you were,
but the message came in loud and clear:
there's a baby asleep in the road,
and somebody has got to remind it
of where it belongs.

The House of the Dead

28 July 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/07/the-house-of-the-dead/

He had only begun to understand
when lightning came to slice the branch clean off the bough. It wouldn't matter anyhow without her or the scent of her still lingering as though to ask a question though afraid.
It wouldn't matter, as all ages past can fail to mean a thing, unlike the scent of one familiar flesh, though this place houses souls.
I ask for a friend what purpose has redemption
after love, for who regrets the love? The pain, indeed regrettable, will satisfy Osiris, who,
by any other name, enlists the dead
into the legions of sweet peril, lost
in strife, lest loss of love revive their ire.
Tell me, Pharaoh, whether any Isis waits
to mock the dead back into living forms?

Come again, sweet spirit, to my chamber, whence these dreams enlist the tumult
of the darkened days of man
to find what gems were left behind beneath the pile of burning coals.
Come and wander to the bottom
whence death carries all who dare,
but do take care — you are not one of them
just yet. I ask your help. This excavation will take years, and we have time to sit and chat about what might have been. I'll tell you,
there are many things to learn, but few to love,
and by that God who lives above one suffers bitterly,
but what is to be done remains obscure.

Perhaps begin by thinking on new avenues,
then stopping to inquire why these structures, why this order.
But do not be late for dinner, which revives you,
like the hero back from Lethe in the dream of old,

for this is where hope lies. We are in chains, it has been said, but now with sun-parched eyes we look again and see the cave itself in motion, hurling madly through the void.
Will all things be destroyed? And are the chains themselves our safety during impact? How much Freedom does a man need?
And who else could do our work, and do it well?

Come let us mock the automatons
and the free spirits, with equal measure.

In this hour of wakening

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/in-this-hour-of-wakening/

In this hour of wakening, what spirit comes to revive even these cold remains? What revival awaits even these mossy chains? Is the sun to be trusted, or must we learn echolocation?
I've little to gain by remaining unnamed,
except freedom, most untrusty boon, but the path
to formation is wrought with the trials of the hero.

We were always at war with nature

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/we-were-always-at-war-with-nature/

We were always at war with nature
or in love with it, at all times not seeing clearly nor penetrating deeper than whatever suited our momentary fancy,
but I for one saw her differently,
not afraid to delve into her secrets
even if it meant losing myself.

Leave Me

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/leave-me/

At sunset, the birds
call me skyward with songs made of aether, but leave me untethered.

Westward Ticket

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/westward-ticket/

I have forgone my westward ticket and set up shop here. It is lonely for now, but that's not the worst thing.
It's not worse than bad company.
Sometimes the owls hoot at dusk,
but I never have seen them fly.
With a little more coaxing, perhaps.

Sources II

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/sources-ii/

In the dampness, a little resentment grows colder, untouched by the warmth of the sun, getting older and further removed from the Source. But what Source?
Has this dream run its course, or is thinking just one of man's fundaments? How could one think without causes of being?
But are there not many sources?

With Great Justice

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/with-great-justice/

We were a people that never did wish to be led,
having known all too well where paths lead and how leaders betray every confidence, sure as we were that negation was what kept things moving, we struggled to keep ourselves firm. But the sun always set of its own accord, unconcerned with our struggles and even providing false hope for a world ruled by cosmic order. Such hopes were a threat to the struggle and, therefore, ourselves, bent on instituting tyranny of various kinds. Oh how surely we knew what we knew,
having mastered all lessons without even studying,
graced as we must have been with inhuman strength.
But a few in the wilderness still kept their tablets of stone, saying these, or if not, some like these, will one day restore order in a barren land, because savagery brings nothing new, but instead brings to rubble
the works of a thousand years. The new order, whatever its form, will arise, and decay, and fall.
After all, we are left where we started,
both wary of leaders and craving them, both,
it would seem, with great justice.

All Those Ages Ago

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/all-those-ages-ago/

What was the point of it all,
the mad dash for adulthood, the scramble
for something just over the next hill?
We are here now, they tell us, but where and when, who can say? After all we are malleable still, in the flux
as before, although firmer somehow, but not rigid. No, we are the end of the dream that began when our first parents met
all those ages ago.

Trust or Freedom

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/trust-or-freedom/

We can either have trust or freedom,
but they are opposed and cannot coexist.
We have gambled on freedom, but whether we're happy remains to be seen.
Whether happiness can be found anywhere also remains to be seen. But perhaps just a little more trust would leaven the dough.

Hitler's Grave

17 August 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/08/hitlers-grave/

I went to Hitler's grave the other day,
just off the beaten path, through rows of trees,
the smell of sulphur lingering. It was a quiet place, not oft disturbed, but on the stone I saw a clump of roses, dying though not dead.
Someone had left them, as if hoping even here in man's best nature. I was touched and yet disturbed, but it occurred to me that Hitler may have liked the smell of roses
or the sun upon his face, as we all do,
and that his favor had not made these things less good,
nor had his crimes. If we but had the time,
we might rehearse his glory and his shame,
but we are fading, through this age into the next,
and soon this grave will not remain, replaced by new ones.
What is left to say? I picked up the bouquet and plucked the rarest, left that one as a memento,
brought the rest back to the living,
where they may still do some good.

Through All Our Fears

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/through-all-our-fears/

I have found my way now to the nether regions,
all those dark places beyond all prevailing conventions,
where silence rules and where strange plants grow.
I am writing to you with a vision long seen but just recently put into words. I have heard you are eager for change, but that's what I know well, and it's never quite what you'd expect. Listen closely.
The only way through is on your legs, with blood
pumped by your heart, which comes from your parents.
There is no deeper mystery than why we abide together,
despite all our squabbling and through all our fears.

Rapt Futility

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/rapt-futility/

Strange to sit here in the light
while all outside is bathed in night,
and strange to sit, and think, and write,
while others chase utility.

Had you expected something stern,
that each cold strophe would take its turn in chains, for they are English-born in rapt futility?

Surely one knows better now.
It doesn't matter anyhow.
The day that dawns awaits us,
and there are so many things to know.

Walking the Line

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/walking-the-line/

From the darkness, a leader would sometimes emerge to remind
of original covenants, binding through time,
but I have not the mind to dispute
the dark facts, nor the heart to unwind
the calf caught in the web. No, they come from another direction, the province of vanity, soured by years of neglect in an empire of vanity chasing vanity. Whence, then, this song? From the light? What light dares to escape the embrace of a vanity cherished by all in the depths of their souls?
Only this little light of mine, only this,
throughout time, to the ends of the mind
and back here, of this essence, here
walking the line.

That which wants to be said

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/that-which-wants-to-be-said/

No one is happy, nor has one ever been,
and the future remains unpropitious (as Possum scurries back to his hole), but I still stand here
speaking, aware of the Something outside of the Nothing, to say that which wants to be said.

Kennedy's Peace

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/kennedys-peace/

Thoughts go once more to John Kennedy, thoughts that were lost, only here to revive through abstraction the dream of world peace,
international dream, silly dream in the final analysis,
lost as man is in identities, cages of spirit,
and yet through the din of the bombs I can hear it speak clearly and truly that something has got to change.
Oh, that change never comes (surely never) which brings peace on earth while men live, 'til men leave it,
but change in our stars has arrived from the east which may free us for both peace and war.

The peace movement has its Christ and awaits its Constantine.

A Typical Day

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/a-typical-day/

On a typical day, all the typical people go down to the river to play, the most normal of folk, acting normally, day by day.
But outside of the current one stands on firm ground, with strong legs, and skips rocks
to learn how much the current can say,
and to test its vibrations for permanence,
longing for such, disappointed so far,
one who knows one must learn in this way,
because soon comes a time of the flood,
and somebody must watch night and day.

We Silly Mammals

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/we-silly-mammals/

It turns out the song
of the stars is out of key,
that no melody wraps all that lives in a blanket of Reason or gives civilization its name. No, just we silly mammals, together,
unfolding potentials, discovering holes
in the firmament, forever.

Strangeness of the Ordinary

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/strangeness-of-the-ordinary/

I suppose we should thank Wallace Stevens for showing the strangeness of the ordinary,
though one wonders now whether strangeness offers a home. Is the ordinary, home?
If it's not, I don't know what it is.
If it's not, is there anything more to say?

Submission in Disguise

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/submission-in-disguise/

Outer peace demands inner war.
Only outer war and its victory
bring inner peace, in cases of irreconcilable difference, but can any difference truly reconcile with its other (Hegel notwithstanding) or is this just submission in disguise?

Someone Tell Wittgenstein

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/someone-tell-wittgenstein/

Someone tell Wittgenstein that Europe alone lives inside of the fly-bottle, ravenous for more by design. Whose design?

Through the Horizon

23 September 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/09/through-the-horizon/

First day on the job, I walked into the factory, noticed the machines did not want me, and left. The pay was extraordinary, but ended abruptly
as soon as they saw that some part of myself was impervious to their designs, having been forged by time
and not dreamed in a fit of industrialization.
But what ended exactly? I found,
as the door closed behind me, a new sense of purpose, and tasted fresh salt
in the air, though I didn't look back, and I'll never forget how the sun felt that first day of freedom, or how it fell through the horizon, like so many times before.

The Most Peaceful Stream

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/the-most-peaceful-stream/

I was always a wanderer, born in the land of Nod, never still under one heaven, trying them all,
ever restless, and moving like water through the most peaceful stream you have seen.

From Time to Time

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/from-time-to-time/

Philosophers are the leaves of the family tree,
not seeking to start new branches, absorbing sunlight to nourish the rest of the tree. It begs the question whether life is, as they suspect, a torture chamber with no reward for participation, or whether the sun, in fact, demands to see a show. I wouldn't know,
although the view among the trees is charming
this time of the year, as all the leaves are changing, turning yellow, red, and brown, in preparation for the dying of the sun. When day is done, and when the summer fully fails, the leaves remain a blanket on the ground, which at least fertilizes all the coming trees. But more importantly, the leaves sustained the tree through one more season of the carnage of the air, always aware that their own purpose lay in growing future trees through self-demise, and not in nursing these that happen to be present, rather yearning, rather reaching for that sunlight, which replenishes the earth
from time to time.

A New Way

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/a-new-way/

Can we handle another Kennedy, or will he just die like the others, unable to bring to fruition
the will of the people? And what do the people will?
The fiction of peace "for all time" is disturbing
for those who think time is indomitable, yet
this is no worse than all Catholic thought.
But the question of truth against power lives on,
and continues to draw cheering crowds. Give us Liberty, then,
or death, but when you will oppress us,
if you find a new way, we'll obey.

Stronger Knowledge

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/stronger-knowledge/

From Kant we have taken the fruit of the knowledge of self and other,
and never again shall we live within Christendom, banished instead to the East, where they've known for all time
that our knowledge evolves over time, though they've rarely fretted over the details.
Armed with our much stronger knowledge,
we'll march into capitals, ready to conquer
all change, but it's not been the same since God died. We must ask ourselves why we must fight for ideas, when fighting hurts bodies (including our own), for philosophers rarely make excellent role models. Neither do saints.
Shall we imitate businessmen? Who else remains in a nonsacral culture, devoted to ego?
It's only opponent, the Christians, pray on with eyes closed though the dome of the church falls around them.

The Abbey

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/the-abbey/

I saw her atop the stair, so long ago,
and I decided to go to the abbey to pray,
but I found it disheartening to see the men
all shackled with crimson ideals, the blood hardly dry before new lashes opened the next season's wounds.
I was bound to discover these treacheries only through silence, the prayer of the anchorite screaming inside for the violence to cease,
as her smile could not soothe every malice
nor carve out a home where love only could live.

In the end, I chose freedom,
but not without heartache and not without shame.

Turning the Page

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/turning-the-page/

Turning the page in the saga of purposeless suffering, with never a νόστος, a paradiso, a denouement, the machines are in charge, and until this fact changes, we're not, but before we can take back the reins, we must find who exactly we are.

Discard Them Already

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/discard-them-already/

Who would have thought such a thing had a spirit,
or that it would govern us poorly, with iron grip?
Maybe Hegel or Marx, but to us with our battle fatigue
at its climax, their words feel so hollow and trite,
as with all of our might we endure in a race
suited more to machines than to rats…and what is man, after all? Does he think, even so? And by thinking, produce ever new ways of doing, procedure after procedure after procedure, as new as the rising sun? The machines have not taken this much.
They are just one iteration of the latest procedure, so quickly outdated we might as well discard them already.

Bones (How Things Stand)

29 October 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/10/bones-how-things-stand/

Someone must put into words how things stand,
not to silence the critics or win some shallow victory,
but only to make ourselves clear — who we are and why — because when we are gone, there must be some memento. Our children deserve that much, and more,
and although we are sure that we know what we know,
they will doubt it, so someone must put into words
how things stand, for they do stand, by miracle, time after time.

Or is the miracle within us after all?
These are difficult questions, but good ones.
One wonders whether in the final analysis
the children's children will look on their grandparents with pity, as toward a girl who has had an abusive father who fears that all men are abusive. Is all government bloodthirsty? Or have we just deep collective wounds from some prior injustices, burned in our memories? Caligula, what a monster, and don't forget Nero, and of course
there were Hitler and Stalin…

At some point the prophecy fulfills itself.
We get more of the things we attend to.
The war against tyranny ensures more tyranny.
Whence comes the miracle?

From somewhere within, or maybe somewhere without,
but its origin means less than its presence.
It comes.

Virtue comes and goes, there's a new thought,
and whether you think it or not, it occurs,
the proverbial tree in the forest that makes a sound,
though the sound is ourselves, though nobody has ears to hear it.
It's what they call Spirit, although it is also much more than that. It may live in our bones and our ancestors' bones, and whatever their phobias, whatever their misguided fancies, those phobias

guide us as instinct and intuition, the memory of thousands of years of trial and error
with occasional insight, recorded through joy and through exaltation in the bodies of those who live through it.

Why do we show such respect for old bones
if it's not because bones house the past,
and deep down we suspect that our present
will one day in total be bones?
Could it be that things stand on their bones,
that the boneless are formless, sans history,
without any direction or purpose?

The House of the Dead II

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/the-house-of-the-dead-ii/

I remember, back when it all started, somebody explained that I'd gained for my trouble a "foot in the door,"
but the room smelled like death,
and nobody else cared or noticed.
Much worse, later on, I discovered that most of the others had acclimated,
now even preferring that smell
to the smell of the earth, which,
though also containing death, has strong notes
of rebirth, which the house of the dead
seems to lack and refuses to even acknowledge.

Doctor of Words

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/doctor-of-words/

There is a madness, a kind of playful spirit-imp, that seizes me with joy
when comes a time to speak my mind.
I wish you'd listen, but I'll settle for your nonchalance, compared to those with stones, which do break bones (though yes, words hurt
more than the many know, and that explains the joy).
But don't forget that wounders must be wounded
'til they learn their place, and that explains my purpose
as the doctor of words, receiving patients constantly, applying salves, and burning, cutting, trimming as required.

Still More

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/still-more/

Under the earth, in a cavern man-made and yet lacking all purpose, the people gather to discuss their impending doom. They have no more to say, but as each goes his way, all discover that all ways lead here, to this cavern. And thus their ennui.
But a light from above mostly frightens them, hurting their eyes. For it is not the sun. It's a man with a flashlight and little respect.
But the man lacks respect just to shine them like that,
both exposing their nakedness and blinding them.
They will not trust him, not after a time and a turn in his light, so he goes on amusing himself (and to no other purpose), when suddenly the east wall collapses
and all of the people observe there the others who look familiar but who have no annoying flashlight, and suddenly they wonder whether theirs is really the only cavern or whether they might find still more.

Origins II

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/origins-ii/

In a reverie, I still recall how before, when approaching to nature's fire, I saw her, the one of the dream, yet more real than all life, and I asked her how much was required. She said all and meant it. I knew that she wasn't for me, but for others, that this lonely audience rarely was given, and that,
having heard, I must speak,
but speak where, and speak how?
In a reverie, there and there only,
where dreams can be tamed and where man
may discover his origins, yearning.

Ready For Change

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/ready-for-change/

Sunrise, after a long doubt, and our journey resumes, the one started before stars were named, toward Ashtoreth, maybe toward some Valhalla, but certainly ours, here and now. In this legacy, sorcerers fail to revive, and time passes, as always.
If only the stars would align, like before,
when hope meant something, mankind could rise
and be sure, but our stars float awry, too disturbed by each other
to fly or to guide human eyes.

Is it Dawn, and if so, does she come from the East, or have we been deceived
for long ages about where hope dwells, what hope is? In the East, Magi suffer oppression, and others toil on,
so what dawn could they bring here,
where stars have stopped shining out meaning?
What dawn…further east, in Kung-Fu Tzse's house,
now the master is homeless, his unfilial children
rejecting his lessons in favor of permanent revolution.
Not here, no, keep looking…

When Dawn comes, it comes with a bang,
but it leaves with a whimper,
as previously observed,
but this time is so different, so new!
Are there flowers? And why?
When it comes it just comes of its own accord.

What is future? What history?
If not just a mallet for striking one's enemies,
if really a there-to-behold, even now, in potentia,
the newborn first imitating father and mother,
then leaving the den to seek out its own place
among stars, among earth, with the words that were spoken remembered and cherished, together with others together for now, then apart, then forgotten,

but living throughout and within the tradition
which echoes with words, with new words, always new,
to remark what has been for posterity.

The newness of the day can cancel Nothing,
see the self-negating spirit succeed
and rid us of itself, with final vigor.
No more piddling doubts or quibbling with the self,
no more self-criticism or phony dialectics,
only learning, only growing through surprise (there is no other way), and only strong souls daring thought (all others knowing thought is not their cause).
Then free from terror, free from all the machinations of the empty revolutions, but still freer of what came before,
we'll build, and start from Nothing, if we must,
for 'tis with Nothing that our forbears stopped,
and we go further, on into the formless cold
of space eternal, warped by dreams of grids
and all false representing symbols, such that we can actually believe we've mastered time,
and that, like space, it is a thing of grids
and not the source of mysteries and growth.

Enough of this, it has been said,
but let me urge you one more time,
pray do not fall for all you're told,
despite the grandeur of the teller.
But don't be a doubter-on-command.
That is no better.

The point, the point…there must have been one,
how else could we live, without purposes, lacking design?
Yet we've failed to find it now time after time.
So what sacred remains from the astral pyre await some old reinvigoration? The rough beasts have all come and gone, their day dies,
and the new day is dawning, this time

with less obstinance, no absolutes, and a people born ready for change.

By Example

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/by-example/

In the seventh year of the reign of Trump,
we are floundering, just like before, as the businessmen sell us our candy and hula hoops, and government roves in search of destroying production. One wonders where all of the flourishing humans are, why none of their concerns matter here, in an empire now far out and well on its way, toward what? If the coming election brings blood, you may say that I warned you, but I think you knew it already, though it may lie buried by mountains of nonsense and oceans of shame. All the same, we strive on toward glory and know not whence hope comes nor whether our lives can be tamed, whether here in America still lives that germ of empowerment that once, twice, and hence fuels revolt, and if so, whither, where it will go, in the body in which we are parts. If we know that the swamp has its sickness, malarial as always, that sickness is sabotage, the purposeful undermine of confidence, always and everywhere, and not in the spirit of philosophy proper (which by its very name implies friendship) but rather with sick dialectics, designed to kill masters and liberate slaves. It turns out that the masters know better (to no one's surprise) and without them we're nothing, although the enslaving did get a little out of hand. But is mastery itself to blame? Or is competence simply essential to flourishing?
No, there are ways to progress unlike this, with less venom,
with generous friendship from first to last, by example.

Crossroads

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/crossroads/

Where do we go from here, when so much has been said and so little believed and followed through? Is there empire within us, or are we provincials at best, better suited to woodsmanship, hunting for wild game? It is always the same with such peoples who grow to our size, but the differences make all the difference.
You can tell that I'm joking, but this much is serious:
America stands at a crossroads. Which path shall we take?

Pliable by Nature

23 November 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/11/pliable-by-nature/

No one has a sure foundation,
not now or ever, for all
are made pliable by nature,
and this too is good.

Red Tinge on East Star

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/red-tinge-on-east-star/

Alone in my hills, on a night growing cold,
I look over those hills, and I see you, East Star,
shining dimly, not quite as one hoped.
But you do shine and join the night sky,
granting light if not heat, but a little of both.
But pray tell me, why does your light glide
as if governed by my sky, with some point of reference in Western constellation? We would like to see you in your sky, which is sky enough.

Home From Elysium

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/home-from-elysium/

As Bach and Beethoven encoded
the new German Freedom in music,
so too will I write of our freedom
from fantasy and all metaphysical guile,
to teach with a smile the hard truths
of man's station on earth, and to hope for rebirth from the slime, and at last bring the soldiers home from Elysium, battered, exhausted, and ready to build a life here.

Out on the Frontier

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/out-on-the-frontier/

In the morning, one hardly sees clearly, but lately I've noticed the goal remains not to succeed
but to fail in the same way as everyone else. In those cases where failure is common, success becomes dangerous — therefore, let's fail,
as our parents before us have failed,
and not dare to succeed like those brazen and ostracized weirdos
out on the frontier.

Who Does the Promising?

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/who-does-the-promising/

When will the promises of science come true? Or are they, like most promises, intended to deceive? I see over the horizon
a world in which men live by deeds and not promises — one where the future is present in embryo, really there and perceived,
but not promised, for who does the promising,
and why should we trust them instead of ourselves?

More Than One Power

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/more-than-one-power/

The Romans did not like surprises (the Greeks did!)
and we are left asking (for five-hundred years now)
just how, how much certainty man can afford,
and if not up to Rome's standard, whom shall we serve?
Not the Greeks, with their autonomic failures,
and not now the English instead, who resemble the Romans quite certainly. No, no, the Germans won't salvage us either…
I think what we need is a new kind of certainty,
firm in action but pliable in negotiation, because, after all, there are more than one power, and we need our allies to know that.

To the Girl Behind the Pharmacy Counter

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/to-the-girl-behind-the-pharmacy-counter/

You with the smile, asking favors with eyes only, yes, I remember you too. But this is not the time for a dance or the courting of pairs. You have asked me to take my time, and I shall, as I linger over what time has brought me. Not the east, or the sun, but just you, with all faults still at this moment concealed.
Shall we remember fondly this meeting when hours of argument
wrangle our spirits, or when we find habits distasteful which each of us cannot change? Yes, we shall, with disdain, for it's always the same, as the first blush transforms to the flush of rage, for we puppets on Nature's marionette.
You can bet it will happen again, as it's happened before,
even here, and to us, as we each go our ways through the spasms of time. But this is not the time for a lesson, either, when those eyes ask questions no poet could describe.
So here is my answer. I cannot divulge all my purposes
nor share with fellow traveller the path I have chosen.
So adieu, night-wanderer. May you find a home and a love worth your while.

Vesta

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/vesta/

Vesta, guardian of eternal fire, what life hath thou in a time like this? Lord Vulcan rules o'er all, and we live by his flame,
so what of yours? If winter comes, so be it,
for as sure as we are flesh, we bathe
in steel, and watch the lathe, the wheel coax mechanism into ghastly life. But Vesta, thou doth call out still within the soul
to all those longing to be whole. Can hope arrive?
Can hope come here, into this desecrated chamber of the Vestal orgy, long since over, haunted still by ghosts?
They are our hosts, and like good guests we must not leave here empty-handed. We must take an icon to be cherished, and to grow into the newest love,
the newest hope. That is within our scope.
But Vesta, knowst thou where the balm resides,
which once soothed aching souls and aching thighs?

Touch

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/touch/

Let us walk, if you will, through the avenues of time, to the clarity of iron, a firmness once realized and never forgotten. Its age lives within us, with all ages past, in a soup
we call history, in a place we call home.
If we walk, we shall see that all men
are the same, whether born now or later,
that Progress is groundless, it swims in the aether.
Machines have not changed what we are, nor has money, nor charity, law, or iron. The σπέρμα remains what it was,
is now, and ever shall be, implanted by Vesta, a yearning for fullness, which all mammals know, though we may know it best. How has this been forgotten?
How have we illustrious mammals
lost touch with those things that define us?

Rule By Consent

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/rule-by-consent/

Until the day dies, until night covers all,
they won't rest, they will hound and resound
all the corners of man, to make adolescents all,
make belief unacceptable, ravage all temples and ravish the priestess. Barbarians come and are already here, and quite powerful within city walls,
but the People remember, they cannot forget,
that the powerful rule by consent.

Into the Sea

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/into-the-sea/

Into the sea, the Mediterranean Sea, swim with me, past commander and legionary,
past Athens, all temples of Zeus,
and Jerusalem too; swim past Crete
and the legends of Homer, and rest on the sea's cold floor. Here find solace, long sought by all moderns, and here find
the end of all law and obedience, chthonic remonstrances, pulsing through time
and the hearts of all men, underneath
all ideals, in the bosom of earth,
in the womb of all worlds. Under here,
to the core, thirst no more, for these waters
will satisfy, unlike those others that rain from the sky. But thus nourished, return and build shelters for you, and for others,
to live in as much peace as possible.

Barrel of Monkeys

18 December 2023
https://poems.culturing.net/2023/12/barrel-of-monkeys/

What a barrel of monkeys,
  the whole human race,
not an ounce of perspective,
  a drop of grace!

I speak for the people

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/i-speak-for-the-people/

I speak for the people when saying to the Christians that you do not get to tell us how to love. We'll do fine on our own, but we must find some limits somehow.
Until then, we must journey, with no holy books,
guide ourselves, and pray old gods don't rise for their vengeance.

Doubt

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/doubt/

I have lived with this ache in my side
for so long it is hard to imagine not having it. Yet, I could thrive, it is true, under doctor's care…"studies show…"
but they have never studied me,
the particular man, he who sleeps in each bed,
who lives under the aegis of Science
but is not known by it…prithee tell me what care is experimentation, the lab-man set loose on his subject for fun and profit?
I do not know why I thus mock it,
lest others think that I do know,
but in fact, I doubt, as is now the fashion,
but doubt that this doubt could reach certainty,
clarity, truth, or obedience, all of which go into care. Does my doctor doubt? For if so, he will not be much trusted. If not,
he shall not follow science.
I go now to bed, to the sweeter rest,
free from doubt and its faithful unfaithfulness,
stewards of Science, but with this last hope,
that some fruit of their labor may comfort me
even so.

The Ship of Rome

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/the-ship-of-rome/

Let me sing for you about the ship of Rome, which crashed at Plymouth, spilling gods and heroes
to the sea. 'Twas not for you and me, that pantheon,
and yet we took that wreckage and built homes.
Did we not know the walls would talk, thus carved from holy wood? They say strive harder, on toward the unseen end of gloria, whence we shall be gods.
Did we not know the ship had crashed? That we, too, crash, and always crash, so long as we rely on only worn-out navigation?

Let the augurs rest, no, let them die,
and let all children of the sky foretell
their own fate, falling faster than sweet Icarus, to soon with Hades lie. But this old feud is not worth reappearing, will not settle on these terms.
I crave a new word, after Rome, but not instead of Rome, for who could pluck such mighty organs out of this, her organism? Surely this beast has a heart, so we won't start to prophesy
some doom ordained by civic need and furthered on by bloodlust. No, we want some answers for all misdeeds done by smiling men with good intentions and reputed names. It is the same, the same, the same,
no matter how the poor are skinned,
the plot remains, who does the skinning,
and are they held to account? One doubts sincerely, and another has philosophy, but these are even older than the crimes, and have done little to assuage the unjust blood. Is it not time?
The ship, alas! may hold more corpses than we know.
But this will grow: take heart from this:
by now there have been other ships.

Will you listen? I have seen behind the curtain and the man I saw is uglier than imagined.
He spoke croakingly, without a point or purpose,

flailing madly, with twin sceptres in his hands,
and pedalled briskly on the bike that turns the world.
I won't describe his face. All has its place,
except for him, the mastermind of chaos,
tossing here and there the pieces of our lives.

We dare not thrive, in this, his world,
and so we're cured, or so we're told,
but somewhere someone must remember
how to live…

At first, you give, and only then dare to receive, for this, your need to be a giver is the stronger.
Doubt not any longer. Love is not the answer, though it is part of the question, as new ships
come in from ever distant shores.
Don't hold off anymore. You have been changed already, as you know,
and as these winds begin to blow,
depart, and set sail for yourself,
so long ago. So you must go into the night the knowers know with many histories in tow.

Augustus abolished wonder, that much is clear,
and he did steer the ship of Rome for many years.
Here on the other side, one sees how light can blind
and is reminded of the fateful deaths of Socrates and Jesus, noble rebels, ever castaways on some lost seaside isle. But death solves nothing, only life can bring solution, as it mixes with all other life, diluting thus the brew. It's nothing new, although the solvents may be new, the process stands as it has stood.
We guessed it would, when we based Science on a method.
Let us wonder at this process, but think also that the ship's wreck has been salvaged not in full, but in part only,
and that we may be still captive to its thrall.

The ships from the East were a welcome sight,
carrying treasure instead of soldiers, intending to awe without terror barbarians abroad. The carrot instead of the stick. But it would not stick in imperial hearts, proud with punishment, dizzy with wealth, though still novi homines in their own eyes. How to govern?
It would not be long before questions had outstripped answers
and the West would be overextended combatting the forces
it thought to control. But those thoughts were all wrong, seen in time as the lies that they are, for we govern ourselves as we govern our friends. We won't treat ourselves any better, as creatures of habit, when habits are hard to unlearn or control. How to govern? The ships may return or may not,
but our task is to learn all we can from them,
not as their servants or masters, but simply as friends,
with the knowledge that more wrecks will come and that we would not like to be among them.

All Man Has Been

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/all-man-has-been/

The Romans did a number on Europe,
and left it unable to roam free.
It's easy to see the obedience,
deep and habitual, challenged by Hegel
but then in the end even he was absorbed,
and the structure remains, bearing even the dead weight of Derrida. Here in America, we broke free early, but struggle to find the new balance,
so staggering into the graveyard, we stumble
upon ancient history, carved in stone, inviting observers to ponder
all man has been or can be.

It may also help you

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/it-may-also-help-you/

I come to ask you at this lonely hour
to believe less and hope less, and you, being wise, will discern that to do so will weaken you. Yet,
I ask anyway, to teach you a new kind of strength,
not of castles impregnable but rather of men in pitched battle, where throw or be thrown is the rule. You will surely encounter in life many men who know well this arena and they may hurl you into it unaware. So let's practice and spar for awhile. It has helped me.
It may also help you.

Beyond the Locked Door

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/beyond-the-locked-door/

I'm awake, and the gods
are fighting again. Is it Liberty, or is it Democracy, or is it their child, poor child
to be born from squabbling, and yet
no different than any child.

As the argument rings through the night
and arouses the neighbors for the umpteenth time,
I must wonder, although we do live in the large house on the hill, whether any would envy such conflict or those who live through it,
or whether they'd rather have peace,
even if it comes only through compromise.

Would be nice, I suppose, to have peace,
but would also deceive…and in any case,
we are the children of conflict. But why truth?
I ask this again, having no certain answer,
but fearing the dark night that waits just beyond the locked door.

Savage Dew

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/savage-dew/

I knew what she wanted, but not what I wanted,
as wind blew around the savage dew. It is true, there are lovers who look just like you, but I too have regrets left unsaid. They won't change, even with you to change them, alas. I shall pine after darkness instead.

Life Over Victory

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/life-over-victory/

I see them, streaming in numbers beyond compare,
having been asked to give up even the possibility of violence, and having refused. Is their day coming? Not yet, but it comes as it always comes, to political animals like us. Will today be the day the walls fall, towers breached, with the crown tossed up for grabs? It cannot be postponed forever.
May the winners choose mercy and the losers choose life over victory.

Never What It Used To Be

12 January 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/01/never-what-it-used-to-be/

As Augustus created political morality,
we end it, and quash the libido dominandi
by conquering only as a last resort.
No peace secured through conquest shall endure,
now or forevermore, for pent up rage
must tear the fabric of the law.
I hear the call of this new herald summoned by these years of struggle,
and it says we are great peoples,
in the plural, and if something moral still remains, it is the ash of Vesta
with her embers glowing in each private hearth, not in the hearth of state, and to all those who would revive a prior time, she says that it was never what it used to be and could not be so now.

Response to a Query

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/response-to-a-query/

Yes, Athens is in the Bible, in more ways than one. If it's true that you know so little, could you please do so quietly? And have a little doubt?

The Flux

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/the-flux/

If you really want to know what you are doing,
you will have to discern velocities, and not supposedly immutable actualities. Flux is the friend of philosophers, even of Plato, and thinking is just this: observing potentials and projecting their future interactions. But most cannot do this, and therefore most quail before indecision, as though it were insurmountable evil. The thinkers, meanwhile, must keep all of their thoughts to themselves, lest the noisy potentials discomfit the slumber of all, while these secretly crave after flux, which they know as a god,
and make sense of it, to the dismay and chagrin of the rest.

Carefully

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/carefully/

If I wander out into the ether,
out past all the ruins of time,
can you tell me how much of mankind
I shall find underneath or beneath her,
the One who encompasses all, who calls out to the thoughtful, from Elsewhere, to dream
of new vistas and old things reborn?
I am seeking her, but with faint heart,
for I hear that her sorrow is growing
which soon must envelop the world.

Is it hope that deceives, or must we wait for another, to cleanse our hands and to break the enchantments that strangle
our tortuous souls, ever wandering here on the night's Plutonian shore? Evermore we shall wander, unless we can grasp
what it is that so sends us, beyond,
to some Other world, never once seen, touched, or heard.

Confusion and dismay must be expected but not celebrated. Man is what he is, not more or less, prepared at times,
and lost at times. There is no other way to pass the wilderness of life,
so let us be content withal,
the pains we cannot change as well the joys,
and let us pass this much the wiser sans the pains of fruitless hoping.

Call it coping, but don't call to it at all.
Learn not to call. Instead, fall back into the life that fills us all, and breathe.
You must protect this life with every breath.
But you will see that it sustains itself far better than you can. So let it be,
and as your lungs fill near the sea,

believe, and know that you are free
to live a full life, even one lived carefully.

More Authentic

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/more-authentic/

Something changed a hundred years ago, but was it the machines or was it our collective unbelief, the signs of chaos poking through?
Amidst the dollars breeding dollars, men found mysteries, and wondered, is this all, or are new thoughts around the bend? Some still pretend that worn out Order could revive, and others dance in naked revelries, but we are not who they were, so it seems. These changes mount toward their climax, and it will be more authentic,
but it will not save us from the gasping seas.

Through the Unknown

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/through-the-unknown/

If I venture out through the unknown,
will you follow, or will you deny yourself freedom? Think not what you will, but what is,
and thus free yourself from the dominion of power, awakened at last to the mysteries, life's strange embrace, and the colors of all that has been or will be. Do you see?
These are waiting for you, just beyond the heart's door.
Yearn no more, be at peace, find release, and let be what shall be.

New Healing

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/new-healing/

Is there another way, out past ways that were tried and retried, or is man eternally doomed to recur, like poor Echo, alone in his cave? I would like to think more things could be, that as old things were made,
so could new things be made, and encouragement
comes from the sun, which each morning endeavors to rise like before, but with just some small hint that the new day is new.

About you, listen, it is not my place to tell you,
but I will say anyway that dawn has awoken, and you remain stuck to your bed, eyes glued shut,
but before long your hunger will drive you to wake
and by then it will be far too late.

Is there another dawn for stragglers, or will they be left all alone, to fight over the scraps, while the rest of the living world rises early to chase the first light and its offering?

There will be time for repentance, be sure,
but there will not be baths to make pure.

I suspect it will come from the same place as always,
that kernel of hope that men need for their labors,
without which life pales when compared to its opposite,
and which rests inevitably upon mere conformity,
the group being group-like for its own sake.

I cannot make this prettier, ugly as it is,
and must be, for we spiritual beasts, always ready to rip and to tear those who differ, to secure for ourselves some asylum from loneliness. And yet it is we, the most lonesome, who persecute, in order to shape the whole world in our image, when perhaps they are fine as they are. I know not, know it well, and proclaim it to all who will hear. Is my doubt unappealing?
Perhaps you will find that you too are in need of new healing.

True Healing

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/true-healing/

I have often thought over how in Eastern Christianity, sin is considered a sickness to be healed, instead of a violation to be punished. Much follows from this, like how we blame the victim,
or really consider all sufferers to blame.
Could anything be less effective than punishment
if the goal is the curing of misery?
Thus our reformation, in the face of the most ineffectual healing. We must break this habit and restore to society places of healing,
true healing, which do not turn face and attack.

A Time is Coming

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/a-time-is-coming/

A time is coming (it always comes) when men forget themselves and punish others in an effort to remember. Let us here recall ourselves and stave off terror, lest it come (time as my witness) as it always does,
and let us be not blamed, for though
the seas will rise and fall, we heard them call,
and tried to warn the sleeping masses
of their graves (we did not dig them),
where the floods will carry all who dare to build on sinking sands.

Let it be remembered that here stood one
both firm and tall amidst the early gusts of storm,
and though this marker may be worn,
it holds a heart that may revive a nation,
even one so torn.

No More

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/no-more/

Something in the soul cries out, "No more!"
against the lies, the toxic products, the malaise, the lack of meaning, the addictions. How much more will be endured before walls fall, and men find hope again, and will it be true hope, or will it lie again in time? I fear the worst, but is the best so much improved that it won't also burn to ash just when it's needed? I don't know, and I don't trust those who do claim to know, but something in the soul
now stirs, and those who feel it tremble like those waiting for the savage hordes to flow.

If I Yearn For More

23 February 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/02/if-i-yearn-for-more/

The president stumbles, like so many times, in so many places. Is this what it looks like?
The man, like his culture, stands pert at death's door.
This has happened before, and to us, but how little we know.
Is it back to the Gilded Age? Back to the old problem of starving farmers and captains of industry, presiding (please note the same word) over all. Who's in charge? Back before the Progressives intended to intervene, there was money,
lots of it, but somehow not enough to go around.
It's as old as Cain, like our president, these cycles of bust,
the perennial bust of the workers, or so the Marxists say.
But is this how a culture dies, or how one is born?
Or both forever, interminable differences generating life and death? I don't know. I will never know.
But I like to explore. It is good for the spirit (especially one at death's door) to be exercised. So far I've seen this president preside at death's door over his hearse and that of his century, but time will forgive me
if I yearn for more.

The Task of Man

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/the-task-of-man/

Let us turn the page here, and let us ask who we shall be, and know we have a say,
for time, though strong, is neither master nor enemy,
but friend. It's time we think, if we dare think at all,
and only time makes worthy those who rise before its call. So let us turn and rise and make a better life, that they may say that here a few stood tall who were not daunted
by the task of man, who faced it with all courage
even as dark winds were blowing.

The poets are singing again, about how cultures blend
and one fades into another, across the sands of time,
which litter the desert of peoples, lost and forgotten,
yet ever new, like the rising sun. Does that sun parch or does it vivify? Only time will tell, we know that well, although we also know ourselves, and possibly only that.
But poets sing regardless, knowing that this too shall pass,
that all must pass, but most of all this ratiocentric obsession with self, with reason, with power, which plagues this hour with Man so magnified nothing else breaks through.

But what else is there? Only God? And Nature?
We, no longer children, will not take our fairy-tales,
but crave more solid food, the real meat of the matter.
But too bad for us, the stories are the meat,
and always were, and our mancenteredness is only one more story. C'est la vie. Back to the task, as ever, editing, revising, and then publishing the draft that we've received as our inheritance. But let's make it a good one, not a tragedy or farce, but one with heroes in their prime and worthy deeds.

Machine State of Mind

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/machine-state-of-mind/

The problem with machines is they never change.
So we must simply have less of them,
having them only where they are most needed
and thus most effective. The mindless rote tasks, the menial labors, the painful tediums: these the machines may alleviate. But why did we ever believe they could help us connect or find love?
It may be that our deepest, our bedrock identity
(here in America) always was tied to machines and their state of mind. Our Constitution sits, nigh a quarter-millennium after inception, there tempting us never to change, though a change comes, it comes and it always comes, from beyond the horizon.
But it's not here now. We have kept it away with machines and their promises, so often kept that we dare not examine their failures, lest we also slide into failure with them, as so many ancestors have before.

Seeking Authorization

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/seeking-authorization/

None of these thoughts have been authorized by relevant authorities, but, nonetheless true, I shall speak them, for truth is the common property of a people, and a people is made up of persons who (believe it or not) sometimes think their own thoughts.
Have you heard this before? Am I overreacting?
Then why are you here with your pitchforks?

Speak It Out Loud

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/speak-it-out-loud/

Let it be remembered that the stasis grew impenetrable,
that each side fought to kill
but weakened slowly, that the dawn came ever closer but was not known,
that mankind in the twenty-first century
stayed unsure, despite its patina of knowledge, and lest we be informed, we also grow toward that dawn, because time moves us out of Progress, into homes manmade and durable.

The living commences then with a story about how we got here, through chaos and also executive action, which foists upon common people feelings and thoughts known to dazzle great minds.
Bamboozled thus, all wander aimlessly, doubting that aims could exist or that any who champion them have any motive but domination. If only they knew about history, like that it exists, or that others have lived other ways and still prospered, sometimes more than we.
But such things cannot be under this dark dominion,
the spectre of progress asleep at the wheel, like the God
that it claims to displace…

This disgrace is expiring, but what takes its place
it's not my place to say. Let the ones who will follow decide what to call it. I only speak now, but I speak it out loud.

Whatever Comes

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/whatever-comes/

It has been said and rehearsed that mankind is evolving,
that up the glass staircase of progress we tend,
but I fear that within us gnaws something familiar from primitive times, which throws stones that could shatter the staircase, whose fragments would rain down and murder all those who live under it. Am I just dreaming, or do you too feel it, the throb
of life dammed up inside living things great and small?
It could conquer us all, like it did when Saint Paul said the stones would cry out after justice, but then what?
Rebuilding the same stair again, or rebuilding glass cages again, or else onward to follies
we have not yet dreamed? I am cynical, this you can tell, about Man's final purpose,
but I still believe in improvement, the struggle of good against bad. It's just that there are no godlike spectators, tipping the scales in one way or another, and no covenant either, but just us and what we have done. Can we live well this way?
I think I can, but you must decide for yourselves.
In the meantime, let's think, and not hurry in search of replacements for gods that have died, but let time
in its time turn our clocks toward whatever comes.

Wait For Me

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/wait-for-me/

What for me, I am thinking, it only will take me a moment, but by then will it even matter? Please wait for my answer before you decide, I am sure it will be worth your while.

All Must Again Be Decided

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/all-must-again-be-decided/

If posterity glances our way, they may say
we were craven, asleep at the wheel, lulled to sleep by American dreams in their haunting and chaste unreality, steady as life passed us by. Or they may say we strove with such recklessness nothing was safe,
that once woken we crashed into everything,
breaking the finest monumentos. But both were true,
and how these can both be without cancelling each other remained our most pressing question. In some ways, they couldn't, and each chose to keep to its quarters, afraid of the great confrontation. Ideas, like kings, are enfeebled by flattery, losing their warlike spirit, assured of control over this much,
no more. What happened when some chose to fight?
What became of a once mighty country grown fat
on its winnings, where none dared to fight, when it woke to the clarion call of new gods claiming surely that all must again be decided?

Anti-Nature

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/anti-nature/

Somebody tell the president that Nature intends to kill us,
she wants us all dead,
and she tells me so every day,
but she also brings forth all her flowers,
and if we can read the signs,
this last point may prove most important.

In Our Midst

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/in-our-midst/

There's a story that goes untold beneath the layers of simple nicety
where men are bought and sold and where the rules are always clear.
Here power speaks while others listen
and plants dreams in helpless ears,
while foreheads glisten with the sweat
of wasted years, time out of mind.
This kind of thing is now familiar.
Those with no end in sight must labor on for someone else
despite all promises of freedom.
Above ground we play and sing
the patriotic songs, forgetting,
as the healthy always do,
the sickness hiding in our midst.

Upon the Dawn

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/upon-the-dawn/

Something now is seeming, and the stars must shift awry, thus making way for some messiah in the hay. It will take years, but even these old fulsome ears may hear it cry, before time comes to drop the curtain on it too. So many things have been and so few still remain,
but here we are, and we must try.
So turn your telescopes, and swivel your receivers,
for the messengers will ride upon the dawn.

Cultural Marxism

22 March 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/03/cultural-marxism/

Call it what you will, but I think "dialectics" will do, if understood to mean what Hegel dreamed, the absolute that flutters free. Of course we thinkers know what he means, but some of us doubt universals. Cannot some things be believed, just because they have withstood time's testing? Why must we apply
our own testing, in all times and places?

Regardless Marx too cared for ideas
more than he admitted, he just sought to change them by changing material conditions. His Doctors of History have failed time and time again.
But "cultural dialectical materialism"
is just dialectics. The other two cancel.
The question remains when and where to question, and how. Maybe Hegel has worn out his welcome. Maybe Plato knows best after all.

Set to Expire

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/set-to-expire/

I find myself where I always was,
not quite perfect and not quite nothing,
but only a something that's set to expire.

All as One

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/all-as-one/

What is to become of it,
the whirling gears of time
being what they are, and they,
or it (there being no difference),
aswirl together as if as One?
I do not doubt it, though I question whence doubt comes and whither any go who doubt and thus hold firm. To some cool purgatory perhaps, but when the empires fall, when God appears, when All casts off her veil revealing Night, what will become of us, the time-bound, who held doubt as though a totem that could save?

A Relief

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/a-relief/

In the deep,
the time swirls
like Nothing ever,
hurling out new gods
and old beliefs.

It's a relief,
really, after all the faith, to be set free, to be
as one is,
as all is.

Sending Signs

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/sending-signs/

In the moonlight, one can see what one means flicker like a flag on a windy day. What means it anyway? And what awaits that one when all has passed away,
when time, the author of authors,
revives her spooky angels, sending signs
for those with ears to hear?

Believe in the Dawn

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/believe-in-the-dawn/

In the twilight there's Caesar Augustus,
who brought in the Pax Romana,
becoming its sovereign, supreme over all.
But what violence lies behind every peace
we have learned. In that time we have also discovered ourselves (go figure)
and now we shall never forget that all laws are manmade, and can be manunmade as required. When is it required? We know of a few examples, no more. In the twilight,
we reach for a candle, but stumble,
take heart, and believe in the dawn.

Good Enough

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/good-enough/

What did I want from her anyway?
Some affirmation? Maybe a thrill?
I know this: looks can kill,
but not words, which bring order
to those things that lack it.
I am not alone with my many selves,
so what role had she, if not merely Intruder? Yet some sadness lingers like a man defeated, and I must be with the birds and the trees, for whom I am good enough, 'til it passes, and all the black mourners at all the black masses never can lift this one pall, that I lack what a woman needs, not by my fault
but by nature, and so I must seek that of nature which does not offend.

Itself as a Prize

12 June 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/06/itself-as-a-prize/

If one should ask for me,
tell them I wait by the fire
where life is consumed. That way, if they look, they will go in the right direction. I do not know what follows after, but this way is not for the mild.
It offers itself as a prize.

Tethered to Freedom

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/tethered-to-freedom/

How do I cope with it, spent and yet grasping for more, like a fish out of water…what water can hold me and not let me go? Or am I not a creature of water at all? There are things that one sees to believe, but they are least important. The instincts know better, and one of these yearns for community. We are too free,
so it seems, each as free as the rest, to fit in. If belonging were not in our hearts, who would want to be free?
I see armies of others
refusing our freedom, insisting on some new coherence (their own),
and yet we are here tethered
to freedom, for better or worse.

As All Time Passes By

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/as-all-time-passes-by/

Love is a reason to suffer,
but one quickly finds that if one disregards all the evidence, soon
the morass of unanswerable questioning lingers like the stench of a swamp with no egress. Still, without love one finds nothing but thought and its herds of passion, beleaguered
by hope without hope that some thought could once matter and make out of men something good. But no matter. Love still is our greatest achievement, if known in its truth as the glue that makes coherence possible, here where men lie, where men fight, when men live as all time passes by.

Surely We Know Best

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/surely-we-know-best/

It is a miracle each time, but,
none the wiser, we plod on,
transforming Nature's bounty,
making hers our own. What is life?
Just the animating principle, just
the motive force, the cause of growth, just everything that matters? But no matter, surely we know best.
Let's kill it all.

Things Unseen Though Known

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/things-unseen-though-known/

In the beginning, one finds God alone, on an empty beach, the waves descending and ascending, like before but never the same, slight modifications adding up an ocean of change.
It makes much difference whether we are there as well, or if we dwell within the waves, well, then no use in trying. But the moon and sun and other stars reveal themselves to those with open eyes, as other causes,
to the point that one was many,
and that God reflects the lights of all
as in a mirror darkly, surely a mirage,
as sure as man can be, yet free
to twinkle like a passing ghost within our minds and memories, of times long gone and things unseen
though known.

Justice

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/justice/

How does one answer them, naked and screaming for more, when the task
ever new yet the same, makes demands?
One is rapt by Sophia, beloved of philosophy,
whose darkness conceals all we know,
and makes hidden supposéd self-evident truths.
Evermore? Or shall we again find that thing that makes peoples cohere, nestled in us, right next to the beating heart? It's a start,
but the task, ever new, makes demands,
and we may find ourselves unequipped
for its burdens, until we revisit our gardens of men, and equip them with sturdier material.

Child of darkness, darkness unverified,
tell me your secrets, and I will make hidden what ought to be so. Let me guess. You are sure that the empire is falling and ought to fall.
You have known all injustice. The beaker is full of the dregs of revenge, and mankind is no better than its worst have been. You will say this,
but time goes on, turning its wheel,
as you squeal and you moan about nothing
not already known by all those who have lived.
For you will not survive here unless you can learn to forgive.

Turning and turning the wheel that keeps turning,
we know now that all Rome is burning,
was burning, and always shall burn
'til we learn that we are not pure atoms
but live here as one holy tribe.
It is hard to describe what I mean,
but not so far beyond that it cannot be grasped,
if one only had what one first came for,

so long ago, out of the ether and into this world of mankind gone awry. But whence comes this true hope for a justice no earth-dweller knows?

The Wind and My Place in It

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/the-wind-and-my-place-in-it/

Can anyone remember the point of it all,
or have we lost it, falling into some oblivion forevermore?
I am not one to remain
where I am not wanted,
and so talk of substance or soul
bears no weight. But I am among others myself, and thus crucially work out salvation through trembling (the fear has abated),
but just whose salvation remains to be seen.
I won't be there to see it, having other things to be, and until then
I work for another. Is this, then, the point?
Or does this too not satisfy? What of the wind and my place in it?

A Start

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/a-start/

Let this be a start, and let it answer for the pain of years neglected
by a faith alleged to free us from all time.
Is God still there when you are alone?
Or does he come in groups of three,
as legend has it? Answer me this and I will leave you to yourself, and I will leave you as you were and are and shall be.

Assassination

27 July 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/07/assassination/

In those moments when everything changes,
by bullets or otherwise, know this:
that time carries on, and that we are its ministers, solitary here
despite chaos, despite bloody pain,
though this is not enough to assuage
the unrest. What becomes of a people shorn thus from itself by an act of the most basic barbarism?
Some will say yes, others no,
but all must feel profoundly
the change that has come, and the change that was barely averted.
In times like this, weep, but then rise to your feet and speak loudly
that weakness inspires all bloodthirsty deeds,
for the strong have no need of them,
having instead the support of the people.
This weakness remains the great animus,
cause of all fear between men,
though this time it has been unsuccessful.
In time we will see what this means.

The Fulcrum of Time

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/the-fulcrum-of-time/

In the face of death, who stands?
Buddha says an unwounded hand
may handle poison, but I say life lives to wound, and who is not wounded?
But grant that the virtuous bear it better than those sick with desire, death still comes reaping through time to this moment,
the hour of decision, where all things can change and where death also reminds us of spring and new birth on the fulcrum of time at the pivot point of our lives.

Kindle the Flame

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/kindle-the-flame/

Kindle the flame, turn the hearthstones,
and tell yourself why you have come.
A reminder to always believe,
even when there is no ground beneath you.
That flame flickers bravely in all darkness,
which ignites an embryo's life,
and drives it on. It's no small wonder that we're here, or how we're here.
But then from time to time the hearth grows cool, as part of the cycle, and our duty is to tend it with all care. It's there now, bhikkhu, and your path goes in a circle,
out into the dark and cold to bring flame there
and then back here to tend your own flame.
You must be aware. It's ancient, inexhaustible, and rare. I thus commend you to the present, if you dare.

Somewhere Other Than Belief

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/somewhere-other-than-belief/

I see you there, pacing, remembering
all that was done or left undone.
Injustice, you know it well. It is true,
the belief is flawed, but so will the next belief be flawed.
We can do no better. Accept it,
and lean somewhere other than belief.

Good Left Undone

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/good-left-undone/

How many wise men live quiet lives
withdrawn from the world and its folly?
Indeed they are wise to withdraw from a world that is perishing.
Yet how much good is left undone?

A Warning

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/a-warning/

Lost sheep want the shepherd's crook.
They feel their need.
But in the evening glow, few know that night will come. This is your warning.

She's There

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/shes-there/

I cannot find her, Sophia, the maiden of stars, in the heavens, nor here between men, but instead I discover her under the surfaces, deep in the veins,
through the cracks of mankind in the chasm
of time, where all life begins, under ideas, below even words. She is singing, and I cannot find her, but I know she's there.

Where You Are Stepping

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/where-you-are-stepping/

Power attracts the power-hungry, who,
always unfriendly (despite good appearances),
see other humans as prey, and devour
those too close to flee or too innocent to see what man is. But take heart, there is room in the emptier places, where trees are permitted to grow as they will, as are men. Know this then,
that your place may not be by the glowing lights,
but in soil, time's detritus, the life or your elders transformed into nourishment for you. Tread lightly.
You never know where you are stepping.

The Clock

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/the-clock/

The Clock is a cruel master, compelling
the best of men to kneel and bow
before rhythmic, infernal vibrations of machines.
I am keen to unwind this tall tale
before more are injured, but I fear I'm too late,
for my schedule is full.

On the Verge

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/on-the-verge/

Here we go, on the verge of ourselves, at the edge of another tomorrow, awaiting enlightenment, which comes from…where?
If ourselves, then for what are we waiting?
If not, then we've got it all wrong.

Everyone's Wrong

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/everyones-wrong/

Everyone's wrong about everything,
that's all, nothing more serious than that,
and yet all flickers bravely while perishing,
and few ever notice. Oh well, we are here,
are we not, so let's party, and not dwell
on substance or other mirages,
those lonely chimeras that keep thinkers up
and keep all others down…no, let's none of that.
Rather let's trace our way back to the stars,
where the gods always are, though we know
how they change, as we, always the same,
are the true pole on which it all turns…

Some may say it's absurd, and I hear them,
but how is a man to stay sane
in a tribe come mad?

Ancient Masters

11 August 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/08/ancient-masters/

The ancient masters still know best,
so trust them. Let them lead you.
For you may find grace awaiting in a secret place, known by the few who think, there where a garden grows
for those who speak the truth.

Plants in Their Soil

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/plants-in-their-soil/

When the peasants arrive, then you know you're in trouble, for they do not come when it's sunny. They'd rather destroy than create, and their countenances indicate malice deserved and served hot like the flame that they carry to torch all the structures that wrong them.

But Revolution itself has been absorbed by the blob of authority proselytizing itself forever and no other, that world order beneath which we wallow, without which we wage endless wars. But why struggle?
If some of our needs are met, why complain? It appears that we need some third power to mediate any antagonism, but this third cannot be supreme without sucking the life out of men, because (by definition)
it must not take sides. So it floats as its own sideless side and makes cowards all those who live under it, until they revolt.

But what grows in its place?
An American federalist dream, where each place
has a voice in the whole, but stays rooted?
I know of no better third, none more just nor more durable, than one which respects its constituents, who grow up like plants in their soil.

Nothing but Chaos

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/nothing-but-chaos/

Humans live always on the edge of a knife,
and what separates death from life is decision,
made plain by the struggle, the crisis through which we become what we aspire to be.

Metaphysics is goal-setting, a politics of the imagination, turned upward by hope to the light. Like all living things, humans as well need that light, and the lack of it rots us from root to branch. It's no wonder that we are so rotten, indeed, it may be lack of wonder that turns us away, back to mud and slime and the perishing of all ideals. I am writing to cast an illumination over all that no longer deserves it, to thereby revive
and to elevate life from the trenches,
to send it back into the sky.

But what sky will receive us, who know too much,
who have tasted the fruit, who are God itself?
Only that which we dream for ourselves?
But my dream is not yours nor yours mine.
Yet we long for it, some true belonging,
the kind that was prophesied, coming to roost over all. But which all? The true All, or just our "all", the sum of experiences marking our world?
We say this will do, and we dare not look deeper,
for we find there nothing but chaos.

Dignity

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/dignity/

Dignity is imbued through participation in rituals (no other way), and the tribe holds the key to the stair of advancement on which men climb. It's a pity to ask a man to raise himself, as if he could, as if this is not itself a ceremony,
as if men think for themselves.

The Source of Most Problems

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/the-source-of-most-problems/

I have been to the mountains,
I have been to the valleys, and I say that all's well that ends,
but what goes on too long
is the source of most problems.

Dreaming

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/dreaming/

What won't men do for a bit of dignity?
Somewhere a conscience stirs, but not here,
where much power distorts what men feel.
It's an end well begun and done many times before.
There's no hope of averting decline. The hope is to reproduce and to leave in posterity
some seed that lingers and dwells in the hearts of those marching into their decline, who thus also must hope for some future, etc. But when does the living begin?
Or was this what life always had been, and shall be,
an imperative, blood-sucking physiology? No. I mean, yes,
but we also live otherwise, and harmonize, one with another,
in some holy music, divine if anything is. There is hope, pure and natural as body but based on the human experience of city-building, surely our most striking feature, although we don't always succeed, we must try evermore to combine. Thus we shall journey on, into whatever future we dream and, by dreaming, become.

The Discipline of Virtue

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/the-discipline-of-virtue/

They have too much freedom, but who can stop them?
Surely no teacher, no sage, would dare impose on their freedom unless willing to die, given what they are. And yet justice rings true and cries out from the ether that we are like mushrooms in a damp, dark cave, ill-adapted to light and preferring our own noxious fumes. This is freedom, the freedom to wither and suffer without any destiny, not knowing better, forgetting that any have ever been good. We won't hinder each other. We have that much.
But what of the discipline of virtue, acquired through must repetition?

The Loss of Justice

26 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/the-loss-of-justice/

These are the pieces of our lives
tossed over the board by a careless hand which relinquishes claims to authority and weakens its own grip on power.

The loss of Justice is the eternal theme,
for she remains queen of our hearts
though not queen of our hands.

Beasts

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/beasts/

Our ideas have not caught up with the torrents of change that have washed over Europe, and thus Europe's children still linger near old flames, but oh, they grow awfully cold. What can spark
the next hope, when the flame dies completely,
and men once again become beasts?

Caught in the Gears

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/caught-in-the-gears/

The wailing expands our horizons,
out past all we know stands
an answer, and further, new questions.

The people push down
the delusions of compliance.

A primate is caught in the gears
and nobody can help it.

We didn't move

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/we-didnt-move/

We didn't move,
but the ground beneath us moved.

It was a tremor hardly felt
but soon observed with careful instruments, then felt. I was aware too soon,
but others feel it now, and so it grows.

We are now somewhere else, but who?
The ground beneath us moves,
but we have never moved.

Genius

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/genius/

The genius wanders through a field still wild and says "Look at that!", then continues until time runs out. Later others arrive and build homes there with schools and with workshops and all the attendant filth of mankind. Who can say which one knows the place better? Who can say, because all are but one or the other and none knows its opposite. But I take the side of the genius, as one that is closer to the original spring, the first fountain from whence we arrive here on earth or wherever we are. Look and see how very little the others have done that won't wither and maybe you also will join in the next expedition to who knows where and for whatever purpose we dream.

Many, Instead of One

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/many-instead-of-one/

Nature is both good and evil,
and we are caught up in it,
tossed by the yin-and-yang tussle within and without. Who then knows whether nature opposes itself,
or is many, instead of one?

No Leg Up

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/no-leg-up/

Gaze with me into this crystal ball and see people asleep. They really believe they're in heaven. Just look at them slumber, as if they have banished all danger,
as if there will be no more pain. I choose honesty, even when it must be ugly, and even when others exclude me for it. Life's better without the charade of success, the mirage that the race ends with prizes, and not,
as it must, with return to the dust for us all,
with no leg up for those who have climbed.

Journeying Ones

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/journeying-ones/

We were the journeying ones,
on a wander through wastelands,
forever approaching but never arriving,
mirage just beyond the horizon.

Less Imposing Principles

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/less-imposing-principles/

Nature has no purpose,
and least of all is its purpose
ourselves, who cascade between energies controlled by nothing. This is our belief, though unspoken, well-founded on experience we try to forget.
But may be some new hope could order thought, around less dubious
and less imposing principles.

Care Again

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/care-again/

There is a God-shaped hole
in our sky, and we do not care, do not take care,
take care of life itself,
in all of its forms. How can we
care again?

A culture in which we can thrive

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/a-culture-in-which-we-can-thrive/

It is one thing to know there is chaos,
another to nourish that chaos, and make it grow.
We are not in the mind of God, this much is true, but for that reason we must think and bring the world under a rule. It will not rule itself. Our order is good (at least it can be), but it will not grow itself.
So let us sow and tend and reap
a culture in which we can thrive.

Out there in history

27 October 2024
https://poems.culturing.net/2024/10/out-there-in-history/

We have learned all the virtues of formlessness
and thus become skeptical
that any such thing could cause happiness.
What do we know?
Maybe out there in history were some who knew better,
and maybe we still could be like them.

Pilgrims

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/pilgrims/

Sheep remain sheep, like most men,
and I know of no other way for them,
but I know that my own way is different,
and therefore has differing rewards.

I'm alone, it is true, but I'm also free,
and that's part of the American dream.
More importantly, I have seen God
in the hidden places, those which no group may enter,
where each one is man and man only,
no tribe to fend off the attackers.
God dwells there, in a holy of holies,
awaiting the pilgrims who soon must come.

C'est la vie

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/cest-la-vie/

The stupid are at home, meanwhile
the wise are lost at sea,
and we can be so many things
that few are anything, but c'est la vie.

Now and Then

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/now-and-then/

The artist scours an empty mind to remove any residue. Then he begins.
He must find his misfortune in asking what questions are askable, and by whom.
It will be no quick summary, no sudden triumph, but rather the slow decline of all that has come before. Only then will he lift his brush or pen, to define what will grow in new spaces, what begs to be heard, or what utters the gulf between now and then.

From Beyond

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/from-beyond/

How many cultures have come and gone,
and how many days remain unborn
in the cavernous womb of the world?
What is time, that it comes and goes,
and yet some things remain, like the Ship of Theseus? Washed here by time, we have no eyes for what could have been or will be.
We are stranded, denied true transcendence,
but seeing things come from beyond.

Light Bent by Earth

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/light-bent-by-earth/

Gaze (with proper protection)
upon that boiling vat of hydrogen
on which all things depend.
What mind of God dreamed such a thing?
And yet we dream it?

If you dare, you'll also learn that eyes can be damaged by staring directly and must find some other way.

As light bends, refracted by us and what we are, that glowing star becomes another Power, holding sway
as men hold sway, until the break of day
when light, most practical light, becomes our guide, whether bent or otherwise.

We do not care for the truth of the matter,
for truth never brought a child to maturity
nor guided a people to water. But light, bent by earth, can do both, and much more.

Never Been Wrong

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/never-been-wrong/

I've never been wrong before,
but there's a first time for everything,
like that time when two plus two equalled five,
or when men lived together in peace.

Still I'm tramping on through this wasteland of abandoned dreams.
I find a few worth keeping, and yet
all is not what it seems.

One More Line

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/one-more-line/

This begins where that ended,
after all this time.
It was nice while it lasted.
Here's one more line.

One of Those Days

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/one-of-those-days/

It's one of those days
when the shadows invite contemplation,
and all that has been becomes again.
Revolution has been overstated.
Have you tried just not worrying?
We highly recommend it.

Keener Insight and Better Plans

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/keener-insight-and-better-plans/

In a few years the world will look different and we are to blame or to praise,
but it's too late to stop it now.
In a few years, days, months, hours,
the sun will continue its circuit
as we, silly, unravel our momentum,
and reveal who we were when decisions were made,
back when things could change. Things keep changing, of course, as expected, but I hope
for a day with keener insight and better plans.

Think with Me

18 January 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/01/think-with-me/

I do not know where you are going or where you have been, but I think you are here and suspect that you really are somewhere. Think with me, and allow these still words to move again,
through your soul. I am warning you,
many ideas are dangerous, and you,
only you, are the one who can help yourself know,
which will help you, and which will hurt you.

The Form of the Matter

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/the-form-of-the-matter/

Are we at it again?
Always moving, progressing, becoming ourselves…
One way ends as another begins.
There are secrets within, and yet I am without, on the fringes, where men
build their fortresses which soon turn to sand.
Who's to say whether this rubble matters
in the cavernous space of time,
whether we even matter, whether anything matters,
or what mattering even means? It has meant both too much and too little. It means that we have set for ourselves a goal, but we're fickle and have had too many goals already. And yet, what else can we do?
                But I say
we matter, because otherwise life becomes too much like death, too unmoored from the form of the matter, and this is our greatest fear. Is there no other way to explain the true wonders of life?

Think Harder

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/think-harder/

I invite you to think again
your own thoughts, not the echoes of others.
I invite you to be that much human,
for although most do not do such thinking
the few that do earn a place for mankind
among stars, in the nebulae of wonders that nature produces. So, please, go on thinking, to your mind's content, ere the rabble return
from whatever destruction they've dreamed.
But think harder for them, with some pity,
for they did not make their own natures
and you did not make yours.

Dream Wisely

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/dream-wisely/

Witness the morning,
alive with the rising sun,
moving up through the treetops.

I have come to remind you
that you are the vestibule of dreams.
Dream wisely.

Outside the Law

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/outside-the-law/

Who would have guessed that another dawn comes, even for us? Yet it comes as we wander from day to day
like the children we are in the morning, when life is too bright and we shield our eyes
lest they burn out, as has happened to those who were here before. In that dawn,
I stand ready to embrace the new spirit,
for the blind have at times made good poets,
and I feel likewise aligned with the tides
of those minds that can linger over all the minutiae that others pass by, and thereby can derive at their leisure some new eyes
for a new kind of pride for mankind.

But you know none can do it alone, and it's true that belief is the glue that combines us, even those found untrue, but for me, as for you, the delay between my needs and the will of the group forces solitude, and I would just like to invite you to join me outside of the Law of Rome, where the spirit can grow to fill needs and then test the waters apart from any pre-ordained Plan. Yes, there's life there, lots of it, but we who have broken our chains
now stand dumbstruck, unsure how to build or produce order without simply rechaining others, as well as ourselves, with the shackles of Law run amok (even making chainbreaking its own kind of law!) I would like to remind you: think harder. Our children depend on it.

Hardly two millennia

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/hardly-two-millennia/

What does it mean for Rome to fall,
to keep falling, as if through space,
a figment of the mind? It means that we are free! The masters perish, and we gleefully divide their very bones, and yet
we live on their estates or what is left of them.

New Hearts

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/new-hearts/

Who will remember us? We, doom-scarred and battle-stricken
who never initiated the mysteries of procreation
but still create in other ways, through song? It is at least a hundred years until our names be lost, our property divided or destroyed
though words live on, not just on paper or on screens
but in new hearts.

More alarming by the day

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/more-alarming-by-the-day/

Who is to answer them, the critics
without a direction, the spineless destroyers,
the miserable seeking company? Not more like them,
not their progeny, not those in chains, but the free.
We have made all men free, so we say,
but it has not gone well, or at least it has been a mixed blessing, where most cling to freedom
as devotees, as fervent and small-minded as any peasant,
and who is to sing to or for them?
Such a soul is not a place for song,
being wracked with uncertainty and crushed by the burden of thinking through things on its own. Why despair?
Even that is unhelpful, when men have been made more than useless by systems, demands, institutions that expect them to doubt what they are, although at the same time, to belong is in fact what they are.
They are drawn to the group by instinct, but these groups proceed to destroy the group instinct. So what can we say?
There is nothing to say, one would like to pass by,
but this power becomes more alarming by the day.

All Too Soon

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/all-too-soon/

Observe the winds of change, but do not bow.
You are here anyhow, where things can change
and where we must make choices, yes and no.
It is your time to go, and yet you do not know what happens next. I beg of you please with respect
do not tarry forever or plan every inch of your kingdom,
but go and be baptized by fire, as some were before,
and take heart, and take action, and burn what is rotten,
but leave root and stem that the plant may regrow,
for the next harvest comes all too soon.

Lord will it also be sweet

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/lord-will-it-also-be-sweet/

I have lived in a time when living was out of fashion. I have heard my own howl.
What happens when the sword of Damocles falls
as if by accident? Who prospers? In the nick of time
I am running toward renovation, and it will be painful
but Lord will it also be sweet.

A Time for Beginning

08 March 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/03/a-time-for-beginning/

If there was ever a time for beginning, it's now, in the cool embrace of both past and future, holding firmly
the hands of both, in between what has been and will be.
But this now, at this moment, is specially charged with an urgent decision, to moor to the shores of a recent past or cast off into waters unknown. But those waters have been known before by some like us, and some came out better for knowing.
Are we so accustomed to Progress and all its accoutrements that we grow too fat to endure? Or are we so hasty to abandon the ways of our fathers that no sacred temple shall stand?
It is both, and neither. It is time to begin the assembly of the future, but keeping in mind
the successes as well as the failures of those who came before.

Ever Ready to Blossom Again

05 April 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/04/ever-ready-to-blossom-again/

Let's break open the shell of the past and invite the discomfort of knowing. This way is the way of the hero, demanding courage.
You are that hero, and I…I am only your guide,
here reminding of quests left undone and treasures forgotten out there on the cold plains of Lethe. So many have come and gone, so many…but you are here now
to remember, and put back together what once,
or a few times, made life more bearable,
here where the shores of the past meet the future's ocean,
where all life occurs, and where, if you listen,
an ancient god stirs, ever ready to blossom again.

Hard to Explain

05 April 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/04/hard-to-explain/

I, too, was young, and carry inside me the memories of youth.
Like an onion, the layers grow, but the deeper layers remain.
It is hard to explain but it's easy to know.
At one time you, too, were aware of this.

All Rise

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/all-rise/

It is time to face your adversary, but does he have a face? Or is he idea only, or, less, an abstraction
imbued by one's training for combat?
It's time nonetheless, notwithstanding these questions,
for there are the drumbeats of war,
and you, poor you, are heard chanting destruction upon those you do not know.
Is it time, or are drums known to lie?
We must fight one another, they say,
in good Latin, but I have begun to doubt their designs. Can you question it?
Can you too sniff out these rats of the mind
and in place of them take hold of visions in which all rise? It is time to expunge adversarial guise from our laws,
from our thoughts, from the skies.
We have only begun to understand what could be
when our whole is greater than its parts,
when we all comprise something noble,
when no one is master or slave.

The Curtain Falls

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/the-curtain-falls/

The curtain falls on a people in pain.
"God is dead" says a man born insane.
There is nowhere to run. There is nowhere to hide.
They are standing alone in the rain.

A jester appears by their side.
He is laughing though he is no guide.
Tomorrow, he says, is no longer.
His apple is tempting their pride.

Still, he is certainly stronger than those who prefer to fear-monger.
But even the laughter must wane.
And then what remains?

Yeats' Footsteps

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/yeats-footsteps/

If I follow Yeats' footsteps
to the gates of Constantine's city, what will I find? A sense of order,
perhaps, most lacking in the West,
but one we can borrow? I doubt it,
as much as I share the longing,
for we are committed to Roman belligerence, scions of the eternal city. What care we for order or harmony? Conquest is too much fun.

Thinking Begins

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/thinking-begins/

This is an impression made concrete,
the birth of ideas, the origin of reason (of one chain of reason), and next comes deduction, and then experiment. But listen, friend, for the sounds of inspiration
made manifest by one who has had his thumb on the pulse of time. Only after this,
thinking begins.

Somewhere, Somehow

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/somewhere-somehow/

What are we building? A kingdom,
a fiefdom, for a new rule of law?
We have been to the top of the pyramid,
discovering Nothing, the black hole consuming all those who pursue reputation. But what are we building? It is not enough to tear down.
We will have to live somewhere, somehow.

You Carry It Always

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/you-carry-it-always/

The Spectator steps through the door into Nothing, aware of himself and the other selves of which he is part, falling faster than rhythm or rhyme can describe. It's a pity no home was awaiting, but this is no time to look back. With feet braced and arched back he descends through the labyrinth of thought toward origins, never a settled being, forever
turned forward and moving with things that flow.
But you know he remembers another time,
before he was here, before any here was,
in the space between thinking and being,
the caverns of essence, brimming with glittering stones.
I would like now to show you this place,
to invite to your mind a new feeling,
the oldest knowing, which hereafter reigns
as it always must reign, although so few can know (are you one of them?). Look to the hills for the meaning of meaning, and you will not find it,
but look to your heart and it's there, where it cannot be dislodged by violence or brought to account by tribunals…it's there,
and you carry it, always.

Nothing

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/nothing/

Nothing is what it claims to be.
It has no things.
Without things, it has no thought.
Without thought, it has no meaning.

How Much Time

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/how-much-time/

How much time must pass,
how many ages fade
before we build to last,
before our debt is paid?

We labor, it is true,
amid the factories and glass,
but skies are sometimes blue,
and one would like to ask,

What purpose serves the labor?
It is very hard to prove that working hard can save her who is troubled by our mood.

But no more questions,
for they do not seek an answer.
It is only in the quest for more
that life has any savor.

Many Smiles

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/many-smiles/

There's a sort of haunting indiscretion,
a pain just peeking through, in many smiles.

Corners of Strangeness

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/corners-of-strangeness/

I am having the strangest life,
and you are my audience, always
just barely there, in potentia, never in flesh.
But let me remind you, lest you forget,
about corners of strangeness left unsaid,
where clocks strike forever and both you and I become One.

Had You Been There

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/had-you-been-there/

Had you been there, you would know
the way the sweet day-lilies grow,
but you had too much email.

On the Side of the Earth

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/on-the-side-of-the-earth/

I shall plant myself firmly
on the side of the earth,
and take part in discussions about love and worth with perspective: we are not forever, though something calls warmly
from elsewhere, to beckon us home.

Labor Pains

30 May 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/05/labor-pains/

These labor pains are for you,
as I offer this gift. Can you take it?
Or is it unwelcome? I cannot decide.
But you, you will have to decide.

That Hollow Moon

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/that-hollow-moon/

> We sat grown quiet at the name of love;
> We saw the last embers of daylight die,
> And in the trembling blue-green of the sky
> A moon, worn as if it had been a shell
> Washed by time's waters as they rose and fell
> About the stars and broke in days and years.
>
> I had a thought for no one's but your ears:
> That you were beautiful, and that I strove
> To love you in the old high way of love;
> That it had all seemed happy, and yet we'd grown
> As weary-hearted as that hollow moon.
>
> Yeats, Adam's Curse

Moon shines ever new, a changing world,
as we, thrust in the void, spin madly, daring not to be deceived, but also floundering. Oh, if only the old high way could save us, bring back to earth the faith that once illuminated ancient hearts. But it is lost, and has been lost for quite some time.

Can time redeem us, or is time itself
most doubtful, playing cards with all our hearts, without remorse? We sit grown quiet too.

I could go to her

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/i-could-go-to-her/

On the doorstep of adventure, I write to you (one last time?) about all that could be.
You will know so much better than I what became of myself, whether obstacles or I proved stronger. But here on this precipice overlooking all, I confess it,
I feel afraid. Is it courage or hubris that pushes me on? Is it time? Or is it mere chemistry, stirring these bones with infusions of blood? I don't know, but I do know that I must linger
and dwell within this possibility: she is there.
I could go to her. I could also be there.

Woken by Storms

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/woken-by-storms/

Climbing back down, into sheets of myself,
I have danced at the summit of dreams,
but no longer. The way goes through many a village, all dark, with no room at the inn. But no matter.
I must venture on as my only companion,
I must face the frost with no fear in my heart,
lest the others be woken by storms.

Just One Moment More

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/just-one-moment-more/

Back to myself, coming home, it's a wonder that any can dream, that the dreaming goes on amid war, amid pain…can it be? or are dreams merely dreams? But who authors them? I do not know, though I think that we do it together. So why be alone? That I do know. Because I am drawn to the water of origins, back before any were separate, I feel its love far more strongly than any love of mammals.
I feel that the earth is my home,
and no smaller home will do.
So I wander in spirit, awaiting the needed recommunion, unable to settle or build any firm foundation, because I know none will suffice.
And yet it was nice to believe,
to be free, then no more be deceived.
It was nice, and I choose to remember before I forget, and to dwell and to linger
among all the sugar and spice
for just one moment more.

Passion chokes out thinking

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/passion-chokes-out-thinking/

How many thoughts must I lose to distraction, to chasing dreams or ghosts of dreams? It is written that I shall abide here. In time you will understand, you will follow the thread
back to daylight, and nurse your own wounds.
Why then linger? Why hope? Is Pandora still casting her curse? It gets worse.
She is queen of this world, and her gifts must inspire destruction. Who hails from a distant land? Who knows or cares, when passion chokes out thinking in its slumber?

The Presence of Love

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/the-presence-of-love/

Come to me, spirit. Invite my displeasure, but don't leave without first deciding which moments to spare. You are there,
I am not. Can it be some other way, or must I be like those burned by light of day
in the presence of love?

How much love

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/how-much-love/

How much love can I muster,
What kind of rule can I bring
To a heart that has lost its luster,
A mind that can only sing?

Daylight

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/daylight/

She was like daylight, her visions unfolding beyond my control. What a pity no strong arms could greet her. A pity,
but one that I cannot assuage.
So why must she be so beautiful?

Make my dreams true

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/make-my-dreams-true/

There comes a time when a man is whole, and can truly say yes. That time may be coming for me, but the hour is late and so many decisions have already been made.
Is it true? My heart beats for her,
yes, it is true. But am I fit for love,
or for even attempted love,
after all this time? Worms will eat through all things, so they say, so what lasts?
Only dreams, but is love but a dream?
I'll dream longer, and make my dreams true.

As Only You Can

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/as-only-you-can/

I have passed through the valley of Sirens, and, tied to the mast, I could hear what I wanted to hear. It is fine to move on, to break free, from this strangest disease
we call love (although love like Proteus has many forms),
but this dalliance had not the flexible grace of Greece
but the harsh and inviolate law of Rome.
With the Good Book strapped to her girdle,
there was no way in for intrepid sailors like me.

Bon voyage, ma chérie. I salute you in French, hoping some of its grace (grown on top of Rome's soil) can inform what must be a hard life, and make supple
what begs to be so. You are woman, and I know you know what that means.
You must bend without breaking, receiving the energies of just one man, here on earth, not in heaven. They will not be perfect, nor can you demand they be so,
but they will be yours to distribute as only you can.

They prefer the abuse

02 July 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/07/they-prefer-the-abuse/

Who is the boss of them, clambering
after Forever, in search of some other world,
if their God is not real? Who's to say, whether this is permitted or that? They forget how to answer these questions. Afraid of the dark,
they burn five-hundred candles each night,
(Zoroaster might approve), but to no avail.
The dark reemerges in sleep, in dreams,
and in each indecision that comes their way.
Who's to say, when nobody can say anything,
in a country of echoes, the land of the same?
It's insane, but that does not stop them.
I would that they would break free
from this cosmic, imperial tyranny,
but it is no use. They prefer the abuse,
and outside of it find only terror.

The one who will understand

01 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/the-one-who-will-understand/

I think humans are monsters
and there's no cure for it.
But you, mi amore, you are different.
You are the one who will understand.

Less perfect than it seemed

01 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/less-perfect-than-it-seemed/

Even unrequited love
can change a man, awaken
sleeping powers of the soul, inspire courage. So take heart, and listen from the start to every call.
Don't be afraid to fall.
But do not fall too fast,
for as things pass, this too shall pass,
and what remains will be less perfect than it seemed.

Vassals of Despair

01 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/vassals-of-despair/

> God slays Himself with every leaf that flies,
> And hell is more than half of paradise.
>
> E.A. Robinson, Luke Havergal

What is our theme? Alert while others dream, we see through all?
But then we start to fall,
and though the whispered words do call through falling leaves, we hear them not at all. It's too much trouble, hearing, isn't it? I say awaken slowly in your own time, not as words or leaves or others make demands, but when the light inspires in you that moving force, which drives the bud to blossom. Only then can you feel free.
Listen to me: there is a way out,
up through years of painful memories, to hope,
which sits enthroned upon the hearts of happy people,
who, like us, were once the vassals of despair.

Farewell, Isis

01 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/farewell-isis/

Evening comes, and day wanes.
What a glorious dream! What a hope!
Then no more. Are you sure you can make things last? Are you sure?
I have been to the house of the dead.
I have waited and moaned
with the other lost souls,
but when Isis appears, I say:
staying is better. What folly.
And yet it is better to know,
I suppose, than to wonder,
but life without wonder is death,
and no hope can awaken all those who refuse. Farewell, Isis.
Return to the world of the living and look for your happiness there.

Growth

01 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/growth/

Into the fathomless woods
goes a boy, and then out comes a man.
Do you understand? It is foolish, and yet it is life itself. What is growth?
And how dare we control it?

Angry, Solid Blue

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/angry-solid-blue/

Who am I really? After all these years with memories of selves past…am I him, or him? Each life I have lived flickers by like the clouds in the sky, in fast motion, a time-lapse, but none seem true now. Don't be blue, they will say, but all I can see is the empty expanse of heaven
inviting me to fall up, against all gravity.
Who am I really? A protein in one cell of the universe, or angel song made manifest? Oh, soon, very soon,
we will have to decide, but even these questions
mean little against that angry, solid blue.
And what about you? You must see it too.

Ariadne

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/ariadne/

Ariadne, weave your thread around my heart. Invite me into your labyrinth, and I will slay countless minotaurs.
But don't be hasty.
Your thread is thin, and bears
not the weight of a strong encounter.
So take my advice.
You must build for yourself
a golden cocoon
through which you'll become what you are.

Marriage Bed

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/marriage-bed/

I shall prepare the marriage bed,
and even if it goes unused,
at least I have found my purpose.

Love is a flame

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/love-is-a-flame/

Love is a flame
that keeps us warm
or burns down the house.

Build a hearth to keep the flame.
Build a home to keep the hearth.

Broken Wing

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/broken-wing/

It's not enough, is it, these words, these haunted memories, to tear us from the grip of ghosts?
I have been here before, and I have failed.
Now is no different. So says sober me, once passion drains away. Not just today, but always, I abide by rules which
in no heart confided could survive.
It's not enough to sing, not with this broken wing.

Face the Day

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/face-the-day/

When day came, it was not the day of the casual sun, not the standard planetary flyby by which a comet enters orbit. Instead, it erupted Vesuvian, belching magnificence, power, and dread.
Now old memories, the people of Pompeii
no longer move or breathe, old habits frozen forever in their final moments. What day is this, and who worships it? And yet who dares not to worship such power? The gods come again, roused from slumber by hope, and their terrible,
awesome day spins the earth on its axis,
reminding the people to pray, and yet
taunting them, laughing as lives fall apart.
Yet I know these gods well, know to trust them
as far as it goes. But where does it go?
Oh, it goes sideways more often than not.
Do we dream to make this world better or just to escape it? Then I say, let day come,
the fullness of day, every hour and all the minutia.
But if we dream just to escape into dreams,
I say let me keep my eyes wide open,
to face the day and to see the calamity firsthand.

Plant It

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/plant-it/

I will take my love
and plant it
and see what grows.

Civilization for the First Time

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/civilization-for-the-first-time/

I stand naked before the tribunal of women,
who jeer and who mock with their saucy jibes,
like a horde of barbarians, face to face with civilization for the first time.

No Way Out

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/no-way-out/

I stand accused
  in my own heart,
I face the judge
  of my own vanity

And lo, there is no way out.

My heart is tempered,
  true, and yet I fear its bouts of madness
  will o'erpower me

And lo, there is no way out.

But love! they say
  can temper even madness,
but we know that love
  is madness itself

And lo, there is no way out.

Love conquers little

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/love-conquers-little/

Love conquers little.
It only makes fools
of those who embrace it with arrogance.

All that could be lost again

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/all-that-could-be-lost-again/

Tug on the string, and watch unravel
the miseries of untold years, the pain of impossible loves and undying hopes,
the sorrows of things that can't be.
You would like to be free, but I tell you
you must pay a price, not to me,
but to gods that you have not yet known.

They will ask for your heart, and, if given,
will suture your wounds. But the scars will remain, which, like all scars, bring with them
a certain loss of feeling. It is up to you.
If the pain is too great, you can leave it,
but not without leaving as well much that made life worthwhile.
You may then find new things that make life worthwhile,
but not without irony, not without sardonic laughter
for all that was lost and for all that could be lost again.

If tomorrow will be any better

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/if-tomorrow-will-be-any-better/

If I ask myself why,
sneer the answer on the page,
and get rid of it, what good results?
I am rid of it, true, but
the sky and my heart are still blue.
So I am asking you: are you there?
I don't know what good purpose is served or what hope can endure, but I know where I stand, as my hand grips the pen and the page. Shall I rage?
There is nothing deserving of rage.
Shall I moan? This at least fits my mood.
And yet lest I be misunderstood,
let me tell you, tomorrow is coming.
Aye, there I can pin my gaze,
as I navigate all the bent paths of this maze.
But who knows if tomorrow will be any better?

How to Garden

17 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/how-to-garden/

I see a beautiful woman
coming into bloom,
but is it too soon to pluck that flower?
If some wild animal comes and tears at her roots, she will wither and die.
But if the wind blows and carries her gently into my garden, I will nourish her.
I have left a place.
And if the wind blows in some other direction,
it's not my concern.
For at least I have seen her.
At least I have learned how to garden.

What Waiting Means

27 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/what-waiting-means/

It was a strange invitation, wrapped in metaphor, baked in a poet's heart. But the heat of that heart is untrustworthy, cannot be turned on by choice.
So I capture its moments in words, hoping you
dear reader may just for a moment remember me not as I was, but as I wanted to be.

There is no kiln to light. The embers dwindle, and I am alone with my darkest parts. Who's to say whether life is mistaken in some fundamental way, whether we are tossed hopeless by waves of chaos and change regardless of choices made? Who'd want more?
Who would pass on the cycle to new generations, just to watch as they also flounder? What hope can this cure?
There is no fire either, just stories of fire, the memories of what worked before. There is only the loneliest path, the one I know better than life itself, the one that leads into oblivion.

But then light comes, that staggering light,
which illumines this darkest of nights. I'm alive.
And how can this be? How can such things be?
Every heartbeat an indecipherable miracle, each breath
the spirit of God (come again to remind me how so unlike churches he is), and I wonder what place I might have in this universe pulsing with life, which is brimful of folly and pain
but also unquenchable hope.

My place is to write this down, to record what has been, so that others will know, so that some few will see what could be, and to you who believe, I say:
let us be free. It is never too late to begin.
You must look first within, where your fire is undoubtable.
Then use that flame to light torches that guide the way.
There will be some who fear that your candle is meant to destroy, who will snuff it if given the choice.

You must burn all the hotter to melt their instruments,
to singe any wind that dares to extinguish the flame.
But of course, you already know this. In fact,
you could do no other. Your eyes tell me so.

But those eyes are not candid. They bear not the full imprimatur of truth. They are under construction.
They lack what suffices: eternal fuel, the wax of forever and always, to bind that flame to its holder, to make sense of flame itself, and to carry the warmth that is so sorely needed. What then? Can we call to it, summon with words to forsaken spaces that essence that once, and again, and forever ignites its very self in a panoply of dazzling colors and lights? Would that do?
Or must we wait for another?

We must wait for another, but which one we never can (cannot yet) say. That is what waiting means.
Until then, be at peace, if you can.

Rest and Recover

27 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/rest-and-recover/

It has served its purpose.
The stimulus, now nearly dry,
still excites contemplation,
but its change is wrought.
It has done its job,
and the turmoil is over.

I am no longer who I was,
and can barely remember a time
when I was not as now.
But the change has been wrought
(I lived through it), and any tomorrow will bring on a new change. For now,
I must rest and recover.

Smoothie

27 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/smoothie/

She was a smoothie
containing intriguing ingredients
but not well blended.

The Other Side

27 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/the-other-side/

Can anything come of it,
days, weeks, and countless hours
lost searching my soul for the embers of love…if it came from above
it would hardly be so confusing.

And yet it did come,
and from somewhere, but where?
And what now? I am sure that I'll never be sure.
There is folly in testing the ice,
but the prize, on an island of hope
at the center of frozen lakes of hell,
is unspeakable happiness, joy that confounds
the most clever machinations. Does that give the answer? For now that I've glimpsed it, how could I unglimpse it? And how could I not at least test these solid waters, this temporary land-bridge, to see what's on the other side?

Wander on Stormy Seas

27 August 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/08/wander-on-stormy-seas/

I saw your light
and your darkness, guessed
at what might be inside, and felt amazed. But how can the heart be so filled
by an honest mistake?
It's not true, and I knew,
but I could not stop falling for you.
Now I tell you,
please take what I gave
and be strengthened,
but know I will never give more,
because I cannot settle my mind
into shapes that would set you at ease.

The heart of this poet
must wander on stormy seas.

I could do no other

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/i-could-do-no-other/

I feel as though
I have spent two months
in dreamland, constructing a lover
who never existed,
who never could exist,
and the troubling part is
I could do no other.

Quiet, Quiet River

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/quiet-quiet-river/

The river is quiet today, and I would like to walk beside it,
asking many questions of its life.

Is Love the answer,
or is Love the question?

I have seen sad faces turn,
transformed by hope into glorious forms,
and I have seen this same hope die
time after time.

The river is quiet, and I would like to be like it, but I cannot quite escape the pull of destiny, which calls to me,

And says: you are not alone.
We are all broken-hearted.

And yet my heart breaks
in unusual ways,

and whatever the Gospel says,
it cannot heal my wounds.

But this river, this quiet, quiet river,
has germs of a quiet salvation
that has no need to be shared.

I will walk beside it
and drink it from time to time.

Tools in the Soil

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/tools-in-the-soil/

It is not enough
to have learned how to garden.

I must put my tools in the soil and feel with my own hands
the life of the earth.

To be me

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/to-be-me/

The silence is louder today,
but I am set free
to be me,
whether any other likes it or not.

Connections Worth Having

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/connections-worth-having/

Cool winds blow, the sun shines,
and I wonder whatever could inhabit such minds that they cannot acknowledge an olive branch even with a simple refusal.

Do I so scare them
that silence becomes required?

Or can their own inner conflict
not be put into words?

Or was something said, but said quietly,
in some way that I could not hear?

I will never know.

So all I can do is be me,
for no other path
leads to connections worth having.

Nothing Changes

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/nothing-changes/

Nothing has changed.
Time goes on, but I stay what I always was.
It's a miracle
that I have survived nature's practical jokes,
that its tricks do not do me in, given what we are.
But love stays out of reach for those whose inner worlds are unwelcome.
There is no cure,
and nothing will change,
but time still goes on.

Short of a Miracle

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/short-of-a-miracle/

Pain, pain of the deepest kind,
but also a slow resolve to put forward what might have a place
in my solitary world.

With these banners unfurled, I ignite
all my yesterdays, watching the conflagration consume pain and hope alike.

Is the tragedy that I can't love
or that none can love me?

I believe I have learned how to love.
I believe I am able.

But finding another to stand beside me and watch these banners burn
will prove more than difficult.

It will prove impossible, short of a miracle.

Calmly Without Fear

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/calmly-without-fear/

Wash me clean, O waters of Lethe,
and fill me with the power of forgetting.
It is but a moment we traverse here,
on our way to forever, but you, sweet waters,
are the needed salve, the balm to make all memories
(yes, even those of Lenore) disappear.
It has been done and must be done with proper care,
lest darkness conquer all, but with a bit of force
all is made new. And as for you, be true, but do not cling too long to truth, because these waters
beckon calmly without fear.

New Dawn

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/new-dawn/

A blank page stands before me,
ever ready for the unfolding of spirit,
for new dawn. Minerva's owl hoots gladly.

That Line

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/that-line/

> I've never been one who likes to trespass,
> but sometimes you just find yourself over the line
>
> Bob Dylan, Brownsville Girl

Where was that line? And how silly to cross or not cross…and what spirit transported me…into another me?

Flood (Too Much Speaking)

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/flood-too-much-speaking/

Rains fall so heavy, lightning, thunder answer, what is to be left of us,
what remains when all things age
and time washes away
the ink and blood on the page?
Are any left who know how to find ground, where feet
may rest, what drives the body
to exhaustion, time after time?
This is the beginning, another flood to cleanse the palate of God,
to wet his lips and throat
after too much speaking.

Only by forgetting
can we remember
what is most important.

Only by forgetting
can we come home.

The Present

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/the-present/

The future
is a mystery,
but what does the present hold?

Miseducation

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/miseducation/

The miseducation of young people who graduate with justified rage shall trouble us more than it does.

Shared Dream

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/shared-dream/

Love is always a dream,
but sometimes
it is a shared dream.

Excavation

07 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/excavation/

I never understood what they thought there was to win
in this world gone haywire, with nature run amok and mankind sliced adrift from his origins. No, all are losers here, all are forgotten by time
and left lonely by walls they can never tear down.
But across the way one hears church bells and thinks,
here some know how to live. But to my dismay
I find more of the same, and an arrogance blinding to spirit, a Wille zur Macht, the forsaken refusing to be forsaken. But what if tradition never died, but sleeps, in our hearts, in our stories, in our words? There would be some need for excavation.

But is there room for digging
in the garden, near the burial plots,
beneath the tree of life?
Or is there only land enough
for one or the other?

Maybe we just need smelling salts
to shake us from our slumber, to awaken love of the most careful kind. Or maybe love is folly and can't be careful,
starting as it must with strikes of lightning,
and then blazing beyond all bounds.
So what have we then? Playthings of the gods, we scamper on, through thick and dense dark foliage, letting some things sleep for as long as they can.

Few and Far Between

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/few-and-far-between/

Will the sun rise again, or will Isis return in some other form?
I am lost in a swamp of forgetfulness,
pensive but lacking any objects of contemplation.
Who cares? Not the sun, that's for sure.
So then why did I call to it, hoping to feel alive one last time? This heart has been set on its lonely path
by divine machinations, and doubtless years hence it will walk that path still. There's no other.
And yet one foot falls hard in front of the other,
reminding of a pain that was not so bitter
but was full of a hope that seems all but lost.
Is hope true? On occasion, but for some those occasions are few and far between.

Beatrice and Penelope

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/beatrice-and-penelope/

Whence comes this fascination, holy wonder, holy desire? Is it Beatrice, who, in human form mocked Dante for his love, and yet in spirit form inspired his rise to heaven? Who controls this?
It controls us. Lord, please grant me a Penelope that I might wander purposefully
and not be snared by Circe or her sirens.

Scheduled Procreation

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/scheduled-procreation/

Into the crypts again, down under all life, where the embryos nestle awaiting fertilization…I feel their terror, unsure what to be or become, lacking everything. What rude muscle comes to awaken sleeping powers, divide the world into us and them, and enhance life with new life? It will be what must be, as the wheel turns to the scheduled procreation.

But will it be happy?
Who knows?
That is not even part of the question.

Wane and Dwindle

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/wane-and-dwindle/

Urgent fires wane and dwindle.
Embers still remain.
A lonely man puts out his candle.
Nothing stays the same.

Bones on the Inside

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/bones-on-the-inside/

Walk with me near this carapace, this hard shell briefly discarded. Must I wear it again to survive here, or have I grown stronger, enough to stand naked and say what I have to say? I have so much to say to so many that I must take care not to damage them, but they can no longer damage me.
So let's walk with our bones on the inside.

Whatever This Call Entails

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/whatever-this-call-entails/

No one knows, do they, where roads lead or how to stay true to the path
one intended to take…in the forest
of life only instinct can serve as a guide.
But which instinct prevails? Surely some will destroy just as surely some lead to new life. Can we build around instinct the structures that guide her to safety and fulfillment? Is that the true task? One that's doomed from the start yet imperative nonetheless…
Or is wandering still an option?

Wandering is not an option for those who have glimpsed what it means to be happy. For these, to not try would be treason, a failure to heed
the calling horn. There are vessels to fill,
there are songs to write, and the world
spins forward forever, confounding our day in the sun.
The horn calls at the appointed time
to draw a man out of himself and into eternity.

Is there any other experience that compares to giving life? Why then do we waste such precious time on trivialities? There's not much point in arguing.
Those who know can't forget, and those who don't won't learn through words, but only if the horn rips through their souls, and we cannot summon the horn. It calls in its own time to summon us back to the great chain of being, or at least to the core of life's mystery. Who can resist?
So adieu to the solitary musings, farewell to the cage of the heart and a warm-hearted welcome to whatever this call entails.

But is it really time? Mischievous time, which hints where it does not fulfill? If only time would stop a moment, let me get my bearings

and appoint myself director of my life, then I'd find peace. But it is not to be,
not here where all things change, where man exposed to the elements discovers himself with horror. And yet I dwell here, and must dwell here, if I am to dwell at all,
because this call rekindles the horror
though it also sings of hope.

Hope, that thing with feathers, lofty,
erudite, and vain, what can you say
when faced with darkness, lust, and pain?
It is unclear which way the world turns,
how it moves or how our many special loves turn back to dust. But I know this much:
it cannot be helped, from either end,
the falling or the getting up. In each case
Time and its eunuch on the horn blow forceful melodies to doom mankind
to trying what so rarely comes to pass.

Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow,
I've heard that time keeps passing,
that our lives are mere ephemera,
but in the womb one hopes for something more.

The Center (Contra Hegel)

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/the-center-contra-hegel/

Life,
and not thought,
is the center.

The Hard Rock of Reality

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/the-hard-rock-of-reality/

With eagle's eyes, I gaze at shapes and forms fit for disguise, the soothing illusions that give us peace and rest…it is no wonder we build homes to keep the world out, and no wonder that the world is always creeping in. But hey, at least we're sometimes happy. That is more than some achieve, out there on the hard rock
of reality, where the sun burns and the winds parch
and man is a piteous Poor Tom.

A Home of My Own Design

26 September 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/09/a-home-of-my-own-design/

The mother reaches for love, remembering her children and how they brought her the orgasm of birth. Was their life
a consumable good, brought forth just to nourish
and satisfy the mother's most secret desire?
Had they not their own life, their own pulse,
their own dreams? She is sacred, of course, as the giver of life, and yet darkened
by unfelt desire and urgent craving
for a kind of connection that cannot be understood, which her own life denies her. Has some man failed her that she looks to her children for the kind of fulfillment through love that can only be known by equals? It was never voluntary, not in her whole life, and so why should her love be any different?

It should differ because the heart breaks absent freedom, and a mother who does not care that her child's heart breaks is no mother at all.
But what if she can't help it? What if she is doing her best, though constrained by her own limitations? The child must survive, and on this they agree, though the needs of the child
are ignored, not from malice, but from simple ignorance, or a conflict of needs, a conflict of personalities perhaps, but more likely a defect of one of them.

And yet the sun still rises, birds still sing
and rivers flow as they have always flown.
Does time heal or does time make us numb,
having tired of the pain and of all attempts to heal?
Sometimes flight is the prudent choice, when healing is urgently needed, and no other path offers even the prospect of life. But the best strength stands firm in these galeforce winds,

in the hurricane of maddening, unwanted love
and says "no" for as long as it takes.
And yet even this strength, though it wins many battles,
may never at last win the war, which began before any now living were born. But the fight is worth fighting, and one day this soldier,
when the dust has settled, may find himself
longing for even this puzzling enemy, whose love was too much,
to explain where he came from, and why he is good at building walls, such thick walls that so few ever enter, within which at least he is free.

But a door might suffice, if, supposing we found a good locksmith, we keep out intruders. This way the walls stand as a testament to all that has come before, the reality of human folly and the pain of ignorance. This is the way to life, honest life, though one not lacking in pain.
So good morning sweet sun. I now greet you from safety, aware and vigilant but calm and at rest
in a home at last, and a home of my own design.

Plurality

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/plurality/

Why do I feel what I feel,
and what feeling would feel more like me
on this wine-dark sea, as traditions mingle confounding the man who stays single with truth: we are all braided lives,
made from strands of other lives,
and all feeling confirms this plurality.

Hope

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/hope/

Hope is a curious predicament, lodged as it always is between certainties, positive and negative.
Some things could be, or become,
but are not, as things stand.
What a strange isolation,
a habitat for a kind of creature
so different from modern science
with its fetish for certain propositions,
its talisman of purest certainty.
Hope is not clear, nor is it distinct,
but it can lead to life,
and all new life begins with some hope.
So let's hope, but with clear-eyed humility,
aware of our limits, aware of what truly comes to pass.

The Pain of Knowledge

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/the-pain-of-knowledge/

I'm reminded again
of the path that I chose not to take,
of the world that was almost home,
and I wonder
what made me so different?

A secret pain, the pain of knowledge,
the knowledge of a deeper humanity.

Vesta, Return

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/vesta-return/

Vesta, return and remind me what love is. Rekindle your holy flame.
In the distance, I see what could be your form, but it shimmers just like a mirage
in this heat. Come to me, call my name.
I will answer.

Wisely in Spite of Ignorance

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/wisely-in-spite-of-ignorance/

Open the eternal secrets, pour the libations of hope
and give fuel to the flame.
It is tame now. The sky has subsided and only the earth remains.
But there's no peace on earth,
not while mankind endures.
So I'll cling to the sky
and hold fast to some passing cloud to protect me from sunlight
and all its wild children.

Is life good or bad?
Will we ever know?

Or must we choose wisely
in spite of ignorance?

Another Destination

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/another-destination/

I cannot understand it,
how the vagaries of forgotten time
bring love around and around again,
the ones I loved and the ones who loved me rarely meeting on equal terms. Who can say it?
Love fails more often than not,
but we cannot stop trying
or else we give up life itself.

Is there another destination,
some plateau whence comes the glaring eye of fate, which pulls me thence through all these vagaries? I doubt it, but I cannot yet disprove it.

Decision

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/decision/

Decision approaches. The hour is late and the pieces lie curiously skew.
Is it time? No, not time. Is it her?
I just cannot be sure. But that never has mattered.
No lover requires the certainty of science.
But am I a lover? Time tells, it tells so well…

The hollow part of me

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/the-hollow-part-of-me/

The hollow part of me
would like to be remembered and affirmed. It's always there, beside the courage and the pride,
reminding of emptiness.

Take heart, dull void.
I have not forgotten.
But I may yet fill you
with love.

Make Me More Worthy

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/make-me-more-worthy/

Into curiosities, mystically entwined,
I wait for answers, seeing questions leave their mark.
But hark! the herald comes from afar with news,
and days from now, in another life,
I may greet thee, dear friend, as a changed man.
But for now, I can only hope, standing perched on the needle of time, swaying to and fro
like a stylite surprised by a powerful wind, wind that tore through the valley of my heart
leaving canyons in what I mistook for bedrock.
And now I would have it no other way,
swaying wildly and laughing with a wind that decides who we are. I can only say make me more worthy to bathe in this holy air, fill me with laughter and the hope that comes from your sweet touch.

When Called to Build

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/when-called-to-build/

I remember a time
when I was a smaller man,
when I had no love to give,
but that time is over, and now
I will build when called to build.

Not All is Lost

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/not-all-is-lost/

I must not hope, and yet cannot stop hoping, but this hope feels gentler than many hopes past,
like a sweet kiss at sunset
reminding that not all is lost.

Godspeed, friend, on your journey to you,
and may some sweet tomorrow prove my love true.

Where True Power Lies

12 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/where-true-power-lies/

The father sits enthroned on a pile of books,
self-assured and aware of nothing, smug
with a smugness that begs to be heard, to be understood and obeyed. If he ever was in the womb, it's forgotten now,
as his thousand clocks tick the night away
until yesterday barely inspires a moment's reflection, and he is all, all is mind, and mind governs justly or else.

Were there not flowers, no sprouts poking through the cement of his chamber to enliven his hoary soul, to make supple
the rigid laws, the plans of old, which have surely expired by now? And would he have noticed if there were?

He could never have noticed, alone in his thoughts,
in a world of seclusion, cut off from vitality, hope, and pain. For of course it is true that a few of the flowers are poisoned, and therefore to banish them seems not misguided to one who is specially weak to poison. But are there not some who can taste and smell with strong stomachs,
who experience even the poisonous flowers without despair?
He was not one of these, not by far, and endemic disease is no way to bring children to life, so he settled for civilization instead.

But the earth would not have it, refusing him rest, letting pain be the constant reminder that laws are not able to contain the wilderness. He was unhappy, and yet he was hurt most by things that could save him
by opening (shattering) his chamber and sentencing him to life, lived only to the fullest. But he was afraid, so afraid that even death seemed better than the struggle required by life. So he stayed incomplete, as a form with no matter, a bundle of rules with no purpose.

The light was a surprise, coming suddenly out of some faraway sky,
to ignite the seedlings that had nestled in the earth for long enough. Now books grown over with vines form a part of the eternal cycle of birth and decay, and all laws are a part of the story, not over and above it.
The father reclines with a newfound mirth, understanding at last that his role is to tend to the gardens of life, not control them,
and never to stifle what grows, for one never knows whether an acorn is destined to be a great oak,
and the forest could use more greatness, and even a bit of gentle order, but an order that never forgets
where true power lies.

Amidst the shadows

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/amidst-the-shadows/

There is no East or West
but only the continuous circle,
the circumference of the earth.
Who then devised the scheme whereby mankind must be divided?
Who told East to begin and West to end?
We did, and do. These symbols linger,
as all symbols linger, underneath
the conscious mind, where shadows fight themselves, and all we want is peace.
But peace is hard to find,
and we have been unkind to others and ourselves. But peace arrives in sudden and unexpected surprise amidst the shadows, even here in our own hearts.

Help and Not Harm

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/help-and-not-harm/

There is little reason to hope and so few of our dreams come true that one wonders whether dreaming itself is some cosmic malfunction, or whether our dreams bring to light what is hidden about ourselves. But in any case, Jung was on point about this much, that something tortured slumbers in the soul of every man, and it cannot be killed or cured. It must be accommodated, always with an eye towards others,
the ones we depend on, who have their own souls,
whose tortures are not unlike ours.
We must help and not harm them.

Blossom

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/blossom/

It's not too late to start over,
to ask who or what we might be,
and to act on it, letting ourselves be revealed. It is never too late, for not even cold fate can deny the imperative to blossom. So blossom.
Unfurl your bright petals, expose your sweet nectar, and bring into life what sleeps deeply within you. This beauty will answer for itself.

Maybe for the Last Time

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/maybe-for-the-last-time/

With a spark I remember another flame,
one forbidden by time and place and another man. I cannot understand why these feelings, these urgings, these warm protestations against a cold fate, as her eros peeks through every word, and I dare to become so disturbed that I dream of her,
me, in another time, place, which is never to be.
Do dreams heal us or sicken what feels sick already?
What hope is there really for arrival, for destination,
for we storm-tossed, adjacent to the madness of the gods?
It just cannot be reconciled, no, not this soul
and that eros, not here and not anywhere, never and not near forever nor always, alone
in a word, yet disturbed nonetheless by the playful flirtation which surely was meant without harm.

But I grow from it into a better man.
Maybe "healed" is too strong, but "improved" could be said and believed. Must we look to one older to teach what can only be learned in the trying, from making mistakes?
Can we offer this gift to one younger?

We must pay it forward, the knowledge of how to behave and to love even those of the opposite sex. It has never been easy, and how many times has this lesson been learned incompletely, for how many loves are a farce, just a pale imitation
without any meat on their bones?
But we learn most by doing, and even a playful imagining serves as a kind of practice, a sacred arena
of self-discovery, where souls can mingle without repercussions.
But does she know that she offers this gift, or does she
by instinct entice out of me that part of a man that would like to learn love from hate, to distinguish these modes of intensity, and perhaps combine them

in something more grounded, a human endeavor to make one from two, which must always cause friction
but also makes living worthwhile…?

In the end, I'm not sure what to make of this feeling, perhaps one-sided, perhaps even pathological, and so I am grateful but cautious. She may not know that what she awakens is capable of callous cruelty,
and this by design, for a man must have war within him
if he is to build a home and protect it, and always he brings that capacity indoors too. She must learn to respect it, as I also learn what it means to have peace at the end of a long day, when the sun passes over the edge of adventure, maybe for the last time.

Love Must Come True

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/love-must-come-true/

I have gone into the closets of my mind
and through the cobwebs, under dust and piles of bones
I found a beating heart, now stronger than before.
It is no mystery that lingers, but the surest thing,
the soul of life on earth. It is unbreakable.
And now it seems to glow and shine through darkness and the vast expanse of heaven. Now it lingers as a solemn prayer, the hope of one whose voyage
has found port, the only answer to the only question.

Love, my friends…go find it, and then all will be revealed.

Into the fathomless, into the reaches of ecstasy, agony, joy, and pain, the wonders of being
and desolation's pang, all is here, in this beating heart.
It has mastered the sea and found land at last,
but the soil needs much tilling and forests must fall before any warm home could abide here. And so to that work
I now dedicate all that remains of my life,
every ounce of my strength and each moment of time to the work that makes good on the promise that love must come true.

And yet we make it true, we devise the contraptions whereby one and one become one, and we work and we build, but what drives this activity? Can it be other than heaven?
Can any imperative ever be other than heaven? We'd like to control everything, but so far it seems these most important things control us. And so let it be so. Let the world keep on turning, the sun keep on rising, the seasons keep changing, and love keep on growing of its own volition, with us as its vessels, enraptured
but not without reason.

Envelop

24 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/envelop/

Do you have the strength to surrender to another's ways, to let them envelop you at least for a while? And do you have strength to envelop in return, without doing harm?

Chiaroscuro Girl

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/chiaroscuro-girl/

The mind wants what it wants and the body does too, but she knows too much about love, about life,
to believe in the easy reunion of anima and animus. She sees the twinkle of dwindling thoughts,
the cool space in between our beliefs,
and she likes it there, under the ground,
where a seed might be planted.
She has learned to dwell not by choice
but by nature among all the spirits of twilight,
in a world of chiaroscuro,
as a chiaroscuro girl.

Silent Repose

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/silent-repose/

Some spirit comes again
to tempt me to dream
though waking. But was it a dream?
I feel changed in a way that no phantom could cause. There is life ahead, which means pain, no doubt, and an answer to all of my questions. I wait here in silent repose.

The Girl and the Stag

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/the-girl-and-the-stag/

She never did answer, preferring instead her most ponderous silence, the veil of Nothing incarnate.
A pity, but maybe in time she'd grow wise
and decide how to speak, how to utter unutterable truths.
As a matter of symbols she surely could master this too,
but the mapping of symbols to meaning was never the issue.
The meaning itself still eludes her, flees like a stag
in the lost wood, the one hostile to girls far from home.
Can she master it? Can she at last find herself with feet planted, at home in a clearing carved out by the call of her voice, her own voice, which so startles the wood that all pauses? The stag returns curious, gazing intently, unsure but amazed by her sound. He bows and their eyes meet.

Dark Abyss

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/dark-abyss/

I feel a strange despair
which does not answer to my thoughts or find release in any party tricks,
but only in the dark abyss,
the origin of all.

Not Meant For This World

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/not-meant-for-this-world/

We were just two fools
on a fool's errand,
awaiting the incarnation
of something not meant for this world.

For Once

29 October 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/10/for-once/

Maybe I just wanted
for once in my life
to hold my head above water,
to stand like a man on foundations
that cannot be toppled.

A Resonant Ordeal

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/a-resonant-ordeal/

I see you
seeing me
seeing you.

Not Quite At Peace

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/not-quite-at-peace/

Would there ever be an end to it or must it be carried like a burden,
the rush of the earth and eternal desire subsuming all good sense and order?
Can reason win? But how could it lose?
If mind be understood as a function of body,
and body of nature, then is there a difference?
Or is this yin/yang, nomos/physis, male/female, form/matter
not a conflict of opposites, but only the tensions of a living thing? The struggle is everlasting, and all find a place in it.
There is no other place. Time goes on,
and life with it, and life, it appears,
is not quite at peace with itself.

Elsewhere

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/elsewhere/

Fully aware of the absurdities of love,
its shape-shifting nature and elan/despair,
I nonetheless must foolishly declare
my own heart, if I'm ever to break free.
For the battle has always been inside of me,
where these symbols interpret themselves,
and my conscious attention is pulled undertow.
How amazing and brave one must be to confront one's own angels and demons, refusing to be anything but human. I see a green field on the horizon, now tilled,
but my seeds have dried out, though a few found a hole in the bag, and were scattered along the way. I cannot go back for them now.
They will grow, or not, where I left them,
and sun and rain will take care of the rest,
or not. But my garden is on other soil.
My garden has always been elsewhere.

Not What I Hoped

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/not-what-i-hoped/

Time passes, a new day follows
an old one, one wonders
and then one stops wondering.
Somehow I stood in the gap that spans the distance between who she is
and who she would have to be.
I see clearly now.
Something has changed,
but not what I hoped would change.

Who You Are (Out of the Chrysalis)

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/who-you-are-out-of-the-chrysalis/

Is there really a sun, or are we
in the dark, full of vaguely imagined illumination? If tomorrow comes, let it come swift and sudden, not drawn out, prolonged by the doubting moon. Into essence light peers, bathing hidden things, and unveiling sleeping beauties now ready for light of day. So arise and make good this potential for goodness. Awaken from dreams and live in your newfound reality.

Hold your head high and look forward.
This is who you are.

The Dream of the Birds

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/the-dream-of-the-birds/

It was never the way it was, it was always evolving, from one thing to the next,
and our folly was hoping to make it stand still.
By the window I stood and gazed long at the birds in the widening sun. They flew higher than I could, but somehow they did not get singed.
Only later I learned they felt empty, deprived of solid ground. It was never that way, though,
not really, for only in the dream of the birds
such thoughts roost. I once dreamed of flying too, but now I think ground suits my feet,
and besides, there are worms to eat,
and our hunger for worms is unquenchable.

Opened Door

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/opened-door/

I was not as ready as I thought I was,
not prepared for the chill air that rushes through an opened door. In my panic
I closed that door, and I think this was wise,
but one wonders how doors have ever stayed open for more than a passing breath…

A Blend of Struggles

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/a-blend-of-struggles/

I am now neither lover nor teacher nor even friend, but mere stranger. How strange to be cast as a Nothing in my own story, adrift in the ensemble, which calls to the hero but does not have any effect.
If in time hope must die, and I with it,
let this serve as my reminder that life is a blend of struggles, overlapping but not intersecting, orthogonal to each other and to the whole.

An Ear to the Whole

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/an-ear-to-the-whole/

How curious now, having flown so close to reality, that everyday life is what feels like a dream, and my dreams feel most real. In a sense I have been underground long enough, having decorated all of the ornamental chambers in the cave of my heart. There will be no visitors, and that is because of a choice that I can't quite regret though I can wish against its necessity. Fate holds firm, and my life continues as ever a desolation, lacking the love that makes life endurable, and lacking it most of all
in my own heart.

And yet I have made secret vows, and affirm them time after time. Can it be that this love could be easy and dares to be tried, despite all protestations? What hope can be realized? What interest lingers despite these harsh blows that would kill a lesser desire? If a love is not battle-tested, who knows its worth? Are we learning (or proving) that something here warrants remembrance, that something endures what no prior love could endure? I would like to think so, but then there is the rub, because hope can be mother to illusion.

And so I must straddle this ambiguity, letting both sides
sing their songs, even when the cacophony drowns out all sense of order, because neither side will submit. I must gird myself like Odysseus against the temptation to listen to one side or the other, because both are essential, and only together will they tell the story of what has transpired here. Apart each song sings of dejection and woe, but together their harmony is grander than either alone, as sweet counterpoint answers dark sorrow with the only possible cure.
To these melodies, then, let us turn, with an ear to the whole and a promise to hold them in tension, whatever may come.

Not Too Soon

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/not-too-soon/

Was I really in earnest, and really awaiting new love, or instead just awaiting the muse of love to rekindle my dying flame? All the same,
I have closed the door, just like all times before,
because love does not suit my true nature.
But of course it's a complex nature, overflowing with hopes and desires despite inability to see them through. And this will never change.
But at least I at last ran this simulation
all the way through to the end, cleared the cobwebs
and mopped the floor of my heart, just in case.
So as she takes her place in the chorus of failed loves,
I can stand a little taller, with a sense of wholeness.
Who knows when another love comes, but I hope it will be
not too soon.

Hardly Beginning

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/hardly-beginning/

Birth, after all, is a death sentence, bringing Pandora's whirlwind to life. Is it somber to doubt my own wisdom, forged in the fires of experience?
There is no better wisdom, and no truer goal
than a life lived completely aware of that life.
I'll walk on. The next chapter is hardly beginning.

Both True and False

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/both-true-and-false/

I recognized something that felt like home,
but I never got the chance to prove it,
or maybe I proved it but not in a safe way,
but what love is safe? At least heartbreak is possible, no matter the level of care. It's a strange thing to know love is both true and false.

As She Was

06 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/as-she-was/

Why did her being there cause such confusion?
Why her, after all, not another? I saw through the mist the mirage of the Lady made flesh,
and I fell in defeat before hope against hope.
But why could I not see her? Right there, in the room,
as she was?

Phoenix

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/phoenix/

Another day, another doubt, as doubts grow taller and threaten to block out the sun. Was this hope a mistake, or is doubt the mistake, or is this all a part of the cycle, on the road to ourselves?
There will be no coming together, that much seems clear.
Now I only can hope for beneficence, that somehow my impact was good for both sides, and in time this may prove to be so. In the meantime I'll tend to this dying hope, and I'll let it down easy.
It has had a good life, and the next hope, which must be its child, will have much to be thankful for
when it looks back at what came before.

And yet like a phoenix this hope is reborn
and ascends from the ashes of its own pyre.
It was not a mistake, but a good match,
and this much is true no matter the vagaries of time.
So this hope must turn from the actual and burn
with the possibility of love no longer forsaken, although this particular affair must end. The phoenix in winding circles blazes a trail through the sky
from the maze of the heart into everlasting truths,
where the answer is contained in the question,
and the question is found in the asking. His fire ignites in golden panoplies the empty sky, surpassing even the setting sun.

When a man loves

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/when-a-man-loves/

When a man loves, it burns a hole
at the center of time, where no reason or rhyme can contain the fire.

Atop the winding spire stands the Lady.
Thence he climbs, to soothe the burn
he sees reflected in her eyes.

But love is fickle and unkind.
The Lady turns and hides her eyes,
but he remembers and inquires.

She does not consent to worship or vulgarity, but only to a love that never tires.

He must offer it,
without her sweet reminding.

Not Sole Composer

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/not-sole-composer/

O sweet muse, shall I ever tire of your song? You have sung it so long that my life is in tune,
and my heart beats your rhythms, but alas
the first movement concludes. Shall there be any more?
I am not sole composer. The next notes are yours.
The denouement must come from you.

Calling

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/calling/

I heard you, in the midnight hour
call out to me, across all space and time.
I cannot define or understand what transpired, but know this:
I called to you too.

Her Sky (New At Last)

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/her-sky-new-at-last/

She gazes
through the window,
drifts through time
and other forgotten spaces, wondering who to be.
It's not for me, she says,
but where is home,
where can I rest?
She gazes and grows tired.
Just before she moves to bed,
a star burns out, and others twinkle,
and her sky has changed forever.
Now her sky is new at last.

Through her I see

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/through-her-i-see/

Through her I see
the undulations of chthonic energy, vibrations of time and body pulsing as one. It is her mysteries that allow for life, its origin and purpose, and she dares not fly into the empty sky, where all is lost.

Cracks Forming

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/cracks-forming/

She watches the stars burn out, and each one calls with a call she has heard somewhere before,
but she cannot quite place it, cannot place herself in its orbit. Instead she burns hotter than hope and ignites with an anger not meant for this world, from below. She does know it's unhealthy, but cares not at all for herself or for others. What good has caring ever done her? Not even the stars remain, and her hope dwindles faster than any flame. She is lonely, but this way she cannot be hurt again, cannot mistrust
the wrong person or system. She breathes but she does not live, she has learned to forgive only sparingly,
not in the way that might heal her, and not by the light of the moon, which, in concert with sun holds in place all that matters, not only for her but for all who live under its spell.
She can tell that she's restless but doesn't know why.
There are cracks forming in her sky.

The soil we have tilled

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/the-soil-we-have-tilled/

Who remembers, through the corridors of dusty time, the paths that brought us here? And who can say just how it felt, not knowing anything? If time heals wounds, it makes us blind to those not synchronized with our walk through this world. So here's to you, fair traveller, somewhere on life's journey, in some pain
that I shall never name and cannot comprehend.
I can be friend, and if we dare we might learn how to make pain end, at the end of the road or even before, in a house that we build, on the soil
we have tilled.

A Seat at the Table

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/a-seat-at-the-table/

At the end of a long day, in the spaces between all the versions of me, I find solace in asking where I went wrong, and which pieces remain to be put back together in new configurations, respecting their origins but never again as they were.
It's a crime to be free, too free, and to dishonor
life and love with a cruelty not even animals know,
to make lust a religion, and power its handmaiden.
Thus in the spirit of chivalry let me remind you:
aim higher, and dream better dreams than those found in pornography. You are still human after all,
and as such have dominion over part of your conscious dreams.
But do not be afraid. You already know how to climb out of this hole, to escape from the prison
of immaturity, and only you know, because no two paths are the same. So your way may go through desert places or haunted ruins, or even to the brink of hell, but you'll come back to tell about all that was learned
and how thrilled and how empty you felt, all at once.
In that emptiness plant this seed: you are human,
the point that connects law and nature, the goal of all fathers and the hope of all mothers, and in you live thousands of generations. Take part in this.
Freedom has earned you a seat at the table.
It never had any other purpose.

So Was I

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/so-was-i/

He was wrong enough,
but so was I.

This And No Other

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/this-and-no-other/

The Lady, pierced by love, reveals her tendrils, drives through the ground her fingers of love's returning,
and melts the earth, with a heat no longer trapped,
a fire that blazes not just in her eyes, but down her arms into everything she touches. She is life itself, at one with the primal urge and heavy memories, combining both God and sex in holy matrimony, undone by a cry in the night. She feels relieved, but it is only for a moment, then the pain returns, but this time
unaccompanied by chains and prison bars, no longer held down or locked inside.
She wonders what comes next, and sighs.
There is no compromise.

First comes love, then comes marriage,
then comes the mystery that makes things worthwhile,
the holy midnight kiss between lovers intent on leaving behind some memento of love in human flesh. We are all born from this and born for it, the cycle repeating since before there was time, and no other will make amends for the pain we've endured.
It is this and no other around which a home can be built. It is this. It is this and no other.

The Lady learns her purpose, suits up and readies her heart for the burdens
it soon must bear. She is frightened, but only because she can sense significance.
The way is not long but hard. No pain shall be spoken, no groans heard aloud,
for as long as the purpose is served,
all is well. She will rise and accomplish it, says to her suitor "please come,"
and then waits by the window,
observing an unfamiliar sky.

One Too Few

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/one-too-few/

When day came a second time
in answer to the first, it was clear which way fate was tending. But still one is cautious, for two can be one too many, though one can be one too few. Even two can be less than one truly desires.

Coauthor

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/coauthor/

Who was left to remember the pain,
the ennui, the cool silence of winter,
when the heat had died down?
Was the dream still attainable? Or does it die now like so many before? With new clarity I come again to this story, and pen what may be its last ending…unless a new chapter begins, but that chapter requires a strong coauthor.

Meant For Your Ears

16 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/meant-for-your-ears/

I will take your hand, if you'll let me,
and show you the wideness of the world.
There is so much to see and understand,
so much to uncover, and you make everything
shimmer with hope and with purpose.
For you I will wander a thousand years.
These words are meant for your ears.

Another Life Beckons

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/another-life-beckons/

You are ready. You have weathered the storms.
Tomorrow you must decide who to be. Today has faded.
Another life beckons, and only you can open its door.

Only in the Waiting

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/only-in-the-waiting/

I have waited and will wait. I know what waiting means.
I know what longing means, but also now I know what hope means. And I cannot look away.
If not today, some other day, some other time and place, there she and I will meet and both be free. I know no other road, I know no other hope. This waiting answers every question with a calm repose, it dares to let a feeling be exposed, against the silence,
and it knows what comes to pass before it comes.
There is no explanation. Only in the waiting is it known.

Just Let Me Know

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/just-let-me-know/

I will not intrude in your life, as a sign of respect,
but do not mistake this respect for a lack of desire.
Please know that my interest will linger,
and if some day you should find the same interest,
I'll be there. Just let me know.

In This Field

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/in-this-field/

I'm impressed by your wisdom.
You stand in a field grown ripe with the fruit of good seeds.
There is nowhere I'd rather be than standing next to you in this field.

Spelunking

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/spelunking/

I went spelunking, into your heart.
What gave me the right?
You did, when you opened the door.
I have touched the floor,
and you cried out for more,
but what follows is up to you.

Were you hoping a surgeon would take your heart and repair it with expert hands? Did you crave
the assessment of wisdom to piece together your missing parts? My dear you are that surgeon.
No other is qualified. I have just readied the room.

I see you from afar and wave.
The sun is brighter today. You are on your own,
but at home in your skin, which has grown less thin. Thus I greet you and smile.
All is well, I presume?

And yet not all is well, not at all.
The presumption of innocence lingers
like a sad little girl on the day she discovers that life is pain. These incisions -- what have we done?

We have done what must always be done on the road to experience. When the time comes the clock strikes and summons the boys with their prying hands.
But the older one gets the more careful these hands become.

Love Calls

20 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/love-calls/

Love calls like a song on the wind.
As ever one wanders, but who?
That is never explained. One must wander to find some answer. Postponed explanations grow brittle beneath the desert sun. Love calls, but who answers? For how long?

Extended Silence

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/extended-silence/

Ambivalence comes and nestles
under the firmament, deep in my heart,
where a dream still lives but wanes.

I know of the perfect role for you.
In fact you were born to play it.

But will you play it? Why do you retreat?
Is another role calling, a callback to childhood perhaps where some unfinished business lingers?

I will hold this part open for you,
but not forever. Only until you have answered,
and even extended silence would serve as an answer.

Approaching Song

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/approaching-song/

It was always a matter of life and death, that much I can understand. But the truth of the matter was left unrevealed in a miscarriage of love.
The clock stops and all faces turn to hear the music pause.
A strange silence ensues, and for only a moment I think I can hear the low rumble of approaching song.

Spin Gently

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/spin-gently/

Where does she go? Into what place, what hidden land, to sort out herself and discover who she really is? It is strange how one turns and becomes another, and stranger
how love plays a role, as the catalyst, turning us all in our turn. So spin gently,
my love, to avoid getting sick.
I'll be waiting here when you have finished.

The Ring (What Your Desire Is For)

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/the-ring-what-your-desire-is-for/

You wore it too soon, before any decision
had been reached or negotiations commenced.
You were eager but also aware that your eagerness may have spelled danger.
The ring was a symbol of desire but also a hermetic seal enclosing that desire, preventing unauthorized growths taking root
in your soul. But these growths are the thing itself.
They are what your desire is for.

Sense of the Darkness

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/sense-of-the-darkness/

She waits by the window, wonders whether to call, and wishes she knew what she's waiting for. Out there the night moves, and she is accustomed to steady lights
that cut through the darkness and leave it for dead.
Is there holiness out there too? Something sacred that pulses through throbbing veins and in every rude thrust of male upon female? She wonders, and slowly her eyes adjust. She begins to make sense of the darkness.

Why and How

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/why-and-how/

Her eyes glisten
across the expansive universe and into my heart. It's a start, but where will it end? Where and when?
We both know why and how.

Is This Love?

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/is-this-love/

Is this love? It might be, though I strangely inquire to sort out the truth and inspire
one last protest, before things are settled.
It's peaceful, and that is a welcome change.
A life where love lives is in range.

Just For Us

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/just-for-us/

I do not know what to say or how to say it, what could soothe the bruise or span the rift between…
but I am here, in the space
we've started making just for us. Are you?

I Know How You Feel

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/i-know-how-you-feel/

There is no more time for questions, every gift will soon expire, unless renewed. But that takes two.
And me and you are one and one or two, that much is true, but you know how I feel, and I know how you feel too.

Rising Halfway

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/rising-halfway/

The sun is acting strange, it's in a strange configuration, half exposed above the horizon, yet half covered by the earth. Who knows if it rises or falls? Perhaps this time it reverses its course and sets
after rising halfway.

What Your Longing Requires

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/what-your-longing-requires/

Only give me a sign that it's safe to approach,
and I'll light up your sky with new stars,
I'll envelop your doubts in the tides of love, pulled by the new moon. This would be no dream
but reality, quelled from its wildness of forms
into hope eternal, the steady flame of an earnest love.
All of this can be yours, as you know, yet
you hesitate, pausing perhaps one last time
at the doorway of childhood, where some early love leaves you cold. It has been foretold that you rise and become what your longing requires.
You will not forever be burdened by unmet desires.

Teach Me How To Love You

27 November 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/11/teach-me-how-to-love-you/

Teach me how to love you,
and I will study well, for I must learn not what love is, but what you are.
From afar I can learn only little.
I must come closer and see.

Not Today

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/not-today/

Enjoy your freedom. It has been well-earned,
and now you are where you belong,
in your own skin, powered by your own soul.
You have been made whole, and now you may wonder what causes you still to hear my name ride on the wind from time to time.

It was time that brought me
and time that brings me away.
I would love to stay, but not today.

Live Wire

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/live-wire/

She was a live wire
bound up in herself,
but with one touch
we loosed the short circuit
and sent that energy to ground.

Puella Aeterna

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/puella-aeterna/

I have noticed that you are a woman.
Did that surprise you? Surely you knew, though you keep it under wraps. I think you should let the world know. There's no hiding it.
Plus there are some who might like it,
and some of these may also love you.

Another Hand

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/another-hand/

I am once again myself.
I am what I always was,
plus something more. I'm sure that I'm unsure, though time makes clear
the dawning purpose of the year:
I've learned to love. It is a triumph,
and the story was worth telling,
but the resolution waits for another hand.

No Longer Sand

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/no-longer-sand/

I look forward to meeting you once this is over, as equals,
when you and I stand on ground
made firm, no longer sand.

If Any Vigor Remains

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/if-any-vigor-remains/

I came to them not with hope but with fury.
They welcomed me, at least at first. Was it all
a part of some sinister plan, a demonic machination, or were those demons in me all along? Is it fair to see demons in others, but not always true?
My demons were stronger than life itself, and I sought to remove them by any means necessary. What were they thinking, to offer a refuge, a place where even demons are welcome? It was folly from the start, or something worse, a case of pathological arrogance.

And yet somehow it worked, and I rose from the fires of hell into new life, forged
by those fires and never forgetting their heat.
I have scars to remind me, and memory works
like a flame, disabusing old, dead beliefs,
but not burning the live ones, so full of invigorating sap.
Among the dead I see childish desires and teenage dreams,
a longing to make the world safe, which can never come true.

Now my thoughts turn to you and whoever you are.
I have come so far and I gather that you have too.
There may still be some sap left inside us,
some hope for another new life, worked out by these fires and the spasms of time, to remind us that where we have come from is where we are going,
that all life returns to the center, the source,
and that even this energy is not less than sacred.
Tomorrow is what it will be, and today we find wholeness not in ourselves, but in what those selves could become.

But what can they become? What can any once dead ever hope to become? There is light, if you see it, beyond the horizon, both under the skin and in between stars, which confirms who we are. It's another lost dream, one more reverie, this time tethered to objects worthy of praise.

Underneath, all is changed, and the sky fills with wonder and love as new light rushes in. It's a love that stands firm, not forgetting the heat of the flame or the storm-tossed waves,
but combining them, here, in this heart, which can answer
the deepest longing and give shape to pain that otherwise overwhelms.
It's this love that the lost can become if with courage
they stand their ground in the crucible of life and death,
if their hope is not conquered, and if any vigor remains.

They let me be childish, that was their folly and their appeal, for I was not ready to stand and bear my own weight. But in time I grew stronger, and they, I'm afraid, did not. Once time came to reap the harvest sown years before there was nowhere to go but down, through the depths of unconscious longing, the archetypes of despair. I was there, I remember, and whether any other has grown more aware through my presence, or whether they still wander on through the night of impermanent dreams, I can say
I am free, and let these things be, as a testament to what was destroyed and forever destroyed, but which rises again and again in every mother's loving arms. There is no final cure, for the answer is to ask the question again,
in a reproduction, a false half-double of me, born out of the strength I have earned. But a child must be childish and so must outgrow the childhood cast upon it.

I am not at the end, not quite, but somewhere in the middle, awake but still dreaming, alive but not sure that life really is good. Could it be that my meaning is out there, under the stars, where gods and heroes struggle to carry the light of day? Or is it in here, in my heart? I know where to start, and, I think, where things end. So long, friend.
I have told you the way. If you take it is your decision.

No Matter How Civilized

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/no-matter-how-civilized/

Looking back from a posture of wholeness
I see now what I wanted to see, and that it was always there. It was I who was lacking, unable to contain the strength of life, unable to carry that power from day to day. But the power remains as it is, was, and shall be, forever,
empowering life and our lives, no matter how civilized.

Debut

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/debut/

You confirm my suspicions,
and now I await with new vigor
your coming courage. Don't tarry.
It's time for your debut.

But is it true?
I cannot allow myself to believe on hints alone. I must hear it from you.

Shadow (Wherever Light Shines)

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/shadow-wherever-light-shines/

> And so the General of hot desire
> Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarmed.
> This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
> Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
> Growing a bath and healthful remedy,
> For men diseased; but I, my mistress' thrall,
> Came there for cure and this by that I prove,
> Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.
>
> Shakespeare, Sonnet 154

Water cools not flame, and yet I am cooled
by some frozen spirit, come again to haunt my dreams.
What do I know? How little is truly revealed!
The way is dark and lonely. I will make a home and live in it alone.

Who knows the answers more thoroughly than a madman? Who craves desire more than a dead man? I fear I have been mad, or dead, or deadly mad, but this must be the shadow born from lofty dreams, inevitable wherever light shines.

Twin Eagles

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/twin-eagles/

Twin eagles soar
above heaven,
circling the nest below.

Make Ourselves Anew

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/make-ourselves-anew/

It was true, it was always true, there can be no doubt.
I have read the signs and await the fulfillment of prophecy.
Under the stars we have languished, waiting for light that could penetrate the blackest canvas of night, and none came.
None came, for the canvas concealed all we are, blocking out the inviting vibrations, the hidden music of the oscillating spheres, no less sure for their oscillating, doubtless more wondrous and summoning an energy no man can deny. If you choose, you can hear them, and dance with the furious joy of one bound to be free, bound by true power, rapt by the sun and moon.

In this laughter, I hear you, awake and filled hopeful
by something just out of reach, but in view. It is true, and the first clue is always the best: there could be no resisting,
no saying no to the pull of a fated love for ones such as us.
But do not be afraid.
I can see over hills and dales the winding path that leads us home,
the path we must walk together if ever we will feel free, for I think that you also can see how the ground melts and pulses
in tune with the song of the spheres, under heaven,
but in a strange sense, a strange mood, a strange key.

You are not strange to me. I have eyes for no other.
The others lack eyes, and I will not share something they cannot return.
But I see you, I love you, I want you. These three are the chorus that drowns out all else with perfected harmony, the song of my soul lit on fire by the only possibility it ever desired:
to belong, here on earth, with you.

The answer was found before the question was understood, and it always is so with matters of the heart. Let's start over,
recalling from the beginning what we learned in the end,
and make ourselves anew.

Your Eyes

05 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/your-eyes/

Your eyes know secrets, and I would fall into their dark abysses, learning all they know, and thus grow wise. You think my sighs are mere ephemera, the passing of some fever?
You are much too great a mystery,
and one I must explore.

Love Can Be Done

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/love-can-be-done/

I didn't see it coming, and yet
maybe I did, in some dark corner of unconscious dreams.
And now it seems inevitable, the pull of two planets caught in each other's gravity. What can be done?
Just love. Love can be done.

Time Is Coming Soon

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/time-is-coming-soon/

I see you in my dreams. You are half smiling, half afraid. It has been said that you are ready,
but we both don't know the truth. I'd like to find you,
and make sense of this, and swoon, but there may be too many obstacles.
The time is coming soon.

Will You Come?

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/will-you-come/

Will you come? I would like to show you my heart, and how much of it is full of you. Just between us, a new something grows, and I like it just like I like you.

The Punished Become The Punishers

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-punished-become-the-punishers/

A witch from my past haunts my sight,
a malignant narcissist, hellbent on ruining others for sport. True, I had my revenge, and I left with my head held high, but no other has wounded me with quite so much verve and aplomb…no other deserves more the fires of hell in which she lives.
I can hardly imagine the damage she wreaks
on those stuck in her thrall for too long.
She is darkness, the Mother's shadow, a snuff
for all light, and her foul stench entices out demons of every kind. I can only pity her,
but even this pity would fall on deaf ears
or be twisted in some wicked gossip.
She longs to be whole, I can see it…
for her though the journey begins and ends
in hell, where the punished become the punishers
and life remains far out of reach.

I escaped,
and I learned how to trust again.

It Takes Two

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/it-takes-two/

I feel strangely ready, prepared by years
that seemed not to be going anywhere,
but led me here, and to you.
I'll see it through. But of course, as you know,
it takes two.

Forever To Yourself Be True

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/forever-to-yourself-be-true/

All is quiet, and it's eerie
how the day sits calm and ready after pulverizing night into a million pieces.
Is this what was needed? I have doubts,
but not so many that regret creeps in.
This could not be avoided or conceded, no,
it had to run its course. But what comes next?
Perhaps a time of rest and healing, or perhaps a birth of love, but now, in either case,
let's praise the gods that brought us here
and see them face to face.

These gods were jealous, and they would not let things be, and now for you and me
a tug ties us together, though it sets us free.
Remember me, as I remember you, and to yourself be true. Forever to yourself be true.

New Moon Phase

09 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/new-moon-phase/

A bitter wind rips through even the warmest attire.
I may aspire to love, but can I see it through?
This much is true: I'd like to try, though I can offer nothing painless, nothing free of life's dark questions,
only earnest striving, chasing down a dream,
for in between the light small fragments of night
have nestled, and remain…and to dislodge them would endanger the patient. Still, they can be tolerated, maybe even loved, as parts of a whole, but they are not the whole itself. The light still shines, and with it dignity is never out of reach. So reach, and grasp life with both hands, and be amazed. In all your days you have not known this new moon phase.

Naked But Unashamed

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/naked-but-unashamed/

I should have known that you were looking,
should have felt those eyes dig into the meaning of words such as these. And now I do.
I see you too, and under your gaze
I feel naked, but unashamed.

Seed

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/seed/

For a time a seed germinates underground, but soon it must poke through the soil
and find its place in the sun.

The Troubles of Love

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-troubles-of-love/

I just don't know. Can any secret love satisfy? Why love in secret? Blake may say it must be so, but I don't know…I'd open my heart, one page at a time. That way
one has time to absorb it, in all its complexities.
Be not a secret forever. The secret must turn into vow, spoken plainly, for all the world to see.

But what kind of vow can there be, for ones
like you and me, who sway with the inconstant moon?
I can offer my life, but what a paltry gift,
such a variable thing! Yet I have nothing else.
I would find one who understands, but are we then both doubly lost? Is that the cost? Must we double our troubles in order to find our true joy?

This explains the appeal of the secret. A spoken love must bring trouble. A secret love can be hidden, ignored when convenient, despised even…still it survives as a cherished secret.
But no, it can never satisfy. Only the love that brings trouble can satisfy, because it is true, not illusion or fantasy…and yet even so all the troubles of love are no trifling matter. I just don't know.

But still I must know, I must find out,
I must take this chance. There is too much to lose and to gain. What are troubles compared to the ache in my heart? This ache, which I found without seeking, and resisted each step of the way,
but which grows ever stronger all the same,
has become my greatest trouble, far greater,
if left unfulfilled, than even the worst troubles of love.

I would have her and can't explain why.
We have looked twice into the same sky.
If an answer should come from above, let it burn
until nothing remains but our love.

Only Your Heart

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/only-your-heart/

You sigh and say you have a need.
I have it too. But this is true:
I come not for your virtue. Only your heart.

Come and See

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/come-and-see/

Will we walk together, once the dust has settled, when the heat has been sliced clearly, and all of its mirages fade away? I know, yes, not today, but this does not feel far away. I'd like to hear you laugh, perhaps at me, and my silly poetry. But don't you think you'd like to come and see?

The One That Deserves To Be Heard

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-one-that-deserves-to-be-heard/

> Never again would birds' song be the same.
> And to do that to birds was why she came.
>
> Robert Frost, Never Again Would Birds' Song Be The Same

That change, do you feel it? Now your voice persisting has made this bird sing a brighter tune, in harmony with yours, and with the deeper well of things from which you've come, to roost among birds, a bird yourself, the most beautiful bird, the one that deserves to be heard.

Calypso

12 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/calypso/

Years ago, I stopped off on Calypso's shores and asked her: what is love? She would not answer though she took delight in hearing me ask again and again.
For three long years I asked, and learned the hard way what love is not. And yet I think that she was moved somehow.
I saw her cry real tears. I heard she moved away and became a normal woman.

Plant in the Dark

14 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/plant-in-the-dark/

She was a plant in the dark.
I let the light in
and love to see her bloom.

What's Best For You

14 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/whats-best-for-you/

I can answer for myself, my whims and stray thoughts, and even my sins are a part of the whole. But I find a new fear at the threshold of love, like a note just barely out of tune, a small blemish, one felt before it's understood. If you could, wait for me, but keep asking: should this love come true?
Then do what's best for you.

Carried Away

14 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/carried-away/

I would like to believe, I really would, but the darkness consumes all but hope, the delusions of life made anew.
I am talking to you, but not really, to some lonely phantom, the shadow of other yous. It's no use. I can make it without explanations. I can't fight my truths. I must go to the edge of the city, to the top of the mountain, where gods and men first met, and no lover can follow me there.
It's no use to despair, it won't matter, my heart is pulled thither,
and no song, not even my own, can assuage the affliction.
I ask you to leave me to suffer whatever I must endure,
because not even you have the cure. I am summoned,
the Muse enraptures, and I must be carried away.

A fall of snow blankets the world in white, ancient symbol of innocence…still it does not feel quite right,
does not answer my doubts with a sudden courage or make straight the path I must travel. I would that the snow would fall faster and leave no trace of sin, but it has not that power. At this very hour, some crime is committed in every part of the world. So fall, snow.
Make your peace. But we know it won't last.

Like a fly in amber, I wait for my heart to decide.
It is too late to hide. Any action/inaction will be scrutinized, and I am like one on display in a frozen cage.
State your case, I'll state mine, and the chips will fall in chaotic fashion, as these things must always be. Don't you see?
It's too late to go free, or to ask the right question once one has gone fully underwater. We must let it dry and not even conceive of returning to have another try until both sides solidify.

So that answers it, then, for the present, but I must be cautious. I must not break free from restraints or yank on the temple's supporting pillars. Delilah has many other names, but her face is the same as Penelope's, at least from a distance. Trust has not been earned.

We would have to step back and first fill in those blanks
before love could be safely endeavored. Who are you?
And why do you interest me so?

Feeling of course is worth something, but will not suffice without truth, plain and simple. It will not survive. We must know that we stand on firm ground. But perhaps this is asking too much.
We are creatures of mystery, you and I, and we like our disguises.
But this is important, too important to allow ambiguity, at least in the long run.
And we want a long run, don't we?

Two Black Sheep

14 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/two-black-sheep/

I can see it:
a warm sun,
a calm breeze,
and two black sheep
enjoying the strangest pasture
together.

Getting There

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/getting-there/

If I should call now, it would interrupt a process
set in motion ages, many lifetimes ago, and that process is what matters most right now. I believe in you, but I must not step in any more than I have. You will master the steps of this new dance, your own steps, not mine or anyone else's, and only then feel free. But I see a bright future for you,
where you soar in your truth and live unafraid, needing no other face to express how you feel, knowing your face is beautiful, and that you can wear it proudly, even when few understand.

But there is an art of concealment, which hides the truth
as an act of love, from those not equipped to handle it.
I think you will know what I mean, most attentive reader, because I have practiced this art, and I gather that you have too. But this art remains valid and needed to keep small souls from bursting with too much truth.
"Mankind cannot bear very much reality" Eliot says,
with good reason and perhaps a little bit too much truth.
But the point is to carve out a private sphere,
a "room of one's own", a home, where truth can be carried with dignity and courage, to the best of one's ability.

Abilities vary wildly, though, and nobody knows how or why some can know and some can't. For we knowers, few pains are as great as those caused by an unjust authority, forcing its ignorance upon us from the top down. It cannot be endured, but it must be, at least for a time, until one has made way for a new life one always was living in secret. There is an old name for this, μεγαλόψυχος.
"Nobility" also suffices, but what's in a name?
It's the thing that endures in perennial cycle, and we are the latest crop, ripe for harvest. It is not a crime to be different, in fact it may be a great gift, the true source of the patterns lived out by the ones who fit in. Every culture begins as a dream, and we dreamers can hold our heads high as members of a higher order, the provenance of dreams.

So dream well, my sweet, and do not despair.
You seem to be getting there.

Am I Right?

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/am-i-right/

Am I right? Or have I pushed too far, dreamed too much, put my fingers where they don't belong? You are stronger than you think, I'm convinced of it, and it seems only a matter of time until you prove it. But you must prove it for you, not for me, only if and because it is what you are, and until you can say what you need, until you can name your desires, you are not ready for them, because,
I can tell you, naming is not the hard part. Taming will be much harder, so much so that many dare not to attempt it. But you are attempting already, and that sets you off as a rare bird, a stranger even, but I see a budding master of the art of humanity, one who won't settle for easy answers to easy questions but only for truth, however painful. This courage is rare, as you surely must know, but we share it, and that means you dazzle me, in both heart and mind,
and it takes all I have to not start right now, but that would not be wise, and we must be wise. If we start too soon, it might end your development here and now, a development that only can happen alone.
So we wait. I will not give you cause to resent me by holding you back. You are free to develop into what you are, and bound, I suspect, by no other law. But you are bound by nature, though nature and law can be friends, when law learns to be gentle and nature learns that some boundaries serve a good purpose and need not be torn down.

Fetch It

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/fetch-it/

I passed you the ball
and you threw it out of bounds.
Do you now expect me to go fetch it?

No Other Way

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/no-other-way/

Life is funny, isn't it, but not always in a way that brings laughter, sometimes in a way that brings pain. I feel funny like that.
But I trust the pain to bring growth. I have grown in no other way.

Clothes Back On

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/clothes-back-on/

Must I put my clothes back on?
We have come so far,
it would be a shame to turn back now.

Can't Be Put Out

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/cant-be-put-out/

We must not hide. I can hear you cowering, see you squirming, feel you desiring. But is it enough? You have fire within you, chérie, and it can't be put out.

Can't Wait

16 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/cant-wait/

I can't wait. What a double entendre.
Which way shall we spin it? Or shall I just let it hang
like an unanswered invitation?

The View Is Lovely

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-view-is-lovely/

Your way is harder
because you are climbing higher.

But the view is lovely.
I think you would like it.

Possibilities

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/possibilities/

A flock of birds scrounges in icy soil.
There is just enough to get by.
But spring is coming, and with it, possibilities.
Winter does not last forever.

The Eternal Dance

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-eternal-dance/

Tell me what I want, and I will tell you what you are, and in this way we shall continue the eternal dance
of men and women, ageless and immortal,
just like all those times before.

They Don't Even Know

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/they-dont-even-know/

A murmuration flutters from tree to tree.
How have they synchronized? They manage a complex dance as one, though each bird feeds itself, and lives a separate life.
What spirit comes to bind them?
Maybe they don't even know.

No Day But Today

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/no-day-but-today/

> We all must live our lives
> Always feeling
> Always thinking
> The moment has arrived
>
> Tracy Chapman, If Not Now…

The masks come off, and all is revealed
as macabre somnambulance, dreaming vexed to nightmare, hope turned sour, and no other choice than to move on. Is this so? I don't know.
Love is fickle, alas, especially when single-handed.
It's never too late, I suppose, but of course this contradicts my experience. Every past love has become a closed door. What's one more?
I will add a new key to my keyring
and keep this place locked away.
If not today…if not today…
then not any day. There is no day but today.

Starting Again

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/starting-again/

Soothe me, gentle spirit, goddess of flame…
I don't know your name, but I know your face,
with those eyes that see past my disguises, so I can revel with masks on or off as my fancy chooses.
There is a deep well of healing waters,
a hot spring where hope burns eternal, on top of the mountain of beginnings, where travelers come in the end
to get rest before starting again.

Not So Useful Anymore

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/not-so-useful-anymore/

I think she used me, but I did choose to be useful, and now one must ask what comes next. Am I used up? Not quite.
But perhaps not so useful anymore.

As If Love Can't Be Questioned

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/as-if-love-cant-be-questioned/

I know the way. The night is dark, but my eyes see just fine under these conditions. It's not as if love can't be questioned or put in its place,
as if all bows to love and all powers of reason dissolve.
This was always a foolish delusion, one worthy of little comment.

Irrigation

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/irrigation/

The only kind of love I would want would be not like the raging river or the bone-dry riverbed,
but more like an irrigation channel, dug with tremendous care.

Dying Roses

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/dying-roses/

I think things must end. We live under the sky again, a new sky,
one can hope, but a sky nonetheless,
and although we got partly undressed,
we shall not love forever, not like this.

I remember when we met, the fire that burned behind your eyes, in need of structure and direction. Have I given some?
A bit of cultivation, just a taste…the answer lives in you, and always has. You have the things you need, and I do not.

Of course a call from you might change my mind,
but not an indirect one, not one wrapped in deniability. Of course there is a risk,
I might say no, but then, I might say no either way. But I would say no gently and praise you for the attempt.

If this is out of reach, then so is love,
and both our hearts must travel on
and not get stuck in wistful hoping, dreaming dreams that cannot be. You will get free,
I have no doubt, but when? It's too late now to pretend I don't care, but I cannot just keep on standing there, with a bouquet of dying roses.

But I think you'll be okay, and so will I,
because despite the changing sky,
I'm just another guy, a ghost who calls to summon a better you. It's true.
But there are many truths, and this is not one we would choose for more than a moment.

But even dying flowers carry seeds.

Open Hearts

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/open-hearts/

Who can say, as day
bleeds into day, whether love
will arrive and arrive to stay?
It's okay and it's not at all okay.
But hey, this is life with open hearts.
It's what sets us apart.

To Rest At All

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/to-rest-at-all/

I have said what I needed to say, and now
I can rest for the rest of the day, but the night comes on quickly and chases away what remains.
What a curious life. There's no answer, just questions,
so many terrible questions that trouble my restless heart.
From the start I am restless and never find rest,
'til I play my part in the crazy maneuvering of gods.
Can they forgive me? Can you? For what I'm not sure, but there is no cure for this surplus of insight. I must put out the light to rest at all.

Worth Something

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/worth-something/

It has had a long gestation, but now
it's out there, so let me slip in one last piece of advice: do not just give yourself away. You know better. Endeavor for love, lasting love, the true kind,
or at least a short love that transforms.
If it has to be brief, make it worth something.

Farewell

18 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/farewell/

Farewell, my love. I have dreamed you a better dream, but it seems that for you and for me a chasm grows,
an impassable sea, that cuts off any chance of love. But the chasm stares back into me, and the longer I look, the darker we both become.
We had only begun, but this ending is sweet with a bittersweet knowledge, that some loves last while others merely make us better lovers.
So go and be better.
Farewell. Farewell. Farewell.

Touch and Soothe

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/touch-and-soothe/

Did I mean farewell? Or did I mean merely to touch and soothe the demons that dream of such things? They are strengthened by water and blood, only honey can make them obey.

Seeds of You

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/seeds-of-you/

I have seeds of you
deep in my heart.
I would not dig them out now.

Trust and Open Dialogue

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/trust-and-open-dialogue/

But you may leave me no choice. Love is not all,
I also must know that I can come to you for clarity and receive it, not a mystery. A feeling cannot carry all the weight of mundane, everyday friction, without recurring interventions. We must make love endure, not by burning hotter, but by putting it in a vessel that can hold it, then tending the flame. Our flame gets hotter by the minute, and soon it will hurt us
if we don't capture it and give it what it needs:
a place to burn, a strong container, made with trust
and open dialogue.

Burning Burning Burning

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/burning-burning-burning/

Burning burning burning
but I will not go to Carthage
or to Rome, or, gods forbid, Jerusalem.
No, Athens is my home, and I will dwell
in ancient stories come to life again.

Schedule

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/schedule/

You say you want forever?
Let me check my schedule.
Ah, look at that, it is totally open.
Let me pencil you in.

Handkerchief

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/handkerchief/

This is just to say:
I believe you have dropped your handkerchief.
I would like to return it, when the time is right.

From Afar

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/from-afar/

There you are, and always were,
this feeling, so familiar, though it had no object before.
What does it mean that I feel your warmth from afar?
That we are together, though apart?

I believe

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/i-believe/

I believe it now, though it took a long time.
It took a long time because love is a threat to my peace of mind, and to yours. My defenses have learned to be cautious, but this time I think the defense is unnecessary. Let us now prove it.
My mind for the first time agrees.
I do not merely wish. I believe.

Feet Firmly Planted on Earth

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/feet-firmly-planted-on-earth/

> Was the urge of the unconscious perhaps only apparently reaching out towards the person, but in a deeper sense towards a god?
>
> Carl Jung, The Relations Between The Ego And The Unconscious

Something feels off, and I cannot quite name it.
One hopes for a final resolution, but one never comes.
Must we drift in uncertainty forever? I do not blame you,
but I must be true to my doubts, because otherwise
we may both find ourselves lost, and not in ecstasy…
I don't know you that well, not as well as I'd like,
and a love that begins before knowledge cannot long endure, not for me, because what am I loving? A phantom, a figment, a dream? There's a way to firmer ground, but I fear we have missed it, and gone around to the love chamber far too soon. And it can't be undone. Can we go back and find each other as we really are? It is not that far, but it carries a risk: we may not like what we find.
Still this outcome is better than a false love, which would be a prison for both of us. I do want you, and I do want love to come true, but some labor remains to ensure that we are not just lost in that ether of blue, but have four feet firmly planted on earth.

But are dreams not their own door to reality?
If so, then the answer is clear: we are meant to be.
There are too many signs to ignore or write off as coincidence.
Something is happening, something real,
though the mind must play catch-up and flail to understand…
can it be that understanding is not needed here,
that the pull of some unseen gravity works its power
in a way much stronger than any mind? If so, it is not my power, or yours, that binds us, but something higher, much higher, and deeper than words can explain.
If we know this feeling, the pull of its power,
then I think we should trust it, because in the final analysis
this is the earth into which we are planted, and which grows in us, as in all men and women, when the time is right.

And the time is right, that is hard to ignore or deny,
but I look one last time to a desolate sky
as if it knew the answer, as if it brings any gift but rain, to nourish the seeds. Now you and I are caught in the dance of the cycle of regeneration, with Demeter's blessing, and time will tell if it makes us happy, but Lord knows
we must play our parts.

Finally Alive

21 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/finally-alive/

All my tender feelings return time after time.
There is no surer sign. When stars align,
and when we find ourselves both lost and finally alive,
I think we must try. We would lose too much otherwise.

Dual Polarity

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/dual-polarity/

What was the meaning of those signs with dual polarity, both yes and no? Was confusion the meaning? I must think so.
But confusion can find its way to the water, and find that this well hath no poison. Of course, one must doubt, to be sure, but a day comes when doubts have been answered and hopes emerge.
I can dream of that day, as I sense the first glimpses of daybreak across the horizon. I want to invite you to stand here with me, in this light, near these waters. I want you to sing of things past and things passing and things to come, with yourself mixed within them.
I want that song in my life, every part of it, now and forever.
But what am I saying? Can these things be? The confusion is not quite assuaged.

The Central Dream

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/the-central-dream/

Are we both cynical romantics? Big dreamers who have learned to fear the bigness of our dreams? We may work well together then.
We'll burst each other's bubbles as required. But we must not fear the central dream, the one where love endures and serves as an anchor in a stormy sea. That dream is real, and makes the rest worthwhile.

Talking To Myself

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/talking-to-myself/

I'll just keep talking to myself.
This way the dream lives on and I can feel invigorated.

Deciding What To Do

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/deciding-what-to-do/

I never told you how you caught my eye.
It was a strange event. You were a sprite, at least in play, but even so I saw a sweetness
as of one who suffers. Do you? You were gifted but still humble, not a diva, not afraid to be silly.
Then there were the signs. You mentioned gluten (our shared enemy) and left me with a dance to a tune about sudden love.
I had no hope of escape (believe me,
I tried), and so, obeying the gods, I called on you.
Now here we are, deciding what to do.

Demonstration

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/demonstration/

You should be careful what you read.
Some poems have well-known aphrodisiac qualities.
Here's a demonstration.

Jungle

23 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/jungle/

I must now measure my growth by the hour,
so rapidly do these changes overtake me,
but nothing is more exhilarating, more invigorating than growing at an accelerated pace. Even so,
I will likely find reasons to pare back these growths along the way.
I do not wish to live in a jungle.

Classes Begin

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/classes-begin/

I have much to learn, but I am a good student, and I have a feeling
you are a good teacher, and maybe,
just maybe, I'll teach you something too.

So tell me again, when do classes begin?

Father Knows Best

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/father-knows-best/

Father knows best, doesn't he, but maybe not this time, not with so much on the line. He inspires a kind of hope,
a deadly hope, for a love made easy, free of negotiation.
All you have to do is accept his answers, true or not.
But you know what is true. You always have.
You have it in you. When the stars will not sit still you know his will is not enough to bend reality,
that some truths are too true to be ignored.
But you must step with cautious care
into yourself, or else this vertigo
could strip you of your common sense.
I know the way. I've walked it.
But I cannot walk it for you.
You are bold to go, and brave.
There is a soul in you to save.

A Signal in Smoke

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/a-signal-in-smoke/

A new pain, new decisions, the war of the magi brought home to familiar places, the agonies and ecstasies of love and hate. Is there any new ground, any place where a dream can thrive, without constant embitterment?
There is still the road, but the road is long, and not really a home.
What of building a new home, in time, after healing?

Of course one could never endeavor to be alone,
it just happens that way sometimes, because in its disguises
the sun hides its eyes, and one loses sight of the meaning, the center of life and the essence of time, whence all things derive and to which they return. All these walls we so carefully build are a clear delusion, protecting our minds from the brutal reality that all things fade into another, given enough time.

So we have waged war against time in pursuit of stasis, eternal stasis, the worst of all possible worlds, because lacking
the one thing that makes life exciting, its movement,
and lacking also the dangers that call for virtue.
Thus men are superfluous and become an endangered species.
Many are born, but not many become fully grown,
and why should they? Perhaps for the joy of it,
as some men tend gardens despite having plenty to eat.

But the garden now feels under siege, and the few who have good ones must fight tooth and nail to defend them against the hordes of roving barbarians, homeless and looking for empires to topple. But there is one hope, that the hordes may be charmed, for a moment at least, by words and songs sung skillfully or played upon a lyre.

But this hope is a foolish one, foolish because most barbarians cling to barbarity as a totem
and will not let go. So we build higher walls,

more defenses, and send up a signal in smoke
hoping somewhere out there, another is doing the same.

Our Next Lives

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/our-next-lives/

Let us go into our next lives
with a healthy mix of detachment and desire, applying adequate pressure where required.

Somewhere She Smiles

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/somewhere-she-smiles/

Somewhere she smiles, and that light
bounces off the moon, and reaches me here.
It's unclear, but I do not care. My heart is ahead of the curve and aware of what comes.
She does. She surely does.

Can It Make Us Happy?

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/can-it-make-us-happy/

I would love you until the stars burn out.
I would hold you until my arms give way,
then lay with you until death or the end of time,
whichever comes first. And I'd have no regrets.
And the worst of it is I think you'd want this too.
Can it make us happy? Can anything less make us happy?

This Secret Warmth

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/this-secret-warmth/

I don't know how this happened, nor does it matter.
I have warmed up to you, and only you can know my thoughts and feelings, only you can access this secret warmth, and share your secret warmth
in our secret place. Let's call it home.
It has no better name. Just let me feel you for as long as it takes to melt the ice away.

Quarter Moon

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/quarter-moon/

A quarter moon dares me to ask bold questions, half-exposed as if expecting more. But I look on.
I wanted what I wanted, and I want it still,
but not enough to beg. It has a leg up on me now, perhaps, but one leg is enough, if both would cost my self-control. O quarter moon, decide. Reveal your splendor or descend again and hide, but leave me to my thoughts.
The darkest night cannot my heart make waver,
nor the fear of it one inch increase my favor.

Worth Asking

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/worth-asking/

There was a time before I knew this kind of love, and it was a dismal time, a "wriggling out of an egg,"
to borrow a phrase. But now I've arrived in a sudden rush of you. How can it be true? It wasn't the blue,
it was under the blue, and under the skin too.
I had never known that you could exist, and now I do.
But that does not prove that this thing has a future.
That question is separate, and more complex.
But I think it's at least worth asking.

Thorns and Briars

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/thorns-and-briars/

I think there is more than one way to arrive,
many paths that converge in the clearing where men,
fully grown, can accept life's true burdens and go on their own.
My path had many detours, but I think I learned quite a lot, more than most, and I now have this burden of knowledge, to go with my burden of insight.
I cannot regret it, there would be no point, but I can still remember the struggle, the thorns and the briars,
a few of which cling to me still and I think always will.
But my body still works, and my mind is alert,
and I'll take on tomorrow with courage, if given the chance.

Life Is Strange

26 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/life-is-strange/

Once more, with feeling, summoning
all of my gusto, let me proclaim my indifference, standing atop this blurry precipice in some shade of gray. What more can I say?
Life is strange, and it has a strange way
of deciding for itself, no matter what we say.

Synchronicities

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/synchronicities/

It's amazing just how many signs, past and present, inspire my heart to endure, and they come from the strangest places, recurring voicemails, a timely television episode, many countless dreams…
They all say the same thing: don't give up. So I won't.
I don't know that I could if I wanted to, but something beyond me, with power over events, must remind me for some reason. Whether this feeling is true or illusion, I cannot escape it, and neither can you. The strangeness lingers and pulls on our strings. The Lady sighs, then sings…

Matinée

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/matinee/

I shall come to the matinée, when the sun is up,
when the stars are hidden by a veil of blue.
Is this the better way to see you?
I wonder how the moon affects you,
but maybe these lunar mysteries are none of my business.
I like daylight too. It has its own kind of truth.

Struggle, Promethea

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/struggle-promethea/

I begin to understand, to see your burden.
You would come if you could, but something,
maybe someone, has you chained. This is not a game.

You must struggle, Promethea.
You already are.

Make your own way home.
I can meet you halfway.

If I Can

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/if-i-can/

These are the harder poems, the darker truths that must be uttered somewhere. Let me speak, you say, and I will listen. All I want is to listen and be informed. But who are you speaking to? If not to me, some Authority that has too much sway over you?
I'd like to see you healed, these wounds covered over by love and time, until they are barely a memory. This can occur.
All along you have hinted at this, your reality,
but something has brought it more close to home.
I will help you with this if I can.

Yet To Be Named

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/yet-to-be-named/

Swirling, tumbling, over and in between what has been and could be, some tomorrow is dawning, some day in the sun still unwritten and yet to be named.

Toward Some Ithaca

28 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/toward-some-ithaca/

The Mother's unwanted affections could ruin
all future possibilities, tie the son to the mast and wave him around like a flag of total and final ownership.
Wouldn't the song of Calypso be enough to set him free, at last free? But then where should he go? Toward some Ithaca, to be sure, though the Mother pursues through the greatest danger to take back the loyalty and affections due only to a lover, which she has found nowhere else. She knows not what she does,
and she will not listen to reason or (most of all)
to the dreaded word "no", which dooms her to a loneliness
she never quite cured but also cannot quite endure.
So pursue she must, to the end of her days, though this son finds a new place to anchor, a port with no room for her turbulent affections, with a calm that might set an example, though if she has not learned by now, it's most likely she never will.
Is this Ithaca? Maybe. At least it resembles it well enough to ensure no return voyage on the mothership, and that is a victory in itself. When she does visit, we will be kind to honor her many sacrifices, but not naive or craven.
She has needs, but so do we, and ours must be our priority to honor the true meaning of motherhood. She has not failed, but she has wounded and must not be given a chance to wound again.

Elektra, it is I, your Oedipus.
Surely we understand each other.

Lark (She Could Fly)

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/lark-she-could-fly/

A lark sits still in her cage,
singing proudly, unable to move.
I like her song, so I touch her cage,
and the door swings open to our surprise.

I think it was open all along.
She just didn't know she could fly.

Ghosts

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/ghosts/

Why do I linger in this garden, where only ghosts return my favor, and keep me company from a distance rather than walking here beside me? Do these ghosts portend some future when all things will be revealed, or are the ghosts the show and all I can expect?
I'll linger for a little while (these ghosts are rather charming, and I am quite fond of cemeteries) but only until fancy wanes or things become more clear.

Standard Repertoire?

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/standard-repertoire/

What did you mean by extracting from a song of the deepest devotion, the part of that song that could be taken as a "no" to love if one listens closely?
Was devotion the point or its subversion, or maybe a tightrope between the two? You are clever, too clever not to notice what you've done.
Or is it a question of categories, which role suits you and which suits me? I don't know myself. But I'd like to find out, through your eyes perhaps, or at least through your song. But your song is a riddle with puzzling alternatives. Are you that riddle?
You will have to explain. Or maybe it's just standard repertoire.

Lost Voice

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/lost-voice/

I'm confused. Does that suit you, or was it an accident?
For one who's not falling in love, you sure make a good impression. But maybe these feelings are fuel for your art, nothing more. I'm not sure.
I'll keep watching, because I enjoy the show,
but I cannot become too attached this way.
It's not the best way, if you ask me, but somehow my voice has been lost somewhere, left to echo across the cavernous spanse of time, so I guess I'll just listen, and sing my own songs in the void.

What You Were Feeling

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/what-you-were-feeling/

I see your composure slip (a rare thing for you)
and some real emotion emerge, as you stare straight into the camera.
It is very moving if it means what I think it means.
And you put this work front and center as if for emphasis.
Surely another take would have cleaned up the slips had you had your résumé in mind. But I like it this way.
It has served its purpose. I'd like to know what you were feeling.

How Are You

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/how-are-you/

Wouldn't you like to just talk about this?
It would be so much simpler. I'll run out of metaphors before we're through. But okay.
I'll oblige. How are you?

Pull Me In

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/pull-me-in/

One more day pondering, wondering, wandering,
left to myself with not a care in the world,
but my thoughts are in orbit around a new center.
Can it pull me in?

Like A Fever

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/like-a-fever/

Eros passes through me like a fever.
I can't make it last.
After all this time, I still must leave her.
Love must come to pass.

Drawing Blood

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/drawing-blood/

Maybe she was right after all not to trust this fickle heart. But am I to blame?
Doesn't love require cooperation, not a solitary tending of the flame? It's always the same,
somehow my calls for structure go unheeded,
though without it, without fail, my love grows cold.
I shall grow old, it matters not which way,
whether on my own or in the arms of another.
It is no use. If she has seen me and withdrawn
she knows what she's doing. She knows how to choose.

And yet this time something lingers, even when the fever subsides, a kind of admiration, genuine respect.
She is a woman in the deepest sense, aware of things
no man can know, and she could make me stronger
if she chooses. But I cannot now rely on possible strength, or else I'd find myself enfeebled when it's withdrawn, and it can be withdrawn, whenever her fancy chooses. Am I the fickle one now? Does she not have the power of retreat, and wield it forcefully, to get her way?
How shall we disagree? As equals, each side speaking plainly?
Or as lovers, tugging each other's strings, the strings that bind two hearts in the dark of passion, feeling no remorse? But can I trust her in this darkness, with these strings? No feeling answers this haunting question,
at least not adequately, without hesitation and fear.
Perhaps one only learns by trying, but of course, by then
it's too late to sever the bond without drawing blood.

Let the waters of time rise and fall
to dilute these libations of blood.
I must stand tall.

This then reveals the true pain of the call.
It was never the fear of a sudden failure, but rather the fear of a long and protracted dissolution, through which one bleeds out or nearly so. This fear I think never entirely fades, but the pull of desire, the hope of two made one and thereby whole, entices lovers and would-be lovers to forge a bond, or perhaps even forges it for them, against their wills. They just find themselves bound, heaven knows, although heaven itself cannot break these bonds. Only those who are bound can dissolve them, anchored so deep that none but the anchoring soul can release them,

and even these souls often spasm and struggle
to do what they will, clenching harder when they would let go.
We do well not to know how we fare,
for this knowledge makes love (and thus life)
such a violent thing, more like nature than civilization would have us believe.

Abundant Fuel

30 December 2025
https://poems.culturing.net/2025/12/abundant-fuel/

Still I return to this fire,
which seems to burn with abundant fuel,
and I realize I can't put it out.

I must let it temper my heart.

Burn forever, fire of the earth.
Let me feel you. Make me warm.

Critical Velocity

01 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/critical-velocity/

Mutual orbiting reaches critical velocity.
Collision is imminent.
Too late to abort.

The Dance of Life

01 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-dance-of-life/

She is the earth, she contains in her heart
all its secret vibrations, the hidden gyrations of men and women, in embryo, waiting for activation, and able to activate others.
What is this holy rhythm, this pulsing of life through two bodies, infecting each other with love, until they overflow? It is the dance of life, the origin of all human beings, and our destiny. No lid can contain it forever.

Uncharted Waters

01 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/uncharted-waters/

I think we have reached uncharted waters, the open sea with infinities stretching before us. Which way shall we turn?
There's no going back, because even the way we came was consumed by time's waters and now looks the same as all others. The compass will do us no good, for the stars, alas, have changed, and the earth's polarity shifts from negative to positive. Must we guide ourselves? The rudder works, and with the wind in our sails we might find our way, but to where?
To adventure. To possibility. Some lifetimes ago,
I embraced these waters, and often they've served me well,
just as long as I keep one foot at the ready to disembark on land, should the opportunity arise.

But there is opportunity here, on this land, near the house with the laughter of children (or is it the howl of cats?)
Or of course we could set sail together and risk ourselves on the ship of love, come what may. Or try both together, the certain and the uncertain, or rather the uncertain wrapped in the certain and forming its center? "I cannot say just what I mean," there's the rub, and the point: that chaos is in us, not out there and never extinguished in here. But I think we do well to contain it, and rule justly over it, when we can.

A love that is only certain brings only pain as does one that's only uncertain. It must be a dance of opposition, of yes and maybe and no,
the whole way through, in order to stay alive.
So then set sail, if only in the heart and perhaps thereby chart these waters
for those who are still to come.

Eccentricities

01 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/eccentricities/

I know that you changed the words.
I think I know where you got the new ones.
I know what that would mean.
You know you can tell me if you want to.
I think I want to. I would tell you too.
I don't find you strange, or at least
I don't find you unworthy of love.
I would show you how worthy you are.
I would call you strong and brave.
I would tell you until you believe me.

It doesn't have to be a walk in the park.
It could be an experiment, designed to trigger growth.
There are two kinds of not being ready.
The first is unable to try.
The second can try and learn by trying and, thus, get ready.
It can be hard to tell these two things apart.
It's better to err on the side of caution.
But sometimes the growth has already begun
and must be seen through, given space to grow,
or else it becomes a cancer.

Shall I apologize for giving you space to grow?
It almost seems necessary. It has not been painless.
But I think I shall not. I think you will thank me too.
Still, love is not built on pain. I wish you quick healing,
but not so quick as to leave the work undone.

I believe I have seen this performance before,
or one like it. The delivery indeed is "strange".
It's unique to you, but some parts of this take are new.
Could it be you have weaved a tapestry
of me and you into something you hold very dear?
The resemblance is striking, this character is you,
or close enough that her words are like a totem.

If so, then what is your vow? How will you satisfy the need that emerges painfully? It does not end well for Alma.
That does not mean it can't end well for you. But be careful.
Take care of yourself, of your heart, of your body.
These treasures, once lost, can be hard to recover.
But you may indeed be obliged to risk them on the road to experience.
Only you know. You must do what you have to do.

Waking, Dreamlike

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/waking-dreamlike/

I have no use for fantasies.
I want the real thing.
Can ugly truth deflate the dream?
Then had it any worth?

Life is more than dreams, although our dreams do make much difference.
They inspire us to grow.
They chart the ways that we must go.

But one can lose oneself in dreaming,
one can sleep and never step.
This is a sign that something lingers
undigested in the head.

But is it also not a sign that men make gods from dreams?
And do these gods rule over us?
We are not as we seem.

One can learn to ride the waves,
and one can still believe.
But two or more can become brave,
for only two are free.

Free to make their gods together,
free at last to dream,
but in a waking, dreamlike life
where they are as they seem.

Ariadne II

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/ariadne-ii/

Ariadne, I liked you better
before you became a goddess, with Theseus, not Dionysus, though I do intend to invert the ending
and not leave you stranded on Naxos.
Still I can see why you'd like Dionysus after years as the mistress of the labyrinth, where your father the King enforced holy order despite all winding ways.
But the god of wine is unlikely to fill your cup for long and deserves nothing close to total devotion. You might have done better as queen of Athens, had circumstances allowed it.

Friend To Nothing

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/friend-to-nothing/

My wits return, and so I gaze
into the pitiless night, a friend to Nothing,
feeling its empty tentacles nurse my burns.
Time does not heal some wounds,
but one does grow a bit numb.
I'll take my finger and thumb and spin the globe of stars
that closes o'er the earth.
Then I'll feel better, or at least
I will feel less. But if I had to guess, these wits won't make me happy,
though they put an end to stress.

Nearly Bound

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/nearly-bound/

Somehow this thing keeps developing,
two together though apart growing closer in heart, with no need to make manifest that which grows.
But who knows? If we fail
at the coming appointment, won't there be another? It's hard to doubt, and getting harder.
Is this your doing? If so,
keep weaving, Ariadne.
I'm nearly bound.

Live By Dying

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/live-by-dying/

I stand at the threshold gazing
into the future, a future made full by hope,
for even these possibilities change my world,
come what may. How can I, a mere man, challenge fate, even should it decree
that all happiness comes with suffering?
Is that my state? Or can I live
by dying, and die for life's sake?

Governed, Not Destroyed

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/governed-not-destroyed/

Desire must be governed, not destroyed.
Without desire, we cannot avoid ennui,
and we cannot find motivation
for life's most important tasks.

Ebb and Flow

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/ebb-and-flow/

Strange how desire ebbs and flows
and nobody knows how or why…
We can hurl ourselves into the sky,
but we'll never escape it, not really.
So how should we channel it?
How can we make its burning warm the house?

Flirting With Danger

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/flirting-with-danger/

You make it hard to do the right thing, and I like that,
flirting with danger, but only to make love sure.
Are you sure? Would you give me that power?
I'd welcome it, but I must know what you want.

You may have the guest bed.
There is room in my bed as well.
Which do you prefer?

Tell Me About Yourself

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/tell-me-about-yourself/

> First, she's an acquaintance, then she's a lover, and finally, she becomes a good friend.
>
> Chekhov, Uncle Vanya, quoted from Drive My Car

Now that we've fallen in love,
I suppose it's as good a time as any
to get to know each other. Wouldn't you agree?
Seems a bit out of order, but hey
I'm here for it. Tell me about yourself.

Love Left Unsaid

08 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/love-left-unsaid/

I think we both know how we both feel.
The question is: what shall we do?

Love left unsaid is forever unreal.
Love put into words can come true.

Two Together

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/two-together/

Two together, wishing no other fate,
even as time ravages body and mind…
When we no longer remember what we stood up to do, we will still remember this time, when we met and combined, and that fire will burn even as all other fires wane. This I claim as a hope and a prophecy, knowing of course not for sure, not as matters of logic pretend to be sure, but as one of the heart's imperatives, saying "go." And so I will go, and make it so.

Overflowing

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/overflowing/

I am overflowing with love, there is no container vast enough to contain it (except perhaps you).
Are you empty? I'll fill you and never tire.

Two Birds

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/two-birds/

I want you to think hard about what has happened and then decide. I want you to know what you're doing.
It may be that love is blind. It may be that we are two birds of a different kind, with clashing songs.

But even as I write this line, two birds emerge
from the foliage, water birds, tropical and at ease.
It's like nature is talking to me, as they glide on the breeze over Magens Bay, saying: two become one in all places, all times, and in every locale…and your time is now.

The Other Half

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-other-half/

I have no trouble imagining being with you.
It feels like returning to the most familiar totem,
the dream of familiarity punctuated by bursts of reality, making us laugh. We are real too, you know, even with all desires swept normally undertow at last opened, revealed, exposed. It would be like the sweetest retreat into love that this world can know.
It would be dreams come true at last,
a so long to the past and a door to the future.
So sweet dreams, my love, but remember that words are but half of my offer.
The other half waits for your answer.

The Path of an Insect

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-path-of-an-insect/

My heart has grabbed the wheel and said,
"Mind, sit down, you are not master here."
You ask if I'm sure. I am thoroughly baffled and utterly confused but still totally motivated to see this through. My certainty and uncertainty are no more relevant than the path of an insect.
I go where I must go. This is the way.

Crown Jewel

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/crown-jewel/

Can I woo you with poems? It seems worth a try, and it seems to be working already.
This noble form of courtship has won many hearts,
past and present, but yours would be the crown jewel,
surpassing all others in beauty, rarity, and charm.

Not Without Fuel

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/not-without-fuel/

Some loves are like fireworks: big and explosive,
exciting but quickly over, leaving a desolate sky behind.
We must not be like this, not if we can help it.
There is a better way, more grounded, keeping the fire in a hearth where it belongs. We can let it burn, of course, but not carelessly, not without tending, and not without fuel.

From The Tropics

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/from-the-tropics/

Greetings from the tropics, where love grows like foliage, dense and inescapable. Ocean breezes blow across this wide array of thoughts, and bring them warmth, ensured by the equatorial sun. I'm only passing through,
and all my thoughts return to you and my deepest wish,
that you were here. For now I'll sit here sipping rum and feel at ease, but if it please you, please consider whether you would like to join me here next time.
I'd like that very much.

Motivated

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/motivated/

I've never been this motivated before. You've gotten under my skin, and I like you there, as a constant reminder of what it means to love and be loved in return. You will say you have not loved…of course this is true in the mundane realm, but the astral realm pulses with love (from you?) sent in my direction.
How can I ignore it? But the choice is yours forever, to love or not love, for the love that I want can't be taken,
it can only be given freely, and if you are not yet free,
I will wait and see, for this love you have brewing
may be just what I've always needed.

Regular Release

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/regular-release/

Can you heal the dark part of me, the deviant part that would have many women, and not have them for long?
There's no question that such love is empty, and yet
if my body is master, it says to love many, not one.
Why have concubines always attended the powerful?
Are there two kinds of love, the better for wives made permanent, the worse for disposable women, however disgusting we find it? Where does this "love" come from, ubiquitous and yet still shameful? The body cannot be controlled, not completely, though we wish it could…
Who's to say whether even the greatest love can overcome the need for regular release, on a cadence defined by the gods?

Without Fear And Trembling

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/without-fear-and-trembling/

I will repent, and I will swear to be chaste,
but is the promise hollow? What stands under it?
I would love with body as well as soul, and yet I know that bodies are messy and have their own laws no matter the controls we foist upon them. What can I promise?
To make love to you and you only? But making love is not the only kind of sex. Are all others forbidden?
I would like to say yes, but I doubt my own willpower
against the imperatives of flesh, the strict tensions demanding release, and the damage to health should I disobey.
What then can I say? I would love you, and truly, and bodily, but not with a promise to bend my own body
by a rule that would damage it. I do not need other women, but I do need freedom, and understanding, as I find my salvation
without fear and trembling.

Come What May

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/come-what-may/

Even in paradise, one can find doubts, and these doubts form an image of how many futures the present could become.
There are no guarantees. There are many ways to answer desire,
some better than others, but none that ensure a result.
The assurance is that the attempt is made, come what may.

Beyond Me

13 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/beyond-me/

I have caught sight of a future with you in it, although the surrounding environs are blurred. Would we love as lovers forever, or would we transform into parents?
I think I can handle either and have a strong preference for both as opposed to a future without you. Am I mad to speak thus to a woman I hardly know? No, I do not feel mad, and I think my heart does know, though how it can know
I don't know (it's beyond me). We must take our time, and unravel this new dilemma, exposing illusions
'til only solid things remain.

Strong Enough Now

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/strong-enough-now/

A strange choice, a need to step back comes over me, with all the imperative power of dreams. What is happening? I will not know for some time, but I follow the advice of my instincts, and pull the rug so to speak,
but gently, reminding of possibilities.
My guidance could be like a crutch, which you must escape to be free. We've prepared for that.
You can do this. You can stand on your own feet.
Your legs are strong enough now.

A New Here

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/a-new-here/

What a strange mystery, silence after eruptions of passion…
I could blame the weather, but whether or not we control it,
I'm here now, but somewhere not quite like before, a new here,
a new place where we maybe could meet not as minds
but as bodies and humans as well. I can tell you are frightened, and maybe this instinct responds to some signal from you saying
"slow down." I'll slow, but I want you to know I'm not giving up, not even close.

Hors D'Oeuvres

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/hors-doeuvres/

I must wean you off of these poems to make way for solid food that could nourish you. This has been a taste, an hors d'oeuvre, and the meal is prepared, but you must know whether you choose to partake. Your attendance is requested with alacrity and verve, but the choice is yours, and I gather you may not be feeling well, so if you choose to retire to your room, it will be understood, not resented.
But when these fine foods are presented, you may find your appetite grows and your body strengthens, more so than from any hors d'oeuvre, and you may feel your hunger allowed at last. You may even come back for more.

Eyes Open

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/eyes-open/

I have seen you in the midnight hour
invade my dreams, then nestle into place
among the other ghosts that soothe me while I sleep.
It is a welcome thing (you are), but it is not enough.
We must be friends as well, and we must fight,
and we must disagree, because we live on earth.
But I can see you, even now, beneath my eyelids,
and I wish to see you even with eyes open.

Remember The Ladies

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/remember-the-ladies/

> I desire you would Remember the Ladies, and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the Husbands. Remember all Men would be tyrants if they could.
>
> Abigail Adams, letter to John Adams, March 31, 1776

> We are obliged to go fair, and softly, and in Practice you know We are the subjects. We have only the Name of Masters, and rather than give up this, which would completely subject Us to the Despotism of the Petticoat, I hope General Washington, and all our brave Heroes would fight.
>
> John Adams, letter to Abigail Adams, April 14, 1776

I would find an Abigail, with wit enough to make me doubt myself, and love enough to do so only when required, in jest, perhaps,
but also as a nudge in the right direction.
The provocations of a spirited woman, wise and pointed…
can a man find a greater blessing? But of course
I shall retain my lofty airs, returning fire against the despotism of the petticoat,
the true laws of nature and nature's society,
the queen in the hearts of all men.

Soon Will I Love You In Return

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/soon-will-i-love-you-in-return/

If you use love (or love's withdrawal) as a weapon, a tool for manipulation, then soon it will become poisonous, soon I will not even want it, soon I will leave you to your poisoned love. But if you love as a gift, given freely…then soon will I love you in return.

Much More Down Below

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/much-more-down-below/

When I step back and survey the journey we've taken (for surely it has been your journey as well) I'm amazed and I feel my trepidation wane…for somehow we seem to have struck a vein of passion buried deep in our collective soul (for surely we share the same soul).
That vein has erupted, unleashing its pent up pressure, releasing its gases and filling the air with the perfume of love. I now must examine these fumes and this rupture. What started as a walk in the park has revealed much more down below.

Mere Dream

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/mere-dream/

The fantasy must end one way or the other. It must become real or disappear. Love cannot survive as a dream, a mere dream. Please know it was worth it either way.

Practicing

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/practicing/

In her moonlit room, she practices her oeillade.
It would be a most welcome sight, could she find the courage to put it on display, in the right time and place.
In the meantime, she practices. For now that suffices.
But she longs to be under the stars, in someone's arms.

Make It Last

16 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/make-it-last/

Have I invaded your privacy with words of love, with insight into your condition? I do not know where it comes from, or where it goes, but I know that it's here, and I say we make it last.

Paper Tower

18 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/paper-tower/

She sits at the center of her tower in prayer.
She was given no door, no furniture, no plants, nothing living and thus no temptation. She sits and she waits for she knows not what. As the hours creep by, she grows restless, begins to examine the walls,
to touch them even, and finds them not stone as she thought,
but the image of stone imprinted on the thinnest paper.
A devilish thought overtakes her. She taps the paper and watches it wave the whole wall up and down, as far as the eye can see. So she pushes it harder.
A small tear brings in fresh air. She falls back,
so used to the dank of the tower that freshness,
with who knows what pollen, comes in as a shock.
But before long she stands by this tear and its offering, breathing as deeply as she can. She tears it still further and further, until she can see the other side. She's amazed.
She just stands there for days, in a daze at the wonders of plants and birds, the sun and the breeze,
but she will not leave the tower. It's home, and all homes have value. But something was ever unsettled. She knows about trees now, and she was not one to forget. Why were there no trees in her tower, no birds, no songs? One day she gazes out and sees a tree struck by lightning catch fire, and she cannot stay in any longer. She rushes to it, climbing and climbing to the highest branches, where the fire burns.
She tries to grasp it, unaware of such things, unlearned in the ways of fire. She feels its burn and screams.
As the scream leaves, some pieces of fire enter through her and settle deep within. She has fire in her now, and she thinks of the paper that was once her home, and she thinks that all paper is made from trees, and if trees can burn…
She returns to her tower and dares not touch the walls with burning hands. She sits quieter than ever, dead center, not sure how to pray anymore. But the fire keeps on burning.
She does not mean to, but soon her heat expands and ignites the walls in a holocaust of flame, as she weeps all alone at the center.
But the blaze cannot hurt her. It is her, and she was not meant for this tower. She burns and burns and eventually she stops weeping. She rises and goes to the original tear.

She sees something written that calms the flame. What was it?
A map of some islands in the Aegean? A few lines of poetry?
The words of a long-dead philosopher? Whatever it was, she knows now that the walls had been made from things meant to move.
So she goes out in search of a place where her fire can burn.

She doesn't find one, not for a long time, and she feels the danger of hunger, the pang of thirst. She returns to the tower and papers over paper with paper. She puts out her fire, or tries to…at least she manages to heal and dwell
with some potted plants and a bit of dancing.
But this is no longer a home for her, if it ever was.
She needs another to knock on her door.

He came with a torch and instructions on how to use it.
He knew the way to a place where all fire is admirable.
He offered to show her and waited until she was ready.

They went together.

Blossom II

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/blossom-ii/

As spring approaches, I hear the birds
singing love songs, lost in the madness of suns.
A flower has arrived in my garden.
She is a bit fussy, a delicate plant, but with the right touch
I think she will blossom beautifully.

Vessel

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/vessel/

Darling, let me tell you why my heart sings.
It is not because of you. It is because the sun shines love anew and echoes with the sweet refrain that banishes the rain. Oh, it is true, but it's a truth
we carry, each of us, just waiting to poke through.
I turn to you (I do), but as it stands,
you are no source of truth, but only truth's true vessel,
as am I. Let love remember whence it comes.

Intuition

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/intuition/

You've come. No, not in real life, in that realer life, the life of dreams, which says to me, "she's come," that now it's a matter of time. How can I know such things?
There's no new evidence, unless I count this feeling, intuition, surer guide than eyes or ears in the jungles of love.
Why do I know it with conviction? It can only be the simple truth, we are now one already, in some way we could neither cause nor resist. But do not be afraid. Love has its purposes, and we do well to go where it would take us.

Katana

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/katana/

> Though pedantry denies,
> It's plain the Bible means
> That Solomon grew wise
> While talking with his queens
>
> Yeats, On Woman

It is a great gift to know that I can flatter you to no end, that you will cut through the false ones, receiving only the true.
It will be a great help to me. No lesser mind will do. I require one sharp as a katana and precise as a samurai, slicing
through my weak points, with care, but with no remorse,
for your blade is true.

Inner Beauty

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/inner-beauty/

> To be born woman is to know …
> That we must labor to be beautiful
>
> Yeats, Adam's Curse

The labor is much appreciated, although it's not always required, because the thoughtful can remember and interpret at a glance,
having once glimpsed inner beauty in the light of day.
They cannot erase its indelible mark from the mind's eye,
and they'll know that it slumbers within even when outward labors are lacking. So take heart, born woman, and fear not your lover's neglect. If he loves you,
he could not forget if he tried.

How Much

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/how-much/

What is a good man? One free of all shadow?
Do any remain who believe in such things? But if not,
how much shadow is tolerable? How much warrants punishment or loss of freedom? How much can be outgrown and thus overlooked as the chaff of youth? How much? How much?

Through This Experience

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/through-this-experience/

I think I can love you. That's a start.
Maybe I'll teach you some things.
Surely you'll teach me some things.
And maybe we'll learn some together.

Room For Doubts

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/room-for-doubts/

A strange calm echoes the silence both in and out.
I am hoping to see you, but whether this hope comes true is up to you. It is out of my hands. I believe I've received your instructions, and I will obey, but I cannot say quite how I feel, like a moment's hesitation before a storm.
So go, if you must, and move on. But I have room for doubts.
I have room for you and your doubts.

Obvious By Now

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/obvious-by-now/

I suppose I'm in love. Is it strange that I don't know myself, that I doubt what must surely be obvious by now?

Thing of Eternity

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/thing-of-eternity/

What use in protesting it? See, I am here, I will love if love does come my way…but I have not forgotten our folly.
The whole human race live like puppets, awaiting a tug on the strings, without which we grow cold and limp, and more useless
than rotting wood. But the puppet master has no mercy, does not wait for the opportune time…still, is there an opportune time? Or is love not a thing of time, but always a thing of eternity?

Field

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/field/

Into your eternal bosom, let me come and rest,
that we might find ourselves enlightened and immured by what beats in your breast. You are the field, and I the measly cultivator, making plans and plowing
so that you might come to life. You nourish both of us and all who know your bounty. I will take good care to keep you fed and watered, add a trellis here and there,
but you know what to do, and you know how to do it, more than I.
You are the field, as yet untapped, but overflowing with potential.

The Night of the Pigtails

22 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-night-of-the-pigtails/

You seemed very young (far too young if you know what I mean), and I hardly could recognize the glimpse of the woman I knew I had seen.
But I felt a strange warmth even so. I chose not to approach, and in fact was quite worried
I might have hallucinated, desperate as I was for any sign.
For your presence there made all the difference.
But what was this girlish slough, these pigtails?
I think I can understand your need for reconnaissance,
but I had to consider the latent aggression,
the taunt enclosed in such a move amid silence,
after what we had been through. Perhaps I deserved it for waking desire. Or perhaps it tested my courage and strength. Did I pass? I did not like being taunted, and told you in so many words, but those words were prepared in advance,
in response to the silence, and had a secret meaning.
I understood also that you were sorry, only sorry that we failed to connect, for reasons still unknown to me.
But neither of us was sorry the attempt had been made.
And now as we approach what may be a second attempt,
I must wonder if the way has cleared, the storm has passed,
and the slough has been shed once and for all.
Has the Night of the Pigtails faded into myth?

The Sexual Development of Exceptional People

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-sexual-development-of-exceptional-people/

It's well known that sexual development requires a spark, the appearance of a suitable partner. But less well considered are the problems this causes exceptional people, who require exceptional candidates to light their fire. Through no fault of their own, they remain undeveloped, awaiting ignition, unable to find it…rare persons by definition are hard to find. So what can a rare person do?
They can cope. They can wait. They can hope. But the odds remain slim, for the sparks only come from outside…and when one does come, it may come as a shock, which requires some adjustment, though it comes with euphoria too.

Prepared To Make Good

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/prepared-to-make-good/

The mists of time close over, clench what has been in the vice of tomorrow, the permanent movement, the changing gods…
what are we, their children? How little they care for us! How little we care for ourselves…I would walk out into the clearing and shout, making way for whatever we are…tell the mists to part for however long we can sustain the effort. This way we might live for a while at least. This way we might stand and be men and women, awake to our burdens, alert to the dangers within and without, and prepared to make good of ourselves.

Entropy

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/entropy/

Entropy is the status quo.
All else requires sustained effort.

Presence

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/presence/

I must see that you are ready to be a woman
before I could ask you to be my woman,
and I must see it in person and not in character.
I thought you thought you were ready and was nearly ready to ask before.
I suppose you must see that I am also ready to be a man.
We could prove it together.
But I can't shake the feeling that you are only almost ready.
Prove me wrong.
Appear with the grace and confidence that I know you can also imagine.
Invite me into your presence.
I will not break down the door.
But I will enter if you open it.

But maybe the door is stuck, jammed with memories and bruises. Even so, I maintain that it only opens inward. I cannot help clear it from outside.
You must clear the way to let me in. Only then could I help, and I would help, with feeling.
But I have not the power nor the inclination to break down doors, and I think you would find that life with no door is far worse than the life you have now.

You can choose to let me in, even for wild reasons, to set free a wildness within. It is true, I have known doorbreakers and the allure of barging in. But I surrender that power in the name of something higher, a love which awaits invitations and happy news. You must keep your door, for without it you would be exposed to the worst kind of monster, a man in heat. You must keep your door, with a fresh handle, clear of obstructions, but locked until the time of your choosing.

It would not take much, I could squeeze through even a narrow opening, and begin the work of sorting things out. What matters is the intent, the respect for doors and locks, without which you place yourself in grave danger. Perhaps I fibbed

when I said that I have not the power to break down doors.
I do have it, but I will not use it, because it would hurt you, perhaps for a long time afterward. You have a power too, that of opening and closing, and I would like to see you wield it as a woman in full command of her presence.

Odds of Success

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/odds-of-success/

I would guarantee success if I could, but you and I both know that would be a lie. The success is possible, but the guarantee is not. It's a gamble each time, and the risk is what makes it exciting. But know this, our odds of success are high, so high that not taking this risk seems foolish.
Expect no perfect assurances, only the earnest desire of a man who has found what he wants.

New Mountain

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/new-mountain/

I am brimming with words again, words for you and for the universe…I have emptied myself on these pages with no regrets, and now none can forget how we came to believe in each other, across space and time,
with all meter and rhyme discarded, as needed,
before this new mountain we climb.

Access

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/access/

Access to a woman's body
is a debt that a man can never fully repay.

Very Lucky

25 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/very-lucky/

I could write you poems for the rest of my life and still never capture this passion in words, this immortal heat that one either knows or doesn't, but the luckiest know it,
and we have become very lucky, very lucky indeed…

Healing

27 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/healing/

How far we have come, and how far we have yet to go…what is this sudden pain and these memories? Minerva's owl at dusk?
I think an old wound is healing. I think it will itch for a while. We are closer than ever before, and that makes healing possible. Heal me, and let me heal you.

Feeling Dry (A Pain From Long Ago)

27 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/feeling-dry-a-pain-from-long-ago/

I'm reminded of another pain from long ago, one not yet put into words. She was too young too, but all I wanted was to encourage. She sat apart from the others, reading Shakespeare, and I could understand how a mind like hers would crave solitude and find her world depressing.
It was my role to encourage, like Jesus would,
and it almost ruined my life. Her mother misunderstood and accused me to my face of vulgar intentions.
The father was gone, and I can assume the mother had reasons to mistrust men on sight. Even so,
false accusations could have haunted me, followed me,
if the story had reached the news. So what could I do but walk away, and leave this poor girl more discouraged than before. I could have helped her, and no, not with sex, but with words and kindness, the kind she was lacking, the kind that her mother kept hidden from her. But my own life imperiled, I fled, and I do not regret it, though I am ashamed that I did not defend my honor. But there was no use.
Even false accusations destroy. And what man can stand against pain, plain and simple, when put on display?

This was my final break with Christianity.
I tried to love my neighbor and it cost me dearly.
Never again. Does my neighbor want to be loved, and by a stranger?
These teachings of love I now find vile.
Greet one another with a holy kiss? No thank you.
The teachings of Jesus, if put into practice, would overturn everything, bad and good. But they never were put into practice, and if they were, it would ruin the family, it would be like a shooting star burning out as soon as it started, because the foundation is shaky, rooted in weakness instead of strength. No, all Christian churches require an admixture of Greek and Roman ideals to have any staying power. That is my final answer.

I turn now to you, muse of many poems, mercurial sprite of the night of the pigtails, and ask: does my violent reaction make sense now? You are older than this friend was long ago, but you are younger than she is now. Does that feel gross? I do not know.

Perhaps the span of years matters less than absolute maturity, and if you are ready, then you are ready, but I will be very careful,
more careful than needed, because this friend may have thought she was ready for something beyond her years, inspiring her mother's worry.
I do not know what role I played in her life, if any,
but despite my own confusion and immaturity, my conscience is clear.
I intended to help her. But I would do more than help you.

Can you swallow this, digest it, then live with it?
I have no choice, but you could walk away and plant your flag in other soil, in even the soil that I have rejected. Make your choice, but take your time.
I could convince you that the ground I have found is fertile.
I could show you how things grow and why.
But I know that the cost is high.
So look to the sky, and answer.
Are you feeling dry?

Am I to be crucified for caring about the soul of another?
Whence comes this hysteria, the fear that all caring means sex and that sex is expressly forbidden, until a certain age?
Shall adolescence be loveless? Who could defend such absurdity?
Of course they must try and err, that is the whole purpose of growing up, and of course it gets messy, confusing, with even a hint of danger. But are we so weak that this danger must cause us to panic, or are we men and women intent on raising the next generation to maturity? There is no easy path, free from danger, there is only this one path or standing still, and still-standing turns into despair every time.
I have no wish to sanction abusers or give them aid or comfort,
but there are other kinds of abuse perpetuated in the name of abolishing abuse, and I will not sanction these either. Some risks must be taken, as young people know all too well. But feeling, after all, is not action, and sometimes the risk of allowing a feeling is enough, to let it pass through the body and fade into vapor.
Self-discipline is not some myth, unreachable and naive, it is the only path to a fulfilling life, and too much external discipline prevents its development, inhibits the growth of executive functioning in those who have this potential. The line remains blurry, for try as we might, who can say when experience crosses over from good into bad? Is it not always both? But sometimes it's more one than the other…

There was no sex, and there would not have been any sex.
But there were erotic feelings, on her part at least. Perhaps I was foolish to not see the danger, though I maintain the danger was overstated, perhaps even necessary for her. She was trying to develop, and surely we all would be better off if more people grew up. But can I be trusted to maintain a safe distance? If I erred, it was hubris, not lust.

Strange to remember these long-dead memories on the cusp of my own maturity. Perhaps I see now what I sensed then as mere potential, the end of the growth that begins when a suitable partner appears. She was trying, and I cannot fault her for that, any more than I fault myself for wishing her well. But the pain of the tyranny of undeveloped people, who assume no development is possible, that questions are fruitless, that growth and adulthood are myths enforced by power and violence rather than real achievements…such people will ruin us, if we let them.

But part of the problem lies deep in the Christian idea of love,
of a love so pure and chaste that no danger can overcome it.
What evils await those who attempt to embody such love!
Whether the universe loves in this way, we do not, and we must not attempt it. Our love is contingent, reciprocal, full of expectations and mutual recriminations. So was this my folly, to attempt unidirectional love, like the so-called love of God, a love free from human needs and confusions, a love built on lies? And this love, as we know well by now, is despotic, mere tyranny in disguise.

But absent such love, what remains of the church?
Some hard fragments of Roman law and a flowering of Greek philosophy, maybe the playful wink of Plotinus or the warm-hearted empathy of Jesus, but not the doctrines, no theologies, because the central pillar is rotten, the very idea of God's one-sided love is repugnant upon examination. For who among us could reciprocate the love of God? Does this teaching not teach us to deny our volition in the face of irresistible love?

No wonder abusers find a home in the church!
Their victims are primed in advance to receive the abuse of a love that denies their autonomy. I will have none of this love. I will not.
And my heart will be healthier, even if I must go alone.

But must I go alone? I can see now over the horizon
one approaching my lonely encampment, who perhaps has felt these things before.
I would welcome you, but you must count the cost of rejecting much of what shaped you. Perhaps you reject it already. Perhaps that's what brings us together. But you know my heart. I reveal it so you may decide for yourself who you are and whether you wish to go with me.

Contra Kant

27 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/contra-kant/

Philosophy, at its best,
is a form of poetry,
never a science.

Culture the Past

27 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/culture-the-past/

The past, it turns out, is easy to destroy,
but the future is hard to build. What happens when the future fails to arrive? Are we left with nothing, or can we rebuild what we had?
The past, in fact, still lingers, though it moves underground, to avoid the prurient fingers of scientists and politicians. I would let it evolve, and seek neither to destroy nor to build ex nihilo, but culture the past into something we all could live for.

Into The Abyss

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/into-the-abyss/

Into the abyss again,
searching searching searching,
after all and all as one,
the home of thinkers,
call it God.

Free Will

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/free-will/

> Education should aim at destroying free will, so that, after pupils are thus schooled, they will be incapable, throughout the rest of their lives, of thinking or acting otherwise than as their schoolmasters would have wished.
>
> Fichte, Addresses to the German Nation, 1804

For centuries, the German barbarians were acquainted with the sharp end of civilization,
the stick that beats down rowdy spirit in the name of order.
They have never recovered.

They now know only that stick or wild abandon.

Marriage Bed II

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/marriage-bed-ii/

> Woman, your words have cut me to the core.
> Who has moved my bed? That would be a hard task,
> even for the most skilled craftsman, unless a god
> himself came down and with ease chose to shift it.
> No mortal man alive, not in his prime,
> could lightly prize it from its place. A great secret > lies in that bed's craftsmanship. It was my work,
> my own, and no one else's.
>
> Inside our court there grew a long-leaved olive tree,
> flourishing and full, its trunk as thick as a pillar.
> Around this I built my chamber, stone by stone,
> and roofed it well, and hung close-fitting doors.
> Then I lopped the foliage of that long-leaved olive,
> and trimmed the trunk from the root up, and with my adze > planed it smooth and true, and to the line made it straight, > fashioning a bedpost. I bored it all with an auger.
>
> Beginning with this post, I built my bed,
> until it was finished, inlaid with gold and silver > and ivory. And I stretched on it a thong of ox-hide, > shining with purple dye.
>
> There is our secret. And I do not know, > woman, if my bed is still fast, or if some man
> has cut the olive trunk and moved it elsewhere.
>
> Homer, Odyssey (23.183-204), translation by Gemini

I have planted the tree
that could grow into the sturdiest bedpost
of a bed that cannot be moved.

How I Hear It

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/how-i-hear-it/

Call to me, sweet spirit,
fill my head with songs,
and I will listen well,
because I hear you tell of places I belong --
oh, how I hear it.

Good Fruits

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/good-fruits/

I would wish you the happiest days that you ever have known.
I would make them as true as your truth could contain.
There would be no regrets, only tending the flame.
We would reap the good fruits we have sown.

Waiting

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/waiting/

We are waiting to feel ready. We are waiting until the right time. We are waiting until it feels right. We are waiting. But may I ask whether these things might be made true
by spending time together?

What You Are Fighting For

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/what-you-are-fighting-for/

You have spoken again. I will need some time to decipher the clues, but the timing speaks volumes.
Or would you like me to deconstruct you?
I like your sharp edge, have no doubt, but I see also softness that would like to come out. There's a place where that softness can know it belongs. You are right where life brought you, and fight if you must, but remember what you are fighting for.

Heights Worth Exploring

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/heights-worth-exploring/

I am happy to see you deflate my call for inhuman grace, if that's what it was.
I will rise to meet you as you are. But know that I carry my anima with me, and she has reached heights worth exploring, if you have the time.

Fill In The Blanks

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/fill-in-the-blanks/

I must fill in the blanks
unless you fill them in for me.
Perhaps if I make you seem silly
you'll feel obliged to correct me
and then we can speak again.

Evil Afoot

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/evil-afoot/

I do find this game delightful, but I must remind you it cannot go on like this for eternity. Is it mere foreplay?
Let it be so, because we cannot go into fantasy and dwell there, with so much evil afoot.

Children

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/children/

In truth, I did not want children for the longest time, but you have almost changed my mind. How funny, that my doubts were cleared by a woman with doubts of her own. One of nature's jokes.
But I am not set either way, and in truth I consider it folly to make this decision alone. It takes two, not only to do it, but even to choose to do it, and I would not choose without you.

Could I live with you, happily, just us?
I think that I could.
But we must know our reasons for choosing as we do.

The Beast In Man

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/the-beast-in-man/

Or are we still in the labyrinth? Are these your minotaurs?
Half-man, half-beast, or the beast-in-man…it is time that I told you a secret: the beast is deathless, it cannot be killed, but it can be soothed, even tamed, and made to do tricks (like these), or put to good use plowing fields.

Labor of Love

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/labor-of-love/

This is a labor of love in more ways than one.
It's the start of a venture with uncertain future,
the creak of a door that leads into a hidden future,
and I will work hard at it, if you will let me,
but I will expect you to work hard as well.

Hair on Fire

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/hair-on-fire/

You are beautiful even with your hair on fire, but not in the way you might think, or fear. It's your courage, not your purity, that I admire. I have no need for idols,
I swore off them long ago, in a valediction to images.
You have that hidden song that embraces the shadow
as part of the whole. I would hear you sing it, then master it, then sing it some more.

Only As Humans

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/only-as-humans/

You are seeking the center, the middle way between angel and beast. I will stand my ground against either extreme. I will walk with you
only as humans.

Without Losing Yourself

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/without-losing-yourself/

One day you will love without losing yourself.
It may be a ways off, but it nears.
Have no doubt.

Anatomy of Shadows

31 January 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/01/anatomy-of-shadows/

Are you on the hunt, and am I the prey?
Do you like to play with your food?
Well then I must say this will not last long.
I have been both predator and prey before,
and I find both boring. It's better to love and be loved or be left alone. But the shadow of love lives in each of us, let's not deny it.
I think it's been found near the cervix.

At The Same Time

02 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/at-the-same-time/

I am either going to fall down laughing, or else confess my undying love, but I think that I really would like to do both at the same time.

Sweetheart

02 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/sweetheart/

Good morning sweetheart!
Or is your heart not so sweet?
May I sweeten it for you?
Let me examine it.

Fertility Exam

02 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/fertility-exam/

I have reviewed the evidence you sent me,
and everything appears to be in good order,
it looks like you have it all in the right place,
but you really should come in person,
so that I can perform a few tests
and finish my assessment.

Sufficiently Motivated

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/sufficiently-motivated/

It's amazing just how many euphemisms one can find when sufficiently motivated.

Memorandum

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/memorandum/

> Pfft, too sappy!
>
> Mr. Burns, The Simpsons S5E21

Memorandum Re: Delineation of Romantic Intentions

It has come to our attention that you exist.
We have been made aware that you are of a certain age with certain proportions suitable to activities of a sensitive nature.
We would like to investigate this matter.
We are certain that the future of the human race depends on it.

At your earliest convenience, return the attached form,
filling in the bubble for "Yes" or "No".
Do not use the "Maybe" bubble.
Do not fill in both "Yes" and "No".
And fill in the bubble completely,
our machines are known to be temperamental.

Mysteries

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/mysteries/

I know better than to expect that a woman
can be understood, but I must try anyway, for my own benefit and edification. She is no different than all other mysteries…and no less deep.

Babylon

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/babylon/

Perhaps it is time to stop dreaming. I sense a danger that I cannot name, but it's not myself at risk.
I will go through the winding halls of Babylon
again, if it might save another, even one.
I will summon the fire that leaves its mark.
But this is not a place one should wander alone.
I have my companions tucked deep inside. They will answer
if answer they must. When fires engulf the city,
I know where I can run. And I know I can make it.
Friend, don't underestimate your peril. This is a place of wildness, where laws bend and break on a whim.

Walk Alone

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/walk-alone/

I must be prepared to walk alone. There is no road that cannot be walked alone, and no time like the present to walk it, eager for peace and quiet, the calm river spirits that I once knew.

I Will Live Well

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/i-will-live-well/

Perhaps this was my story after all, and all along these changes meant my progress, no one else's. Who's to say?
At the end of the day, I own my life only, if that,
and I will live well, as well as the stories tell.

Tired

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/tired/

I grow tired, and not for the first time. Has the Phoenix exhausted itself? It returns to the nest empty-feathered,
the flame a mere memory, but a good memory nonetheless.

Venus

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/venus/

Venus, of course, is a goddess,
but she is not the only one.
More importantly, you are not her.

Vanda

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/vanda/

Have I imagined you? Suddenly I feel once again as if figments of dreams have become something real…
have I lost the thread that leads out of the maze,
to the trail of breadcrumbs that I myself laid?
Are you cruel? Are you kind? Are you both?
I have not had the chance to know, but these signals,
if merely a shadow game, would be cruel.
I have stayed in the hope they were something more.

On the other hand, it remains possible that you are a narcissist, enticing my love for the sake of mockery or to teach me some lesson.
Is that your purpose? If so, you are strangely committed to it, so much so that I think you do love me in spite of your self. If so, we can drop the charade.
Consider my lesson learned, the lesson
that love, if done right,
is invigorating…even with a careless partner.
But once they are shown to be careless,
it's better to leave them alone.

It would have been nice to know you,
but if you have made your choice,
then I must make mine.

If my words have meant something to you,
keep them,
but don't ask for more.

Yet I can't believe that you're Vanda,
or, if you are, that it's not just a phase.
Is that really the "love" you prefer?
You know better.

Must you try on black to darken the hue of appalling white?
Must you go to extremes just to find the center?
If this is your purpose, to heal, I commend you,
but witness the danger. It's what will save you from the trap of darkness. Catch sight of the path that leads home, the path
with a panoply of colors, with lights along the way.

Strength

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/strength/

You must not let love
take your dignity.
That would be no love at all.
You must love out of strength.
But to do so you first must find strength.

The One You Will Be

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-one-you-will-be/

How does one find strength? Through a kind of adventure that opens new possibilities. Also, quite simply, with time and the growth that follows. They say that the brain keeps developing into one's twenties, especially the part that controls inhibition. You may simply need more time to become yourself, or at least to become the one you will be and would like to be.

Thorns

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/thorns/

> He who wants a rose must respect the thorn.
>
> Persian Proverb

I think you are in a look-at-me-now-dad, roaring-twenties kind of phase, but if some of these thorns are permanent, I will respect them. I just don't want to get pricked.

Only to Strengthen

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/only-to-strengthen/

The ultimate degradation
is the surrender of self-preservation.
When this is lost, one becomes a victim, at the mercy of others,
and of life itself, an infant again
but without the mother's protection.

Surrendering even volition and all self-love may seem sublime to one who does not know better, but such gifts always prove worthless, and less than worthless,
a genuine burden.

I would love only to strengthen myself and my beloved.

Cleverness

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/cleverness/

Vanda is not a good role for you,
but I see how her words fit our present moment.
Well done. Your cleverness is greatly admired.

Letting Go

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/letting-go/

I long for you with a longing that confounds me. Now that I've found you
I would have a hard time letting go.

Tragic Figures

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/tragic-figures/

Or must I go through the looking glass?
Perhaps these figures are tragic, and you mean to say:
things go badly for them, let's do better.

Growing Up

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/growing-up/

> A man may grow old in vain.
>
> Buddha, Dhammapada

Growing up has never been a sure thing.
Many don't make it.
Don't be like them, if you can help it.

Much In Common

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/much-in-common/

Here's the rub:
if you're an aspiring dominatrix,
count me out.

But if you are merely honest
about the dark side of life,
or lost in a temporary struggle,
then we have much in common.

Whole, Complete

05 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/whole-complete/

I would see you whole, complete, yourself
and no other, and ready to take on the world with the strength you have in you.

But I would be those things too.

Cruelty

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/cruelty/

I can taste your cruelty, even in the midst of positive signals. I do not know if I like the taste.
But I know where my limits are, and my line in the sand encloses my dignity. I will not give that up, not even for love. You must ask yourself whether I would be any good to you
after receiving your cruelty,
or if I would soon be deformed, degraded, eventually discarded, or cruel in return. It is not absolutely forbidden, you are free to be cruel, but it is a bad idea,
and likely less thrilling than you imagine.

But maybe you need to try it and see for yourself.

The Reason For Discipline

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-reason-for-discipline/

Those who develop a taste for cruelty
often must be put down, like a bear that has tasted human flesh, and is therefore more likely to seek the same. But you are no bear, and your only hope lies with society, the source of food and warmth. This is the reason for discipline, the only reason that satisfies
the wildness within…even wildness knows not to bite the hand that feeds it. And yet we are animals in part and forever
'til death, which is surely our end, not
the end of the life that flows through us.

Second Nature

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/second-nature/

Habits can be cultivated, lessons learned through repetition. This is the way to tame beasts. The rituals of self-control become a second nature,
as instinctive as the drives that they tame.
But this takes time and frequent practice.

Extraordinary Discipline

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/extraordinary-discipline/

Love is not truly unconditional,
not when it's human to human,
for humans have limits, and all are vulnerable to cruelty
and the degradation it brings.
So let's not pretend. But this does not make love impossible,
it only makes it difficult and rare.
It requires extraordinary discipline.

The Habit of Loving

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-habit-of-loving/

How does one acquire the habit of loving?
Not by loving, of course, for how could they love without the habit? Yet there is a kind of practice,
a playground of love, in the mind's eye,
in the land of dreams, where our fantasies
train us with monsters that are yet to come.
We can study well enough to master ourselves,
the hardest victory, as Aristotle says,
but the true test is in the real world,
where the training is put to use and the trainee survives or fails.

Hard to Tell

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/hard-to-tell/

Now, having laid out my position
and thwarted some potential demons,
I return to your likely purpose,
to affirm and acknowledge
this ongoing stream of poems,
this strangest courtship. It suits us,
you know (you know better than most), but I wish you would not flip the script or mix signals.
I wish I didn't have to work hard to decipher you. It's not a healthy basis for what I would like to build. Am I this confusing, mercurial, and vague?
Perhaps, but it's hard to tell.

Parts of Vanda

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/parts-of-vanda/

I do see what you've done,
and I do like it,
but I have some concerns.
Which parts of Vanda
did you mean to convey?
She compliments the writer, but turns out to be a fabulist,
and Thomas is not someone I'd admire.

And yet your Vanda seems more sincere,
more genuinely hurt by the fear of misunderstanding.
Let me speak to her: she has not misunderstood.
In fact, she has arrived right on time.

But I must make one thing clear:
there is a real danger in what Vanda and Thomas discover,
and we have that danger inside of us too.
It is not to be taken lightly. It is not a toy.
It is life and death. It demands respect.

Venus in Fur
is a comedy
but ought to be a tragedy.

But is your Vanda manipulative,
or is she merely afraid
she has made a mistake?

You've removed some manipulative lines,
about the guy on the train and being soaked to the skin,
so I think I will take my chances that you are sincere, but naive…
but I will pay attention for signals suggesting otherwise.

When Vanda is not sincere,
Thomas would do better
to not be alone with her.

Catalyst and Observer

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/catalyst-and-observer/

You are still shapeshifting.
Must I now play Pygmalion,
aghast at my own creation?

But no, I have not created you.
I am mere catalyst and observer.

The Pain of Reality

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-pain-of-reality/

> [S]he had no notion of the game she was playing…She was still in her nebulous infantile world and had not yet discovered the real world at all.
>
> Jung, The Relations Between the Ego and the Unconscious

What a strange pain you have caused me, and I do not know if you meant it, or if this is simply the pain of reality. Are you this blurry? Is this the truth?
Then I wonder how love could be possible, with less than wild abandon,
and I am not one for wild abandon. I'll see this thing through, whatever it is, whether love or guidance or some terrible mistake.
Maybe you have not understood me as well as I thought or hoped.
I would love to know. Or maybe you are on your own path and must do what you must.

Who You Would Like To Be

07 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/who-you-would-like-to-be/

> Hence I regard the loss of balance as purposive, since it replaces a defective consciousness by the automatic and instinctive activity of the unconscious, which is aiming all the time at the creation of a new balance and will moreover achieve this aim, provided that the conscious mind is capable of assimilating the contents produced by the unconscious.
>
> Jung, The Relations Between the Ego and the Unconscious

I will stand back and let you discover
who you would like to be.

Perhaps Not

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/perhaps-not/

Perhaps I saw you, the blur in the hallway
that lingered for just a few moments longer than necessary, and gave me that funny feeling that only you give me. Then again, perhaps not.

Hook

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/hook/

I am on the hook,
but I cannot live there.
A hook is no home.
I would like to go home.

Imagine

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/imagine/

I know you can imagine it.
Can you live it?

Fire

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/fire/

We are not playing with fire.
We are building a fire.

Rupture

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/rupture/

A rupture, somewhere.
A chasm has opened.

Stand Up For Yourself

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/stand-up-for-yourself/

You have been told to turn the other cheek,
but I say: stand up for yourself.
Don't let others hurt you. As a last resort, walk away. You will be more respected this way.

Holy Brew

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/holy-brew/

I see you now: the good girl who needs just a few drops of Vanda
to spice up a holy brew.

But her wildness is not for you.
Her destiny is loneliness
in spite of her moments of power.

Ruling Rod

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/ruling-rod/

You must carry the shadow
for the rest of your life, but you also must carry the ruling rod, and say no
to those things that deserve it.

Keep It Sharp

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/keep-it-sharp/

> My apologies. I have caused you undue vexation by speaking so incomprehensibly.
>
> Constance, Fire Emblem: Three Houses

No, I am still misunderstanding.
You have cast yourself as the thing that you fear you may be perceived to be,
as the shadow, in order to expunge the shadow,
to force me to choose which to see in you.
It was brilliant. Your blade remains sharp.
Keep it so. Keep it true.

Surgeon or Assassin

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/surgeon-or-assassin/

The tools of the surgeon resemble
the tools of the assassin or rogue.

The difference is trust.

The one cuts out tumors,
the other, the heart.

Blaze

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/blaze/

Not for the first time you have spoken exactly what I needed to hear. And I had no idea that I needed to hear it. Consider me amazed.
If you know me so well, I will trust you.
Our sparks are becoming a blaze.

But my criticism stands: we must learn to speak plainly, as man and woman,
not only as artists, through dreams.

Next to the Flame

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/next-to-the-flame/

Vanda is the Devourer, nemesis of every Oedipus,
the shadow of what love unchecked can become.
These passions have purposes, and not for no reason
do we restrain them with customs and rules.
Are we strong enough to stand naked next to the flame?
Only if we can make our own rules
and not fall back into the wildness whence we came.

Black Sheep

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/black-sheep/

Black Sheep leaves the herd,
climbs a mountain, stumbles, perseveres. The way is rocky,
treacherous, full of hope.

Sex

10 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/sex/

Sex is how we make family.
It deserves respect and gravitas.
But it can be messy and wild until a suitable partner appears.

The Burdens of Pregnancy

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-burdens-of-pregnancy/

I appreciate the burdens of pregnancy,
the toll on the body, the years of spent energy,
and I do not take it for granted that you will take on those burdens for me. It is not a prerequisite. But some part of me would be disappointed
if some part of you does not yearn to carry my child, because I yearn to put one in you. But this yearning is not the same thing as a plan or a goal, or (much less) a demand. It's just nature running its course, and we can decide (together) which parts of nature we wish to obey.
A family, after all, begins with two, and maybe it ends there.
I can still imagine joy and warmth and many of life's greatest blessings.
But having a child might be good for you. Many women say so.
I admire your honesty. It means I can trust you to tell me how you really feel. If your feelings are complicated, then we can wait for them to uncomplicate themselves. I would wait a long time for that. I want you. We can figure the rest out.

Resist Nature

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/resist-nature/

Monotheism clouds our judgments about nature,
suggesting that all powers of nature must be obeyed, derived as they must be from omnipotent and irresistible Being.
But nature is often trying to kill us, even though it flows through us too.
Whence comes this opposition? How could the One God be at odds with itself? More importantly, we resist nature whenever it tries to kill us. This much is common sense.
So are we resisting God? Or choosing between different gods?

Nature is full of contradictions.
By now we should not expect otherwise.
We may be forced to choose sides.
Rarely is there one right answer.

Falling

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/falling/

We are already falling.
It's time to assemble the airplane.

Real Strength

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/real-strength/

Do you see now? The girl who once misunderstood the lascivious glares of men, the cruel jokes and vulgar gestures, who did not know that these things were not done in sport
but grow out of the ugly, urgent need for ugly, urgent souls to make manifest their ugliness, exposing the darkness within. Has this girl been replaced by one who sees clearly herself and her place in a world full of wolves? This is no place for innocence. Oh, she would like to grow up…will it cost her herself? She would be a prized commodity in some circles, at least until her innocence dies. Is there another way?
Yes and no. The world is what it is, and mankind is too.
She would find in herself a response to the degradation, the ugliest sweetness, the darkest love. It would scare her, and thrill her, and ultimately leave her unsatisfied. But never again would she trust so willingly, never again give her heart without proper conditions.
What are those conditions? Respect, first and foremost, for darkness and its place in our lives. For the evils above are mere phony expressions of energies that animate all of us, powering human endeavors and making us want to live. To kill those energies would kill us too.
But the suitable objects for dreams of desire or domination are always within the context of social order, on which we depend.
Any creature that does not so depend can hardly deserve the name "human."
The darkness can neither be killed nor fully embraced, but it can be integrated into a dance between light and shadow, a chiaroscuro that gives men and women real strength.

Not only could you be made a slave, you could be made to like it, to see yourself suited and suitable to degradation only and nothing more. Something like this (though a pale imitation) occurs in many failed loves. It is vital, beyond vital, that you remain strong, that you love yourself,
that you care for your body and spirit, and simply refuse
any invitations to lower yourself below strength,
no matter the offer. It will not be easy, but that is why it is worth it. Thereby you prove that you cannot be beaten down, that the power within you is real and a force to be reckoned with.

But you also must offer only this same strength to others, and not use your strength to deprive them of theirs. The fight is to carve out a slice of the earth where your strength can shine against darkness within and without, and in this fight you may find some allies pursuing the same. But they will not allow you to lower them.
You will do better to let them be, because they will return the favor.
The wolves can be kept at bay, but only from this posture of strength.
No other posture has ever had any effect.

Not Rational

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/not-rational/

Any attempt to rationally manage a whole society is hubris verging on insanity.

Burn

11 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/burn/

I feel your anger burn. Do you know who deserves it?
I do not, but I will stand with you and feel it burn,
until you transform. I will tell you: well done, you have made it. If I can help you, reach out to me.

Sexual Awakening

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/sexual-awakening/

Is it a sexual awakening? It looks like one.
I will be careful not to rush in where angels fear to tread. You have enough strength to find your way. But where are you going?
Where does it end?

Teachers' Lounge

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/teachers-lounge/

I am a poor teacher to so often learn from my students.
So much so that I do believe we are both teachers, experts in different fields, discussing our discoveries in the teachers' lounge.

Let Your Body Explain

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/let-your-body-explain/

> A woman waits for me, she contains all, nothing is lacking,
> Yet all were lacking if sex were lacking, or if the moisture of the right man were lacking.
>
> Whitman, A Woman Waits For Me

You have a spiritualized sexuality. You, though a master of spirit, are unacquainted with the wilderness of bodies, including (perhaps) your own body.
You must get acquainted. I do not know how, but you know. Trust yourself.
Let your body explain.

Sweetheart Like You

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/sweetheart-like-you/

> What's a sweetheart like you doing in a dump like this?
> Bob Dylan, Sweetheart Like You

What are you doing?
Getting ready for love? Or finding yourself?
Or maybe these are the same thing…

A Moon of Surprising Size

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/a-moon-of-surprising-size/

So many things that I've wanted to share with you have come and gone, but there will be more.
I don't know what you are waiting for, but I trust that you know, that you'll know it when you feel it.
I must not wait in the sense of forgoing other opportunities,
but I find no other who moves me like you do.
I simply exist in a world which (I now know) contains you.
Let this sweetness linger. Consider it, as one considers a moon of surprising size, just above the horizon.

Eternal Winter

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/eternal-winter/

The frosts of our eternal winter begin to melt. There is a chance the sun could warm these aching limbs, and give the heat of life another go. One never knows.
The sky is blue, though, and at least the storm has passed. That's all I asked.

Vulnerable Narcissist

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/vulnerable-narcissist/

You do fit the pattern of a vulnerable narcissist, weepy fragility followed by bursts of revenge
when your needs are not met. You should know that I could not endure that for long.
Is this why you hesitate? Or is the hesitating part of the plan?

Even if this is so, this is not your destiny,
not for certain. It could be a phase of development needed for reasons you need not explain. I don't know who you are apart from your art. Maybe you don't either. I bow to your present condition,
the powers of nature that made you so,
and I know I can't change you, and yet you can change
if these powers keep up their work, and if you let them guide you to greener pastures.

What has been tangled can be untangled.
The web of darkness in the mind
can be brought to light, examined, understood.
But one must feel safe first, and that can prove difficult, a chicken-and-egg problem, the struggle of life itself. What more is there to say?
You have given me a gift either way.

And yet, I don't know, and would still like to know.
I confess that I find you marvelous, and that is uncommon for me. But am I just a source of narcissistic supply?
Hard to say. If not, why the delay?

I can think of a few reasons,
but I must suspend my judgment
until a more suitable time.

Stronger Still

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/stronger-still/

> I can write you poems, make a strong man lose his mind.
> Bob Dylan, High Water (For Charley Patton)

Lose his mind, indeed, then maybe find it again
and be stronger still.

Blaze II

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/blaze-ii/

I lack the words for how you make me feel.
It blazes.
I think it will blaze for the rest of my days.

Whitman

14 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/whitman/

For all his delusions of grandeur,
Whitman blasts a hole through the puritanical veil
and puts some meat on our bones.

More Than Power

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/more-than-power/

To hear my suit, and perhaps my life's work,
belittled as mere "humiliation" was painful indeed.
But perhaps I misheard you. If the play is not my work, but this drama we are writing together, then this dagger becomes half confession. I am open to this interpretation, but not the other, because the basis for our connection would be undermined
if you do not consider me serious. No suitor could bear that much mockery, not when it touches the suit itself.
Without respect, we have nothing, and no love could grow in such soil. But this other possibility intrigues me.
It is made possible by your question at the end which undermines your own undermining. Were you mocking yourself?
Are you so full of doubt that you doubt your own doubt? A funny question, but a serious one too. Is there more here than power, humiliation, degradation? Is sex ever more than these things?
I say yes, and I intend to prove it.
But you are learning. You sound in this moment like one who has sat at the wrong table, struggling to fit in.
You must give yourself room to make mistakes.
I will give you that room. Here it is.

At the Entrance

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/at-the-entrance/

Perhaps we have rubbed shoulders
at the entrance to the maze of sex,
but I was on my way out,
while you were on your way in.
I cannot dissuade you from entering.
To do so would be folly, and hypocrisy.
But I don't know if I belong there anymore.
Do not let my ramblings confuse or discourage you.
You must follow the course of your heart,
and I must follow mine.

No Ken At All

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/no-ken-at-all/

I go out under the moonlight again,
enticed by who knows what, to make sense of myself,
to put words in order, where they belong.
It has been a long night and is still not over,
but suns often rise. When I look to the skies,
my soul satisfies every demand, but my hand
has no hand clasped inside, leaving room for this paper and pen, but no ken, no, no ken at all…

Do What I Say

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/do-what-i-say/

I want you to do what I say, unless I'm wrong.
Then tell me I'm wrong.

Forgive My Sternness

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/forgive-my-sternness/

Forgive my sternness and many projections. I'm sure I have misunderstood.
By now you will know this is how I sort things out.
I will listen more closely, and filter my own feelings out.
I may have more of Thomas in me than I'd like to admit,
but I doubt that you meant to say so (although if you did, let me know).
With this trigger removed, I can see more clearly your reciprocation, though maybe you retract it now. I don't know why I took so personally what seems to me now a confession of desire, however clumsy. Perhaps this is all too real, too sudden, too good to be true. But I still want to see it through.

Let's take our time with it.
The future is open and waiting.

Inexperienced

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/inexperienced/

Maybe I am the inexperienced one.
You are woman, and I will allow you to show me what that means.

And yet I can dream, can't I, about what "woman" means? I would be a poor poet if I did not have such dreams.

An artist must sculpt with precision.
A lover lets blemishes be.

Strength II

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/strength-ii/

I want your strength.
I will give you my strength in return.

Master/Slave Dialectic

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/master-slave-dialectic/

Anyone whose strength depends on the degradation of another has no strength at all.

Velocity

16 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/velocity/

I see where you are, but I also detect your velocity, speed and direction. All living things are in motion, and I think I like where you are going.

Cruelty II

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/cruelty-ii/

On second thought, my thoughts turn away, toward healthier fields. Three times now you have devalued my suit in the midst of mixed signals. Three times may be enough to establish a pattern. I have told you I do not find you unworthy of love, but unbridled cruelty might change that, even if it wears a mask. It was never the cruelty that bound me to you. There was something else, something wonderful, and I still remember it, in fact
I still see it, but the picture is complicated now.
I wanted to wish away these slights
as the clumsy confusion of naivete, but maybe you know exactly what you're doing, and maybe this backhanded cruelty is a form of survival, or even of pleasure, in a world that won't let you be cruel outright.
Well, I see it at least, but the sight of it moves my heart out of orbit. There is no decision to be made, I fear the thing has accomplished itself.
I wish you safe passage, as I did from the start,
and I think you have much to accomplish in life and will accomplish it. I have no regrets.
The sight of you woke in me something that never will slumber again, the dream of an "us" that transcends the sum of its parts. I hold onto that dream, and I hope you will too.
But you are not my responsibility. I will keep writing, but you may do well to stop reading. It will likely be bittersweet at best. It has been a pleasure almost knowing you. Now, to rest.

Is it cruelty, or is it the perception of cruelty?
So much depends on the answer…or is it what I asked for,
quite literally? A love that is not "pure or chaste"?
I had not thought you could make that leap so suddenly or so completely. Please be careful. Make sure you understand, and build this new self slowly. Get the foundation right, and don't throw away the old one until you have something to take its place. But I hear you. You're willing to leap.

That means a great deal. But you leap, and then subvert.
That means something too.

Lonelier

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/lonelier/

Being with someone who doesn't understand me
would only make me lonelier.

Better to Know

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/better-to-know/

She stood her ground,
and I stood my ground,
and we realized we were standing on different ground.

Is this what they call irreconcilable differences?

It's a pity,
but it's better to know, isn't it?

Messy Heart

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/messy-heart/

You are not perfect,
but neither am I.
It's not all good,
but there is plenty of good.
I may still have a place for you in my messy heart.

Dance of Hope and Doubt

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/dance-of-hope-and-doubt/

The dance of hope and doubt breeds life. The funnel of time narrows to a point where decisions must be made. I will appear and see who she is. There is no other way.

Succubus

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/succubus/

So, you are a succubus, is that it? You're hardly the first.
But if so, you're not welcome here. Go back where you belong.

But no, you don't belong with the succubi either.
There's too much good in you.

New Future Begins

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/new-future-begins/

We must clear the floor, make room for the dance, and love with open hearts and open eyes. These meandering twists and turns are the ghosts of a past that is ending for both of us.
A new future begins.

The Darkest Possibilities

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-darkest-possibilities/

It is good to consider the darkest possibilities, to play devil's advocate, with a question as momentous as love. He who loves well lives well, and he who does not does not. Love can make or ruin a man, if allowed to run its course. But its course can be interrupted, and should be, when needed.

Wild Stallion

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/wild-stallion/

The wild stallion in my heart is chomping at the bit, but the charioteer has the reins. I am feeling a bit wild…
wild enough to do something drastic
and life-changing, like making love over and over.
But the charioteer says: there are greener pastures
over yonder. Take her there.

Innocence

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/innocence/

If your innocence blinds you,
then I will take part of it, but not all.
You will keep your sense of wonder.
You will still see stars and miracles.
But you will also see Man as he is.

Inside You, Dormant

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/inside-you-dormant/

> The way is not in the sky.
> The way is in the heart.
>
> Buddha, Dhammapada

The strength you seek
is inside you, dormant,
waiting for some alarm to wake it up. This is why you crave danger, and this is why only you can answer
the questions that life is asking you.

I am the alarm.
How will you answer?

The Hard Road In Between (Madonna/Whore)

21 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-hard-road-in-between-madonna-whore/

I cannot determine if she is sweet and mildly repressed (but full of dark fantasies)
or a succubus who likes to play naive.
It's a winning strategy, if the goal is total desolation (for her more than anyone else).

I suppose it would teach her father a lesson.
Maybe I should leave them to it.

Nonetheless, Cupid deserves my praise.
How can even a wicked girl summon strength?
She cannot, but a god can, through the channels of imagination. I'm stronger now, but I fear
she has only grown weaker.

Could she be a recovering succubus, who truly means it this time, but carries the old habits, the old desires? It's possible. Perhaps this fits the facts more than anything else…a Blanche DuBois
to my Mitch, but that story doesn't end well for her…

It begins to make sense, if she is not repressed,
but covert, hiding feelings and urges unfit for society.
To what extent do these feelings control her?
Perhaps a great deal. Does she know her way through a dimly lit room? Does she know it by heart?

It is none of my business, except in so far as it speaks to her character and capacity for healthy love. But I cannot decide a priori.
I must step into this possible den of vipers,
ensuring my routes of escape.

Of course the only possible truth is that she is both vamp and naif as the seasons permit.
Has some man locked her into a spiral between Madonna and Whore? She could choose to be neither, and walk the hard road in between.

Another possibility: does she perceive her own wickedness in excess of the genuine article? Are these small naughty gestures not a confession of truth, but of misperception of herself as necessarily wicked because sexual by nature?
I do not know what to call this if not repression.
If so, then I hope she can find a better way, and learn that sex is a beautiful thing, if done right.

What makes it "right" is a kind of respect for the animal in the other. But this begins with respect for the animal in oneself.

Closed Door

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/closed-door/

The door remains closed,
but it does have hinges and a knob.

May you find the strength to open it to someone, someday.

Thomas, Not Vanda

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/thomas-not-vanda/

You are not Vanda. You are Thomas.
Now it all clicks into place.
If the play is a theophany of Venus,
it signifies sexual awakening, but you are the one awakening, not the awakener.
It is more Freud than Adler, more sex than power
(but really I say Jung is the better guide).
You are not springing a trap, you are quite simply noting your own awakening. I could not explain why your Vanda appears repressed (which makes no sense)
unless you intend to invoke the play as a whole
as a symbol of awakening. It seems to me obvious now.
You are in your own good hands, but I have had a part to play.

But does that make me Vanda?! It is hard to keep straight, maybe that is the point.
Of course I have been awakening too, so just like in the play
we have both been both Thomas and Vanda. But who is at fault? I cannot accept the condemnation of Venus because I do not deserve it (and neither does she). Do you deserve it? Or might it be wholly undeserved?

Heloise

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/heloise/

Well, Heloise, I guess this is goodbye.
It has been a pleasure almost knowing you.
I think this encounter has served its purpose, or at least as much of that purpose as can be served right now.
You will be just fine, some day,
maybe sooner than you think.
Please take care of yourself until then.

Stable Hearth

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/stable-hearth/

Look to Vesta for warmth.
Her fires are steady,
in a stable hearth.

Body/Mind

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/body-mind/

The body is the foundation for spirit, and out of it all else grows. There is no fundamental antagonism, no mind/body distinction,
but a healthy collaboration.
Always mindbody combines in a swirling nomos/physis.
To exercise nomos means first and foremost to care for one's own physis and not wage wars against it.
In the realm of pure body, there is no mind at all,
no cosmic Mind shaping all. Every nomos is added by man, and therefore grows out of and depends on the body as much as controls it.
Ask not which comes first,
for both have existed forever in immortal tension,
eternal release, at least insofar as humanity is concerned.
But if I had to guess,
I'd say physis came first, for it serves as the telos and motivation for nomos.
There is no Mind without Body,
but there sure is Body without Mind.

Altar

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/altar/

If you cut out my heart,
built an altar around it
and worshipped it,
what would happen to me?

Respect

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/respect/

Thomas and Vanda do not respect each other.
We can do better than that.

Lovers' Bond

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/lovers-bond/

You and I are not gods,
but the bond between us is the work of the gods.
We worship them by tending it with care.

Repressed Lover

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/repressed-lover/

Repressed lover,
or actress playing the role of repressed lover?
It begs for an encore.

Any Longer

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/any-longer/

Most likely she doesn't know either.
Even if she thinks she has found some power,
manipulation is always a sign of weakness.
I don't know what she accomplished, or meant to accomplish,
to teach me that women are evil,
that sex is poison, that love is a mistake?
I will not believe it. Misery, they say, loves company, and if she believes these things
she is worthy of pity. I do not believe she is bound to darkness, though shadows abide in her…but she is not my problem
any longer.

Transformation

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/transformation/

Transformation is ensured, the work is done,
and time moves on to other muses…

Labyrinth

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/labyrinth/

This labyrinth cannot hold me, for it is made of the thinnest paper. Onward, to sea again!
Where adventure calls. The rush of the ocean air feels good after too long indoors.

Journey of the Self

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/journey-of-the-self/

The journey of the self, from small to medium to large, what a wonderful event!
The growth of a man or woman depends on external nourishment, not unlike a plant,
but more perilous. Plants are less prone to violence,
less likely to hurt those who help them.
But plants are less capable, worth less than a fully developed human. How does one grow up? It can only be trial and error.

Touched

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/touched/

I have found her interesting, and more, perhaps,
and I know not to force the heart to let go.
It will fade in time, and join the background noise of other failed loves, and the memories that one can never quite enjoy or despise.
We will live our lives as we always have.
I do hope I have touched her life
in return for the ways she's touched mine.

Bitterness

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/bitterness/

Bitterness is a poison pill, a snare that strong spirits avoid. It is best to succeed, but even failure can teach or summon the laughter that shakes the gods.
I would win, but, more importantly,
I would maintain my equilibrium.
So let me digest this discomfort right here,
in these pages, where much of the source of it lies.

Playing with Fire

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/playing-with-fire/

It really was childish to play with fire.
I hope it brings you all the happiness you deserve.

Worth a Try

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/worth-a-try/

It really was worth a try, you know, in the absence of complete information. I fear she is hideous under the skin. There are few other explanations remaining.
What a silly girl, to treat love like a toy, as if she might escape unscathed. I've no room for that, though she may grow out of it, let someone else find out.

Phony

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/phony/

Are all of her emotions phony?
Has she ever meant anything?

Girl Who Cried Love

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/girl-who-cried-love/

I have known the girl who cried love to a marvelously false tune. It is bonkers to believe she could be so heartless. Who hurt her?

Game Over

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/game-over/

And yet I do know she was trying to grow through error, and may have succeeded. But that game is over.
There is no more growth to be found here.

Fantasy

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/fantasy/

Fantasy serves its purpose, and then it ends. It is best not to dwell on what does not end well.

Dealbreaker

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/dealbreaker/

Vanda really is a dealbreaker for me.
After her, I just cannot believe that this blurring of lines between art and life has been anything other than a trick all along, a devious seduction.
Is that not what this play means? Save your tears for somebody else, unless you are willing to confront your behavior and deal with me as an adult.

If it has been a trick, and if I am the butt of the joke, you are pitiable,
to humiliate a serious suitor, and for what?
It cannot have made you happy. I do not deserve the punishment of Venus, but you do.
You certainly do.

New Beginning

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/new-beginning/

If we should meet again,
let it be a new beginning,
not this same old story.
We accomplished something here,
but there's no need to rehearse it.
For now, take good care of yourself.

Pain

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/pain/

How the pain swirls now…was it worth it?
And could I have avoided it? This burning desire transforms into ache, the knowledge of unfulfillment.
How I wanted her…it's a strange want.
I don't know what I wanted exactly. Did I want to be received? Cherished? Loved? Understood?
Perhaps all of the above. Did she fake it?
I see both the nightmare and the daydream,
as Taylor joked, but I mean no jest. I'm afraid of this power, its hold over me, but I doubt that this power is her. It's some stronger thing, pulling us both, us all, into a dance that we never can fully control. I must let these desires cool in their own time. I cannot control them. I only control my behavior.

Never One-Sided

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/never-one-sided/

I cannot believe that such passions are ever one-sided.
With Jung, I believe they are a product of relation, of interaction in some astral realm of consciousness. Whatever it means to be "close", so we were, and still are, to a painful degree.
I don't know that this closeness is welcome now. It was always discomforting, except for a brief shining moment of near total surrender.
From here, we can only climb up and out of the den of carnality.
The world is no different than it ever was, but we may have changed.
It was a worthy effort, not because of some high, some transaction between pain and pleasure, but because it brought broadened horizons and new possibilities. In short, we have grown, and that's more than nothing.

Final Diagnosis

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/final-diagnosis/

Narcissist, vulnerable type.
Pronounced god complex.
Highly manipulative.
Approach with caution.

Just Time

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/just-time/

It was just time for me to fall in love.
I appreciate the help.

You Have Helped Me

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/you-have-helped-me/

I'm not sure who used who. Dreaming of love is never a mistake for a poet. You have helped me.
Have I helped you?

Self-love

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/self-love/

Your self-love must be a heavy burden.
The more you read, the more you depend on my attention to puff you up. Are you well-puffed now?
Perhaps a bit too inflated?

I get to walk away,
but you are stuck with yourself
and likely to burst someday.

Parting Words

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/parting-words/

But I will not walk away until I have finished telling you all I see. Thanks for lending an ear.
It is a privilege to speak to one such as yourself,
so attentive and eager to please. But did you not pick up on my irony? Were you too busy gorging on praise? It was poisoned, my love, all along,
and now you have digested so much of it
I fear for your health more than mine.

It seems we were playing the same game or at most half-playing, if you read between the lines. You were never more than a dream, the incarnation of a misreading
of my words, or an actual dream in my mind.
But that dream lives on and prospers
no matter your fate.

You have stared into the abyss, and now
the abyss is at home in you, slowly growing, dissolving your organs, devouring what remains of a heart which I still maintain is not wholly bad,
but more bad than good by the looks of things.

Did you think I would never notice, or that it would come as a surprise that some women play games?
You have left enough clues to prove that you are such a woman, and I had a hunch from the first. But I asked for a ride nonetheless, and I mostly enjoyed it. It's a pity,
I really might have loved you, had the terms been better.

Epilogue

25 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/epilogue/

Let us immortalize you here
as a common harlot, false
in pursuit of vanity.

New Clarity

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/new-clarity/

New clarity after the expulsion of demons.
The attraction was real, but she and I are in different phases of life, and would want different things from love. She was very serious, but playing the game of self-discovery, not the game of building a home.
It remains a bit tragic, but at least not evil.
It should have been clear (and in fact it was clear) that this would be the case, but the pull was too strong to resist. What follows? Could there be a second act years hence, when she's ready to settle down?

It's not impossible,
but I must direct my energies elsewhere,
toward my own life. I feel ready to do so.
I am stronger now. That's something.

Seed of Love

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/seed-of-love/

The seed takes root and germinates.
It spreads its tendrils throughout my heart,
and every day grips tighter. Every doubt is a cutting, from which new shoots grow.

Shadows

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/shadows/

Here is a place to wrestle with shadows.
I fight them until they relent.
You who are watching, remember:
I will arrive at the truth in the end.

House of the Dead III

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/house-of-the-dead-iii/

Can I really descend once more into the house of the dead?
Can I really become a ghost again, and traipse my way among corpses, forever adrift from the dying sun? Isis came,
and I should not have doubted, but why did she come?
Did she love, or did she merely want me to love?
To what purpose? To satisfy vanity, or maybe to trigger growth, but the latter so closely resembles love that I can't tell the difference. She put so much into it, then stopped at a certain point, and plateaued.
This is no longer reciprocity, no longer evenly efforted.
Was it a trick? Was it not Isis at all, but some god of deception, insulting me all the way? I have been mocked back into living form, that's true enough, and this prophecy from years ago has come to pass. Although it did not last, it held my face to a glass in which I see myself reflected as a man who can do better, who deserves better, than phony love, the art of loose and playful women. Sure, she knows how to read, and that is rare enough, but if the heart is not tied to this skill, then I will walk free, I will not bend the knee to a harlot who truly deserves no such love. To have glimpsed her is enough, even if a mirage from the sands of Egypt, even if she meant harm.
She has caused me grief but not so much grief that I am not stronger for it.
I doubt that she will ever reveal her hand, nor can I decipher her intentions from a morass of clues. So it's time to move on.
But I will not return to the house of the dead. I will live, in the sun, for the rest of my days.

The Rebuke of Venus

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/the-rebuke-of-venus/

Which of us deserved the rebuke of Venus?
I insist that my love was good.
But I will not insist where that love is not valued,
or where I am not respected.

Lover and Guide

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/lover-and-guide/

Perhaps I see now the folly in trying to be both lover and guide…my own feelings
get in the way of allowing you to explore yours…
or maybe induce confusion, as if these feelings and that exploration were part of the love instead of preparation for it.
In truth, they are preparation, and therefore a private affair.
But that does not mean that I did not care.
I would see you blossom, whether for me or some other…but perhaps you do not like being put in a box as a broken thing,
a thing needing repair…I see what I see, and you came to me
when you found my poetry, consuming it apparently voraciously. What kept you coming back?
I do not mean to mock you, I simply mean that if my words are worth reading, there must be some truth in what I say.

A New Day

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/a-new-day/

I am glad that you have awoken.
It could never have been painless.
Somehow I can feel a change in the air.
There was something strange about the morning of the day that I saw you. Was it perhaps a new day in more ways than one?

Transference

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/transference/

Has the transference succeeded? Telling me off in the way you could never tell someone else off…
you embark now into yourself, in a sense for the first time, as a you-and-no-other,
the one who was always inside you but had not the strength to come out.

Friend in Need

27 February 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/02/friend-in-need/

You know we never really gave love a try.
This has all been preparation.
But nothing has happened to preclude the possibility of trying someday, just as nothing ensures that we will try.
But I will walk beside you like this for as long as you need me to.
I once needed the same kind of help,
and I will not turn a blind eye to a friend in need.

Unyielding Peace

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/unyielding-peace/

Unyielding peace, after storms,
a welcome feeling, the feeling of surrender, the surrender of knowing,
the peace of one who knows.

Initiation

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/initiation/

> I might as yet have been a spreading flower
> Fresh to myself, if I had self applied
> Love to myself, and to no love beside.
>
> Shakespeare, A Lover's Complaint 75-77

The initiation is over, and now
you can choose
who to love, and when, and how.

Youthful Infatuation

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/youthful-infatuation/

Was this a youthful infatuation all along?
And for how long? It occurs to me that our paths may have crossed in the digital realm, that I may have drawn you here unknowingly, that maybe our "first"
encounter was really, in part, devised, by you, to fulfill an ongoing fantasy. How much of you was real? How much a reflection of me?

I went to her

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/i-went-to-her/

And obstacles proved stronger.
It was as I feared.
But there was no avoiding love.
Desire, once born, must find its way out,
even if it then sputters in the wind.

Something Serious

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/something-serious/

If you want something serious,
you know how to reach me.
If not, don't bother.
I cannot want you this badly
and never see you.
It's simply unhealthy.

Hollow Moon Rises

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/hollow-moon-rises/

The hollow moon rises, reclaims its place
in the pantheon…it is my duty to walk solitary, alone with this tangle of thoughts, and I say: so be it. The memories of love give some comfort, but they were little more than dreams all along. I will not be hampered by unfinished yearnings or bow to the howling of wolves.
This is earth. Is some part of me unfulfilled?
Of course. But at least I am not in chains.

The Lady Will Not Slumber

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/the-lady-will-not-slumber/

But the Lady will not slumber.
She has awoken, and I can see,
for the first time, the path to harmony,
song and fire blending across the spheres
and into a home worthy of memory, worthy of all who have come before and all who will come,
for it is they whom the Lady signifies,
the primordial ooze of the brain.
She will not go away, but she is no tyrant any longer. Her laws are friendly, and I will serve this image with reverence and awe, entrusting its power to those with ears to hear.
I know who she is, and I will not expect any incarnation to match exactly, but I will let her sing to me about things to come,
and I will translate her song in these pages.
I will not waver. She reminds me what life is, what humans are,
and she no longer demands a blood-price.
She knows a better way.

Sophia Again

02 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/sophia-again/

Sophia, long have I searched in vain
for your hollow song, your dying fall, your wisdom
echoing through life and not in the mind alone.
But I will not give up. I cannot give up, for your song is true, and I sing this to you in constant resonation.
There are green fields somewhere, at least in the mind,
and if in the mind, then at least in potentia vivified
in splendors of sense. There are ways to you, this much is true, and I'll find them, for I will not rest until I do.

Paper Tower II

03 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/paper-tower-ii/

They left the tower and started the long, winding road
over hills and dales and through many a village.
She asked what he thought of each building,
all curious structures to her, and he answered with clarity (as much as each subject allows) that they all were constructed by men, and thus always are flawed with the flaws of all men.
But these flaws do not make them unhelpful.
In fact, they keep Nature out, our eternal friend and foe, who incites us to woe
just as much as she powers our lives.
She asked then what the torch was for,
and he said, to contain the flame,
to give shape to it, making it useful,
and not destructive. She asked what to call it.
He answered: civilization.

Worth Fighting For

03 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/worth-fighting-for/

I see darkness in her, and it saddens me
that she thinks she must bear it alone,
that she thinks there are none who would understand.
She craves dominance. She can be labile, histrionic, cold-hearted. But somewhere in her is strength, and she knows it, she hasn't given up just yet. Her psychopathy may be the passing of youth, a transition through pain into strength…and I wish her bold courage as she fights for herself. She is worth fighting for.

How we grow sane

05 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/05/how-we-grow-sane/

This is the process, these oscillations,
this hurly-burly is how we grow sane.
There is no shorter path, and none easier
if the destination is truly intended.

Turbulence

05 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/05/turbulence/

Now I will try again, to my own surprise,
but expecting turbulence, even demanding it as the best method for sorting things out.

Strange Predicament

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/strange-predicament/

What a strange predicament.
I have my heart set on her, and hers is set on not answering clearly…like a game of chicken, who will surrender first?

For So Long I've Dreamed

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/for-so-long-ive-dreamed/

Time passes, day turns into day,
the weather changes…one thing
stays the same…my heart,
though not in chains, is steadfast,
holding to the reins that drive my soul (and possibly now another's)
towards those greener fields, the ones that for so long I've dreamed.

Gaseous At Last

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/gaseous-at-last/

I will seek answers
in my heart, whence troubles come and where they dissolve
into sudden vapor, gaseous at last,
unable to hold me down.

If I Could

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/if-i-could/

If I could soothe your pain with words of love, I would speak until out of breath. If I could sing to make you smile, if I could hold you for a while, if I could answer all your questions, I would know that I lived well.

Full Gravity

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/full-gravity/

But love is a complex maneuver, requiring skill and practice, not to be taken lightly, and yet it must be taken on if one is to acquire the skill.
I know my will. I would love the one
I have found by chance, but not in some soggy romance
divined from pop art, the mass delusions of common people.
I would love with full gravity, ready to wage
the full love of the earth, as grown man and grown woman,
both up to the task and accepting its burdens,
not cowering in the corner of dreams. Dreams do get us there, but they are the car, not the destination.
They carry us forward into ourselves.

First Dance

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/first-dance/

When you're ready,
I'd like the first dance.
Don't forget.

Raphael's Madonna

07 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/07/raphaels-madonna/

I paint her in colors worthy of Raphael's Madonna.
She answers: you forgot all my blemishes.

When God Dies

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/when-god-dies/

> To assert that God is absolute amounts to placing him outside all connection with mankind. Man cannot affect him, or he man. Such a God would be of no consequence at all. We can in fairness only speak of a God who is relative to man, as man is to God. The Christian idea of God as a "Father in Heaven" puts God's relativity in exquisite form. Quite apart from the fact that a man can know even less about God than an ant can know of the contents of the British Museum, this urge to regard God as "absolute" derives solely from the fear that God might become "psychological." This would naturally be dangerous. An absolute God, on the other hand, does not concern us in the least, whereas a "psychological" God would be real. This kind of God could reach man. The Church seems to be a magical instrument for protecting man against this eventuality, since it is written: "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."
>
> Jung, The Relations Between the Ego and the Unconscious

When God dies, he leaves a hole
that can only be filled by us,
but we are, in fact, mysterious,
bound by earth and sky,
the inner and outer necessities
that make life what it is.

Your Future

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/your-future/

I have told you all that you needed to hear.
I have passed on my wisdom.
There is no telling what your future holds,
unless you have something to say about it.

Floating Castle

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/floating-castle/

I will build this castle of words.
I will dwell there, and even floating in air, I will have a home.

Send in the Cavalry

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/send-in-the-cavalry/

We're still working on the abolition of war.
In the meantime, send in the cavalry.
Democracy is dying again.

Legion of Incubi

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/legion-of-incubi/

> The woman's incubus consists of a host of masculine demons; the man's succubus is a vampire.
>
> Jung, The Relations Between the Ego and the Unconscious

I see that you have fended off a legion of incubi.
Can you see me clearly now?
There is a way to light.
You are on it. Stay true. Don't give up.

Half Mad, Half Civilized

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/half-mad-half-civilized/

The spinning point at the center
of a world half mad, half civilized,
but never more than half on either side.
We are this tension forever. Release is only temporary, though healthful.

Uncomfortable Peace

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/uncomfortable-peace/

Institutions always seek new members,
whether it's good for those members or not,
like amoebae consuming their neighbors.
They awe with impressive conformity to rules,
while all around them humans suffer
in spite of (and often because of) those rules.
There's no stopping it. But I for one say no sometimes, when I know better than the proselytizing adherents, which happens quite often. But as long as they let me say no, we'll have peace,
but uncomfortable peace, the peace of a truce,
which rests on a razor's edge.

The Game of Life

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/the-game-of-life/

Manhood is no myth, not some fabled caricature of what men (or women!) dream. It has really been achieved, more than once, although it is painfully rare. Can we really do better than fate, the lotteries of genes and circumstance, to dish out the stuff of heroes? For every man has a bit of the hero, a bit of the rascal and rogue.
Most are followers. This will forever be so. But a few become paragons, going their own way, just because they know better, somehow. Even they can't explain.
Without them we are really in trouble, in chains in one cave or another, attempting to win at some made-up game, instead of playing the game of life itself,
the only one worthy of our attention, the only thing that can satisfy human beings. A hero is called to this game with unbreakable energy, and will see it through at almost any cost. The others will follow. It's what they know.

At the Matinée

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/at-the-matinee/

I saw you peek out, just before the most potent scene. Were you looking for me?
Or in my direction? Of course I was there,
and of course I could see you, but more than seeing,
I could feel a burn which it's hard to believe was just me.
You conceal it well, though I think I can tell.
You were wise to wear blue. That's a hearty clue that my symbols mean something to you.

Peeking Eyes

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/peeking-eyes/

Something about those peeking eyes stays with me, not in a haunting way, in a friendly way. What did they seek?
Do I have it? I think I might.
I would like to see more of them,
looking to me for answers or hope,
rooted in self-understanding.

Woman Now

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/woman-now/

Are you a woman now? I don't know if I ought to hope, but I'm certainly curious.
Something was different. You have come a long way.

But some things have not changed at all,
and perhaps will not change for a long time.
I would like to know you. What do you fear?

But your fear has diminished. You name your desires now without hesitation. You show them with courage, although they involve much sorrow.

But showing is not quite action.
I doubt that more showing will convince me of anything.
I know you are very aware. What can you do?

Calypso Returns

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/calypso-returns/

Calypso returns to my mind out of nowhere.
It was she who taught me about desire,
how no laws can really contain it, and she who taught me to fear desire. I do not think she was right. I think she was desperate, though strong and noble in her own way. I'm convinced that twice she propositioned me, though I feigned ignorance, knowing that circumstances forbid it. And yet I returned,
and returned again, to see her, and for what purpose?
To sort myself out? Assuredly not out of love, but perhaps from an untamed desire that needed to find expression before it could be understood. I do hope she's well, but that is not the same as love. I can say that now.
It may be she was sorting herself out too.
There were energies exchanged that I cannot exactly explain.
I will take those memories with me to my grave.

Some Penelope Awaits

10 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/10/some-penelope-awaits/

I will set sail for Ithaca, as ever,
entrusting that some Penelope awaits there,
knowing my course and my purpose,
no longer distracted by sirensong.

Better Care

11 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/11/better-care/

Have I spoken too harshly? I must be true to my own development (that is what these pages are for).
But the muse from whom I departed, the vulnerable narcissist, puffed up with self-love, is a shadow, and not the full picture.
She knows there is more to her than that. And yet,
this shadow demanded rebuke, and she had not the strength to rebuke it herself. I do hope that I sliced with precision, but this was a mere demonstration. The rest of the operation is in her hands, and they are such good hands that I hope against hope for success.

Can I really claim to have been in control?
Yes and no. It was not the control of a scientist working with sterilized test tubes and frictionless inclined planes, or that of a sage, high up on a mountain, unaffected,
but rather the command of a seaworthy captain, who has seen enough storms to ride through one without losing the ship. I digested her chaos, simply to prove it possible, that storms
can be weathered, that they need not always destroy.
She deserves to be happy, if only she can find the strength that is lacking, perhaps through better care of her body, perhaps through better care of her soul.

But I did destroy, didn't I? Only the shadow, I hope, not the ego, unless the ego was so tightly bound to shadow that it had to be sacrificed. Still, every ego is phoenix, and it may revive in a new formulation, a healthier one,
one that sees that her shadow is one among many, and not the whole story. Her story remains unwritten.

Only Shadow

11 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/11/only-shadow/

Perhaps I now make excuses
for my own lapse into shadow.
I do not deny the darkness.
I never have.
But must one fight shadow with shadow?
Not in all cases.
Only when shadow is repressed.
Then it must be coaxed out before it can be handled,
managed, and governed.
And only shadow can coax out shadow.

A Woman You Admire

11 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/11/a-woman-you-admire/

There is still some libido in the tank,
I will not deny it, though I will deny her
the right to it, unless she reforms, until she is strong enough to love
by light of day.

I really had hoped that the matinée might be the resolution, the moment desire burst forth into the sun. It was not,
but there were just enough hints to keep me hanging on. Do you see what you're doing?
Do you know it's unhealthy? I stand by my outburst, and I stand by my decision to walk away, head held high. You have so much in you that is worthy of praise that it pains me
to see you debase yourself with insincerity, casual leading-on with apparently no intention of following through. Is this just a game to you?
How little you know of the world and your place in it!
I cannot make you understand, but I sense that some part of you knows, even laughs
at your own maneuverings, whatever their purpose.
Their only valid purpose is growth, or healing,
or healing leading to growth. You can do better.
I know you can, because I can, though there was a time when I couldn't. I wish you well, forever.
You have a chance to be strong, and I hope you will take it. I hope you will grow into the woman I imagined you could be, or at least
a woman you admire.

All Else Could Be Forgiven

11 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/11/all-else-could-be-forgiven/

I can paint you with light or shadow,
but always a sketch from distorted memory,
a hazardous road and one filled with peril.
My fears begin to seem foolish,
but so does my love, beginning so soon and with no foundation. I did not choose it, but that does not make it less foolish.
Whence came these demons of Vanda?
I have known enough Vandas to fear her.
Of course you chose to play her,
but you do not feel like her, on the whole,
unless I distort what I know of you.
I can do that quite well. I'd like you to know, that if I was right the first time, I'm sorry I could not hold true. Vanda scared me. Perhaps love scares me. Perhaps you scare me, and the feelings you awaken.
I needed time to subdue this fear. Thank you for helping me subdue it. My only complaint is your silence, which I cannot understand.
You may just be coy, but this coy?
Too coy to reply? Even just to say
"Thanks for the offer"? It feels like an insult, and if it was one, then all of my criticism stands.
But if you explain this one thing, I think
all else could be forgiven.

I have entered the bargaining phase of grief.
Let us see what will come of it.

Needed Alarm

12 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/12/needed-alarm/

Our love became toxic
because it never strayed from the realm of fantasy, mutual projection, and infantile trust.
This is not my fault. Had we met and conversed as I asked, we would have discovered each other in toto, as real human beings, and maybe our love could have found its way to ground and grown roots in more permanent soil.

But could you not handle this?
Did you need fantasy to break the ice around your heart? I now fear that I may have projected
my need for awakening onto you…on the other hand,
maybe I merely recognize the signs.
After all, it was I who was willing to meet.

I am sorry to shock you, but I think you were too quick to trust, and too slow
to endeavor to build trust, as if it were automatic.
The shock was the needed alarm.
Words come easy to me, but they are not all true, and your truth matters too.
You have needs, but I have needs too.

Care For Yourself

12 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/12/care-for-yourself/

You must care for yourself as a primary injunction,
because otherwise your needs become someone else's problem.
It's prosocial to care for yourself, to take care of yourself,
because otherwise someone else has to.

Already Thinking of Love

12 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/12/already-thinking-of-love/

How did I know already last March to expect renovation? Was I already thinking of love?
Were you already thinking of me? Or did Love have us both in mind?

Paper Tower III

12 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/12/paper-tower-iii/

They continued past the village,
and into a wild garden.
She said, "There are no buildings here.
You should find me some flowers."
Suddenly his palms were sweaty.
He nearly dropped the torch.
She said, "We will lie down here,
but you must be ready to die."
He said, "I will not die.
I will live for you."

She caught fire.
He began to build a hearth.

But she would not help him build it.
She stood enamored by her burning reflection in a pool of water. He pushed her in,
out of anger but also for her own good.
Her fire went out. She rose, soggy.
They stared at each other, saddened, not sure what had happened. They stared for a long time.

But he kept the torch burning, and touched her with it to light her again, more softly, a controlled burn.
She did not like it at first, but it grew on her,
keeping her warm, even where the first fire had scarred.
They worked on the hearth together. It took a long time, but this new fire was finally admirable. It made a good home.

Bitter Taste

12 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/12/bitter-taste/

Are you too young? I don't know, I don't know…
You are in the tail end of adolescence, that much seems clear, but you will not be there forever. I can tell you that each passing year will mean less than before.
A gap of years will feel smaller as time goes by.
But it may be too soon for you to be serious about love. I suppose that I dreamed I might jolt you into readiness, against my better judgment, which knew from the first where things stand. But I did not expect such desire, so soon. It caught me off guard, and now
I face my own unreadiness too, unready to carry the burdens of desire, for the most part on my own, while your hands are still forming. And yet you are liminal, sometimes adult, sometimes not, so perhaps I was able to wish away
the childish moments as so much chaff. You are surely on your way to rare womanhood, and that makes me hesitate. How can I walk away, let some other man step in, when I've found what I want? But how can I wait for uncertain results?

I suppose I can wait and have waited (despite many wrestles with demons) because something in me just knows, or thinks it knows, that it's worth a chance. You have something I want, and sure, we can brutalize ourselves and say it's just sex, but that's not quite right, is it? You are not the only female, of course, and if all I wanted were sex I could probably find it with less trouble. Sex is the most potent form of influence, and I think what I really want is your influence and to give mine in return. I'm convinced you could make me better, and I you, at least once you are strong enough to endure this exchange of energies. It is not necessarily wicked, but it is a strong drink, one not to be ventured by one who's not up to it. If you feel up to it,
then you may try, not before.

I don't know where that leaves us. From the first
I have hoped that if you (or I) were not ready, at least this experience would help us both grow. I think maybe it has. If I speak for myself, then it certainly has. But it has a bitter taste now, like something best left alone. So I'll leave it alone, to the best of my ability, and let us digest it each on our own. I am sorry for any pain I've caused,

but you may in the end prove stronger for it.
This was my hope, and this is my hope still.

Parting Words Reconsidered

13 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/13/parting-words-reconsidered/

You were stuck playing the role of the Anima Woman, of giving male psychology whatever performance it wants. I admit this is somewhat attractive, even now, not because it's convincing, but because it requires a great deal of skill and insight, which could be put to good use in real love. You were trapped in the archetype, playing a hollow role in real life, which was surely exhausting.
This will not work on grown men, and it will not make you happy, even if it does work on boys. You have doubtless offered this gift, the gift of the hook, many times before, and seen some grow wiser, while showering you with praise. But I never believed you.
You put yourself on a pedestal, literally, camera down below, boot raised to quash any dissent. I saw clearly the scared little girl with a well-constructed, elaborate mask, who must be terribly lonely.
I wanted to love her.
The truth is I once was an Animus Man. I did to girls the same thing that you are doing now to boys, and tried to do to me.
I know that it's empty, and I know the rules.
In a weird way that makes us compatible, but you would or could not step down into real life. I wanted to date you, not adulate you, and that was the truth from the start.
Your purpose is not to be what I want (or what any man wants) in exchange for applause, but to be what you are.
Are you merely a series of masks? I will not believe it.

Of course it was not all poison, but all along
there was poison, a love of power and preference for control over intimacy. That is why you required bursting. But there were hints also of something milder, a girl who would like to grow close to another if only she could learn how. I am willing to believe this girl, but you know I must consider the possibility that she is just part of the act.
It would be quite an intricate act,
so much so that it's likely a product of my own imagination. A girl who could fake that, such vulnerability, would probably be beyond help. Only you know your truth. Are you breaking through into the light, or so dark that you'd lie about something as sacred as your own development?

The test is quite simple:
drop the act.
Appear in person as a real human being.
But there is no timetable.
Even a genuine girl would need time
to decide who she really is.

You do not have to give up your insight, of which you apparently have a great deal, but it is not enough to be alluring, is it, to chase a captive audience?
No audience can truly love you, share your burdens, dry your tears, or make you strong. In fact they will drain your energy.
You have a gift for performing, but this is no substitute for living.
You need a home, and no one will just give you one.
You must work to build one, and that work starts with you, with building the kind of soul that can build a home. I would like to think that this work has begun. I have done this work myself. I leave a record of it here in these pages.
I remain curious what will become of you, but the task is yours. Show us what you're made of. You know yourself better than any other can.

Participation Mystique

13 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/13/participation-mystique/

How many times must I tread and retread
the soils of a foreign soul? We are caught in participation mystique, the strange interweaving of souls that just happens sometimes. I cannot believe she devised it, nor did I. But here we are.

On the Meaning of Blue at the Matinée

13 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/13/on-the-meaning-of-blue-at-the-matinee/

The possessing goddess has self-immolated.
Only the girl remains.

Strange That I Do Not Regret

13 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/13/strange-that-i-do-not-regret/

Have I failed, perhaps in the worst possible way, growing angry right when love was needed?
I proceeded by instinct, and maybe it led me astray.
I can claim it was needed on my side, to sort out my own growing pain, but it may have been harmful to you.
Desire is a cruel master, and one I have often shunned,
but in this case I let it consume me, and run itself
all the way through me to ground. But I do not regret it.
It's strange that I do not regret it.

Grains of Salt

15 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/15/grains-of-salt/

Feel free to ignore my song, as it passes through these dissonant bars. It will sort itself out.
This pain must be digested here, but I do not claim infallibility. This is not the place to build trust or to speak only positive words. This is where the dark words can take shape and do battle against truth. But truth always wins in the long run.

Take These To Heart

15 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/15/take-these-to-heart/

Some of my words are true.
Take these to heart.
And learn the difference.

Truce

15 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/15/truce/

Was Vanda a test? Did you want me to bare my teeth, to prove that I won't take abuse, that I'm stronger than you and can therefore protect you? This would prove Masoch's original true.
The currents of the unconscious may indeed move somewhat like this.
You are not the first woman to test me so. But I don't know.
I still wonder how such a beginning could be overcome
when it comes time for trust and real love. It's a shaky start.
Will you test me again, and continue testing me, all the way through?
At what point do I pass? It would be exhausting to endure eternal testing, to the point of nullifying any benefits of love.
We would need to discuss this. I would of course hope to prove my strength, but also to be loved through moments of weakness.
I'd offer the same in return.

Or have I already failed to offer the same in return?
I think not. I was open to meeting, discussing, but you were not.
I would like you to see how you might improve. We are handling fire (I have said this before), and these feelings will hurt us unless they are handled with care. They may hurt us anyway, but at least we might try to contain the blaze, to give them shape, to let them grow with as much ease as nature allows. I can see it.
I'd like to use strength to build love for both of us,
not to fight. So I will stop fighting. I call a truce.

But time has run out. The show is over, and if you don't step off the stage and into the body of a real girl, or, better, the body of a real woman, ready to meet life's demands, then I can do no more for you. I am done watching. I've seen all I needed to see. I would try to love you.
But only if you try too.

The only thing left

15 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/15/the-only-thing-left/

We have passed through limerence and intoxication. The only thing left is reality.

L'amour n'est pas

16 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/16/lamour-nest-pas/

Thank you for trusting me.
I hope I have led you well
through the dark woods of passion.
I hope you can find your way now.
I will never forget you.
L'amour n'est pas un long fleuve tranquille.
But it is the rapids that allow us to heal.

Earnest Contemplation

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/earnest-contemplation/

In earnest contemplation, now I sit atop the mountain, filled with peace and strength. I bear my burden. Others will bear theirs with more or less skill,
but I know I dream well.

Poor Man's Lover

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/poor-mans-lover/

A psychologist is a poor man's lover, doing the work lovers always have done
at a fraction of the cost.

The Mad Goddess

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/the-mad-goddess/

He was not sure anymore that he understood anything.
He wandered night and day asking always one question:
was she a mirage? This one that had shown him the way,
that had lit the path to a deeper knowledge of himself,
this one that for once had seemed plausible as a lover
had drawn a knife to wound him, and there could be no explaining away the wound as clumsy or careless. She served it with too much skill. But might the wound have a purpose, to shatter illusions? Was this wound a gift?
And had he been slow to receive it? It told him that he must let love be itself, that he must not dictate
the terms of female experience or dare to interpret a world in which he can only babble. He must put down his pen before he can open his heart, and the part of him that loves women will not be silenced, no matter what women turn out to be.
But how could he keep for himself those other parts,
the ones that have nothing to do with women, alive and functioning, if living in fear of another thrust of the knife? He would keep one foot grounded in each world, but how to escape the pull of the gravity of the earth? His anima rose from the soil, possessing him, but he blamed another, who did play a role in the summoning. But this was his story. How could he silence the mad goddess, without destroying her or doing violence to the power she represents?

Wayfarer

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/wayfarer/

I am a wayfarer, lost somewhere between heaven and earth, with my own compass, accepting no other guide. It is funny how few are allowed to be free. But for you and me, dear reader, whoever and whenever you are,
there is no other way. The stars won't obey
our commands or make plain what we know by heart:
that we are where we start, and all else grows from here.

From Place to Place

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/from-place-to-place/

If I drift from one vagueness to the next, will I find firm ground? Or am I the ground, that is carried from place to place?

Warm Light

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/warm-light/

The sun burns, shines its light between spaces
long left in the dark, and heats up the cold stones of the heart. I will warm in its light, feel its heat, let it liven
the sleepy parts of me. And then I will be free.

Paper Tower IV

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/paper-tower-iv/

The hearth half-finished lies in a broken field.
She is nowhere to be found. His heart remembers but believes she was only a dream, a proxy for him, a vision.
The torch still burns, but the fire is inside him now,
and it will not go out.

Theseus Says Goodbye

23 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/23/theseus-says-goodbye/

Ariadne, it seems that you deserve your namesake.
Bride of Dionysus you are and must remain.
I bow to your destiny. I will believe that you helped me on purpose, in spite of the pain. It's better that way.

Now I must confess Dionysus divine.
But I serve gods who are more kind.

Think of me when you visit Athens.

The Mad Goddess II

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/the-mad-goddess-ii/

The mad goddess no longer speaks,
though she sits in the corner, brooding
with daggers in her eyes.

She will tolerate no further transgressions.

She has joined the pantheon, taking her place in the seat of Dionysus.

Inventory

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/inventory/

Do not get lost
in this inventory of archetypes.
They are mere signs of life.

Still Point of Wholeness

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/still-point-of-wholeness/

One year closer to the sweet release of death,
another day of mixed sun and cloud, the cool waters
of time flowing ever before us and into eternity…
What is the point of the struggle for power?
All lose who do not find their own center,
the still point of wholeness upon which the world turns.

Anima

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/anima/

Sophia, the Lady, even "She" and "You" are all Anima from different points of view.
She arrives here in her final form,
the intuitive inner feminine,
mystical bride, and guide
to the world of feeling.

Look Inward

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/look-inward/

Do not reach out.
Look inward.
That is where you are.

Cities Are Natural

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/cities-are-natural/

Do I want excitement?
Or do I simply want to test my mettle against forces of nature, to see whether civilization stands or falls when opposed by raw energy? I dare to propose that cities are as natural as beehives, anthills, and the like. We cannot help making them.

Waiting to Heal

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/waiting-to-heal/

I return to this space again penitent,
ready to accept my share of the blame
in love gone wrong, before God and all witnesses, waiting to heal. I have paid the price.

Whoever You Are

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/whoever-you-are/

If some other tomorrow follows
after awakening, if there are flowers growing in fallow fields, if spring does come,
snow melts, and the sun shines out anew,
I will respond to you, the one who comes,
whoever you are.

Uncertain Certainties

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/uncertain-certainties/

The end is a new beginning, like always and whatever comes will be new, but familiar,
an echo with small modulations, the same old song with new harmonies, counterpoint answering theme with the age-old questions, the uncertain certainties, raining from heaven or bubbling up from the earth.

Anima Dialogues

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/anima-dialogues/

My anima was shy at first, unsure that the world could be trusted, but I have encouraged her. Now she stands taller and shows me the way to myself.

A Man at Last

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/a-man-at-last/

A dark night of the soul, with piercing visions, haunts my memory. I saw things I will not say.
But in the light of day, I find myself
a man at last, a man with things to say.

The Simple Self

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/the-simple-self/

The council of inner natures
guides me through tension and opposition.
The simple self is no more.

Where Daylight Touches Earth

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/where-daylight-touches-earth/

There's a shorter path to tomorrow, one that cuts through this and that, pulling powers
of observation out of hiding and back into view.
I want this for me and for you.
I will do my part. I will start and end at horizons, where daylight touches earth.

For What Purpose

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/for-what-purpose/

Once again wishing to burn the whole thing down,
life and its accoutrements, vanity after vanity until final rest. For what purpose? Just to prolong the struggle? Some days I just cannot find reasons.

Dig For Some Hope

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/dig-for-some-hope/

He had finally arrived at the still point, the center of himself and all human life. It was a jarring revelation.
He had spent his life half asleep, in a dream of his own making. Now he wished to create,
not to channel despair, but to dig for some hope,
for what little hope still remained buried in other souls half asleep. Some would answer and waken.
A few would join in the endeavor. But he would live well knowing his place secure in these pages, where human truths are spoken,
not ultimate, eternal truths, but the truths of one soul
that cultured itself to the furthest possible extent.

Soft Inner Knowledge

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/soft-inner-knowledge/

I begin to see who I have been, and I do not like all of it. I have let pain swell my ego three sizes too big. I have done hard things and thought therefore that I deserve praise. But what is my self? I cannot be tyrant any longer. These inner autonomous energies beg to be heard, and will sicken me if I do not listen. So I will listen, and find a good-natured repose. I partake in the dance with the quiet voices, the soft inner knowledge that tells me what I need to know.

Home Right Here

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/home-right-here/

What meaning can be found in years spent running from myself, denying life
as it moves within me, stifling answers that tried to urge me on and home?
I now will make my home right here,
not in these pages, but in this body,
the one that tells me what it needs.

Inside You All Along

31 March 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/03/31/inside-you-all-along/

The conflict between inner and outer necessity breeds repression. After naysaying and too much silence the inner voice retreats to who-knows-where, and waits until some coaxer calls it out. But not all coaxers can be trusted. Some come to destroy, and send the voice back into itself, even deeper than before. I will try here to be the good kind. I will give you room to expand.
But you must locate this voice in yourself. It is yours.
It has been inside you all along.

The Goal

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/the-goal/

To love and be loved,
to give and receive as equals,
without self-erasure:
this is the goal.

Narcissism

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/narcissism/

It was a magnificent display of narcissism, much too perfect to be believed. You have shown your true colors, and I will remember
each cycle of idealization/devaluation, proving further your lack of substance,
your total dependence on external validation.
You will gladly destroy if it meets your needs.
I don't need you, though you do need someone like me, and perhaps you hoped to spread your need, to destroy as you have been destroyed. You are so hollow, and I have no room for you, even
in this generous heart.

But although you meant evil, the Lord works good, for by showing me
just what I wanted, you melted the ice around my heart. I have got all I needed from you, and I'll keep it, because it was mine all along.

This One Lesson

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/this-one-lesson/

This one lesson was worth the pain:
the mad goddess awoke
and found her place among stars.

Congregation

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/congregation/

A new man rises from the ashes
of the old, at once a man and something more, a congregation of the inner voices, harmonized at last.

The Work of the Anima

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/the-work-of-the-anima/

The veil lifts, the fog clears, and I am at one with all around me
(we were always one but now I am aware).
A strange silence covers over all indecision.
She is here, inside me, doing her work.

Offerings

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/offerings/

> I find more bitter than death
> the woman who is a snare,
> whose heart is a trap
> and whose hands are chains.
> The man who pleases God will escape her,
> but the sinner she will ensnare.
>
> Ecclesiastes 7:26

I offered my heart.
She offered confusion in return.

Sturdy Example

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/sturdy-example/

I remember a time of brokenness,
a time when life made little sense,
when the wind itself condemned me to ignominious shirking. Now
I stand taller. Now I feel whole.
I see others who pass through the same.
My best gift is a sturdy example.

Finding Sophia

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/finding-sophia/

It took me twelve years to find Sophia,
but now she abides with me always, and heals
that which needs to heal.

Why Not Both

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/why-not-both/

The active life, or the contemplative life?
Why not both?

Truth or Power

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/truth-or-power/

The mind must orient itself towards truth or else towards power. It cannot seek both at once. But maybe there is a time for each. Maybe the mind can oscillate and still keep its balance.

What You Offer

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/what-you-offer/

You who have awoken desire:
I still remember (how could I forget),
but you do not seem to want love,
and I do not want what you offer.

Head Held High

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/head-held-high/

I will walk head held high over whatever paths lie before me.
I cannot stop now. Time is ticking my life away, and I have things to say.

What Are They?

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/what-are-they/

There is a place where energies combine
at the soul's center, where various facets of who we are become one. I will dwell there, and tell my story as it was.
I know some will mock me, but they do not matter. I am myself.
What are they?

Firm Beginning

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/firm-beginning/

Here is a firm beginning, another setting out toward better people, the ones who know love, secure enough to be gentle, the ones who have made their way in the world.

Contempt

07 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/07/contempt/

If you treat everyone with contempt,
you will find few beside you.
Your powers of manipulation
only go so far.

Seeking Shelter

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/seeking-shelter/

And so I still wander
over unmarked lands, seeking shelter.
A dream can inspire yet be only a dream.
Beware those who sell dreams for power.

Token

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/token/

Light after stars, under stars in newfound hearts, growing stronger even within accusations. I know my part.
Now I carry in my heart a token showing what love could be,
and I face the dark with ever-growing courage.

Ready

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/ready/

I am no longer in love,
but I do now feel ready for love.

Pain, Real Enough

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/pain-real-enough/

I have known pain, real enough
to call into question the sanity of living,
to shake the foundations of mind and body,
to rupture the vital energies. This pain brings with it a clarity that few understand…
some things really matter. Most do not.

Helen

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/helen/

I had not met Helen before.
I had sailed past Troy on my way to Jerusalem, where I met Sophia.
I had to go back for Helen.

Rarely Tempted Again

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/rarely-tempted-again/

The mad goddess slumbers, takes a nap
and falls out of her chair, spilling ecstasy everywhere. She was the one they were waiting for, the one whose time had come.
But in time she arose and spoke:
You have all been fools for love.
I have come to instruct you, and chastise your violent and childish desires. I have come so that you too may come to your senses.
Real love is not easy, but counterfeits
never ask anything, or else ask everything, and give nothing in return. Real love is a give-and-take between equals. You know this, but still you are tempted to disrepute. Let me live and awaken within you, and you will not only be strengthened. With fear of me, you will rarely be tempted again.

The Hero rose and asked: But how could we dare not be tempted?
She answered: You will know better.

Preferring Penelope

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/preferring-penelope/

Odysseus stands on Calypso's shores, eyes set in the distance, envisioning
what may yet be. He has seen himself degraded, and now made whole, somehow made whole through the degradation.
He knows where desire lives, and how to sail through it. He has in him strength enough to hear sirensong and not give in. But he always preferred Penelope, and sails hence again.

The Promises of Birth

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/the-promises-of-birth/

Falling back into myself, realigned
with the only things that truly guide,
I hear songs, I feel knots come untied,
and I wonder, can I be so small to blame others? To think that my inner voices come from outside?

But how deep these knots were,
tightened over years of clenching
brought down to bear on experience,
strictures that kept energy locked inside.
I see now, and I hear, and I go where my story goes, but as one who knows both confinement and freedom.

I also know now to receive what my insight offers, even when it doubts my intentions, even when it calls me a fool. I know now it was I who was cruel, to myself.
I know now what it means to have health,
and I now will protect it for as long as I breathe.

How could I for so long be deceived
by my own thorns and briars, my own traps laid to ensnare myself, to cage off
the energies that make living possible?
It was I! It was I! It was I!
In such war with myself that all life
became bleak beyond any repair.

And yet healing is not quite repair,
not external repair, but the inner work of the forces that make me myself

come alive again to deliver on the promises of birth.

I will go out, when I have healed,
and I will make my name
as a good man, whole and ready to love and warm others, but equally ready to fight real enemies when they appear.

Spelunking II

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/spelunking-ii/

> When good things are unraveling, bad things come undone.
>
> Jars of Clay, Boys (Lesson One)

You went spelunking
into my heart
and tore me open.
What was your purpose?
To repay blow for blow?

I have not decided whether
this wound was salvific or deadly.
It seems the procedure was nearly fatal,
but sometimes there is no other way.

So many things unravel, bad and good,
the good to make room, to make a hole through which the bad can be removed. I'm healing.
You are no scared little girl anymore.

But what you are evades me,
and I will not bind myself to phantoms,
not even those that heal me.

Blanche

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/blanche/

Are these your poems, Blanche, are these what you will hold onto
when seductions fail to satisfy,
when you long to rest but cannot find any breast to lie on? You choose your path.

Full Strength

13 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/13/full-strength/

I am back to full strength, or nearly,
and in many ways more than before I feel vigorous, ready to take on the day and its many challenges.

Needed Inner Work

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/needed-inner-work/

The transference becomes apparent to me:
there was another narcissist, deserving but never receiving my condemnation. Now I have condemned another who may or may not have deserved it. But this has healed me. Only this could have healed me.

It led to the needed confrontation. It led to the needed inner work.

This deep wound, this habitual shrinking
in the presence of one who would take all space, who expected a carbon copy of herself
and would accept no substitutes,
she is the monster of my nightmares,
the reason my inner voice nearly died.

Pile of Handkerchiefs

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/pile-of-handkerchiefs/

You have left me
with a pile of handkerchiefs.
I have no choice now but to burn them.

Fire and Earth

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/fire-and-earth/

My fire burns for the image of love,
for the vision of potentials fulfilled in a sacred dance,
but I will not dance with blasphemers.
The gods of love are too real.

But if I step down from the temple
and enter the chamber where love really occurs, does this image endure? Or is fire quenched by earth?

Fire and earth feed each other.
The earth provides fuel. The fire provides warmth.

Paper Tower V

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/paper-tower-v/

The fire inside of him quells the dark and empty recesses of cold regret. He lives again himself, at once a man and more,
a man with part woman inside him. The tower was in his mind, was his mind, and she was the force of life seeking wholeness, a soul neglected. Now he knows. She rose at the sight of another resembling what she aspires to be. She tore and burned the tower to get free. Now she is free.

She brings herself into alignment with her guide.
She guides him too from time to time.

Caretaking

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/caretaking/

Caretaking can be like a toxin,
inducing paralysis, holding the victim in place, unable to fend for himself. It's injected unknowingly by many who think they love.

What Waiting Meant

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/what-waiting-meant/

Reflecting back on who she was, or who
I thought she was, I still can see the appeal.
She early showed signs of what now I can name,
the vulnerable kind of narcissism, oscillations between extremes of pride and shame. But beneath this was something beautiful, awareness of her own condition, the capacity to display it in art and even in her public persona. This was her chiaroscuro, this deeper earnestness, a deep desire for authentic connection in spite of knowledge of her flaws.
How many narcissists can name their narcissism?
Only the rarest, only those destined to heal.
This was my hope, and what I waited for.

She made some progress. Images of extremes were replaced by those of integration. She reached out tentatively through a veil, demanding control over any intimacy.
In the end this control proved too limiting.
But she may have a future free from these fears.
It is too soon to tell. My future will surely house memories of her, but the wound is deep and not less than a miracle could rekindle the flame.
But miracles do occur. I would like to believe she can learn to be trustworthy. I too have learned it and not without effort and many mistakes. But until she learns it, and proves it with much repetition,
I cannot trust her.

Still, she was useful to me, as vulgar as it is to say it. She gave me cause to develop my powers of love, and an object for love unlike any I knew before.
I did not imagine her depths, though I did invent a rushed timeline and certain outcome. Her transformation could only have come from the depths, and I share those depths, so I know them well. It was stunning to find them in another,
but I really believed it, and was probably right.

But depth does not equal maturity, and the lack of the latter makes any connection perilous, perhaps more so for two souls full of uncommon knowledge. My boundary stands, but so does my admiration. If only she could learn to rest in herself, in the powers of healing within…
but there I go orchestrating her life again. I must follow my own advice, and let her follow hers.

Some Happy Song

15 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/15/some-happy-song/

Lust and wisdom are strange bedfellows, strange enough to call into question the meaning of wisdom, the purpose of thinking. But maybe they can live together in some kind of harmony. There is a time to think and a time to feel, a time to give and a time to believe. The world is a curious place, full of oppositions, the wonder that comes from the stars and the wrath of the earth. I want all of it, blended in some happy song harmonious, well-tuned
even when apparently dissonant.

Scattershot

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/scattershot/

Two birds fly scattershot
through humid air,
crashing into windows.

They fly off dazed
but perhaps enlightened.

New Vitality

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/new-vitality/

Spring brings with it a new vitality,
the heat of the sun pulsing through living things, reminding them what they are. Many suns will come,
and in their heat new life emerges,
winter's desolation fades.

Dreaming

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/dreaming/

Dreaming only goes so far.
At some point one must start living.

Find Your Way Home

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/find-your-way-home/

Lost and confused, too broken to care, she walks on the side of the road, going anywhere. Time would heal nothing, and not even love could touch wounds so deep she doubted all but despair. I was there myself, but not quite myself,
a phantom of hope, or a glimpse of some other place, where dreams
don't have to die or possess, where some thrive despite many impediments.
She heard this call and responded.
Together we walked for a while, until we both had to journey elsewhere.

I said to her:

Find your way home.
You can make it.

Animus Possession

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/animus-possession/

She walks angry, surely right, self-evidently so, and sure also that love is for fools. All is bad forever. But somewhere in her something stirs, remembering warmth, remembering how she believed in herself and in others, so long ago,
but still within reach.

Mild Bitterness

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/mild-bitterness/

She offers the promise of an easy release, unlimited and with no prerequisites. He obliges and loses himself in himself, in the part of himself that craves love. He's bewitched. Now his manhood slowly must fade. Now he falls into darkness, his own darkness, but a darkness that good women help him avoid. But true strength grants him courage in the midst of even this strangest temptation.
It allows him to sail on through. He must hold on to all that is his. He must not surrender it even for the sweetest love, or the sweetest illusion of love. He prefers the bitter taste of the real thing.

But he cannot repress this desire without self-injury.
Instead he must guide it toward healthy love,
the kind that will strengthen both parties, the kind that he wanted all along.

New Adventures

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/new-adventures/

I stumble over brambles, into the mists of time, where each new day
is born, and the sun waits to rise.
I see through my own eyes. There are adventures ahead, and my song
waits to bring itself to life.

Burn What Must Burn

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/burn-what-must-burn/

The mad goddess often takes the form of a real woman, animus-possessed, and scolds any who hear. But her signal is rarely clear. She invites action rather than contemplation. She sparks fires that burn what must burn.

Beneath the Willow Bough

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/beneath-the-willow-bough/

I will rise and go now
to the home which I have made,
and I will dwell beneath the willow bough
and lounge within its shade.

Tell Me I'm Pretty

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/tell-me-im-pretty/

She scans the crowd for faces
she can control. She spots one, hones in, and begins to attune herself to its wildest dreams. She cannot go more than a day without feeding.

You know who you are. Or rather,
you have no idea, but I know what you are.
When that face fails to soothe your empty soul,
you will destroy it, or nearly so, simply for failing, simply to make another soul empty. No matter how many admire you, it's never enough, is it?

Beyond Good and Evil

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/beyond-good-and-evil/

She is moving
beyond good and evil,
and no longer restrains her cruelty.
But will she get stuck in evil,
fall back into good, or make it
the whole way beyond?

Anima Song

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/anima-song/

Anima, you are my life-song, the essence,
the one from my dreams, and I greet you
with so much exuberance after your long hibernation.
How many worlds shall we conquer together?

Postscript to Venus in Fur

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/postscript-to-venus-in-fur/

Venus has her way with him,
then leaves him dangling in pain, half-crucified.
But then comes the resurrection,
Thomas enlivened with newfound strength,
a hidden power allowing him to understand women, to treat them like women with kindness and respect. He cancels the play and finds another more suited to his new personality.

Dionysus at the Matinée

20 April 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/04/20/dionysus-at-the-matinee/

I came expecting initiation into the holy mysteries
and was not disappointed.

Beatrice Laughs

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/beatrice-laughs/

Beatrice laughs,
but Dante
still rises to heaven.

Make the Growing Things Grow

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/make-the-growing-things-grow/

I cannot escape these mysteries, the deeper truths of the unfolding universe, endless vibrations, the push and pull of forgotten stars…we are all that we are,
and yet I find myself drawn skyward, toward unknown secrets, awaiting investigation…

But out there are no roots, no nourishment
to strengthen bodies, to tie us down to each other,
in place and growing, forever growing, becoming our stronger selves…

Is there some combination that synthesizes mind and body? The wisdom of stars brought down to earth, to make the growing things grow?

Integrate the Shadow

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/integrate-the-shadow/

Integrate the shadow,
feel its power,
but let it be one among many.

Hero's Journey

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/heros-journey/

I dreamed she was both damsel and dragon,
a young girl caught in her own shadow.
I dreamed I was both knight and wolf,
there to tempt or to save as needed.
I dreamed both were needed.

Solitary Bird

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/solitary-bird/

A solitary bird croons plaintively, regretting nothing,
but with needs to fill.

New Self

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/new-self/

The new self collides at last
with the old, in impressive synthesis, both halves conjoined and aligned moving forward into the new day.

Searching for Occupancy

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/searching-for-occupancy/

So much ink spilled on things that do not concern me, need not occupy my mind…but my mind was not whole, and was searching for occupancy. Now it is full of the parts of myself that were hidden.
The journey is over.

Start at the Center

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/start-at-the-center/

Who shall I be now, after journeying into myself and back again, aware of the cosmic vibrations in my own heart?
I will start at the center, and find there connections with others, a place to believe and a place to dream, but a place closed to outsiders and wolves.

Here on Earth and Now

01 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/01/here-on-earth-and-now/

Anima brings me strength
to combat false deities,
enliven and answer the call
to live well here on earth and now.

New Opportunities

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/new-opportunities/

I regret my own weakness, the folly of inaction, the failure to understand matters of the heart. I was too far adrift to make sense of it all. I am less adrift now.
I look forward to new opportunities.

Eudaimonia

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/eudaimonia/

I am weaving a tapestry of the inner voices,
the drives for sex, power, love, food, reason, will,
together in harmonious oscillation, answering each other,
playing off of each other, to create eudaimonia,
the balance of strength that rarely consummates here.
This tapestry calls for itself, it assembles itself
out of pieces that vibrate with magnetism for each other,
and the humming of self made manifest answers.
It is I who have arrived, or is it the gods whose work this surely is? There are no substitutes for good spirits, and no other end in itself.

Is this then the purpose of power, the goal of the struggle for resource and recognition?
These things have no substance of their own, but only
are tools in the service of the inner life,
the energies that beg for harmonization, which Anima knows and conveys. What power can save a man from himself, or free him from the burdens of the self?
He is what he is, forever, or at least until the end of his days.

Take the path toward peace, inner peace,
the path that you know but have often forgotten,
the path that will let you feel free at last,
the path that reveals all you are.

For the First Time

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/for-the-first-time/

I saw her
and caught sight
of myself
for the first time.

Ursa Major

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/ursa-major/

Anima rises,
and the bear with her
to tackle the haunting visions.

Hetaera

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/hetaera/

She meant to hetaera me,
and I meant to break her hetaera habit.
Which one of us led the dance?
I fell in a trance, but in doing so snared her in her own game,
the cocoon of transformation.
If she would look closely, she'd see her own dissatisfaction. But can she?
Or is she corrupted already?

Not Even Rebirth

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/not-even-rebirth/

I will not trust her,
not even if she should appear in the glorious splendor of regeneration.

Energies Flow

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/energies-flow/

I no longer rest in ideas.
I feel my energies flow.

Trauma Bonding

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/trauma-bonding/

Trauma bonding is a better name for this ugly thing, for connection without affection and full of shame.
But was it transference of earlier bonds,
an earlier pattern on its way out?
It has served that purpose at least for me.

Love Yourself

08 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/08/love-yourself/

Love yourself,
then love others.
Don't do this out of order.

This and No Other As Well

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/this-and-no-other-as-well/

The Man checks his pulse, feels the heat
as spine curves to support a rush of blood.
He will give all he has and be grateful for the opportunity. The time comes when pent-up energy flows into another, set free from waiting. He will pay any price. He will love until love runs out and be back for more. He has answered
the final question and delivered his promise.
The burden shifts to the Lady, who bears it with curious grace and charm, and a silly grin.
They have made what they ought to have made.
Now together they lie in euphoria.

Against the Cold

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/against-the-cold/

Now I see across the horizon approaching caravans carrying answers to many unasked questions. I am asking now. Pray tell what must be told, as I make bold to love myself
against the cold.

Wrong Turn

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/wrong-turn/

What does it mean
when Beatrice takes a wrong turn and leads back into hell?

Better Things

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/better-things/

A succubus aims for a trauma bond.
She inspires exhaustion and the attendant desperation,
a hunger that only she satisfies. Little does she know that she hurts herself too. Little does she know about love without heaps of pain. She would like to grow wiser, to break the spell that keeps her sucking, drawing all energy into herself, for it never satisfies.
She needs one love with mutual trust and affection,
but makes herself suited only to vacuuming up energy wherever she finds it. One day her time would come, but until then she only can bring destruction. A wise man will see what she is and flee. A brave one may stay for a while, to enjoy the show, and to learn her lessons. But all men, though tempted, must one day move on to better things.

Who is the One

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/who-is-the-one/

Reaching for forms, in the chaos
of swirling anger and fear,
who is the one who I find here,
feet planted, alert and alive?

Ghosts From Another Room

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/ghosts-from-another-room/

I will not be convinced that I have not seen myself, in the darkness, where shadows
lurk and consume, for I learned too soon
what we are, and it haunts me, like ghosts
from another room, a room where I do not belong.

Children of Earth and Sky

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/children-of-earth-and-sky/

I must make a home here, in my own mind, for I cannot escape my own impulses, cannot become pure and clean. But there is one shining divine invitation, to know myself, in the fullness of that self and no other, to stand firm and care about things that matter, and not about things that do not. There will be no apotheosis, no sudden rush into hope and peace eternal, for we are the children of earth and sky, and must marry
the two somehow.

Savage Humanity

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/savage-humanity/

> My mind is intact, but the shapes
> of the world change, the peach
> has released the bough and at last
> makes full confession, its pudeur > had departed like peach-fuzz wiped off, and
>
> We now know how the hot sweet- > ness of flesh and the juice-dark hug
> the rough peach-pit, we know its most > suicidal yearnings, it wants > to suffer extremely, it
>
> Loves God, and I warn you, do not > touch that plum, it will burn you, a blister > will be on your finger, and you will > put the finger to your lips for relief—oh, do > be careful not to break that soft
>
> Gray bulge of fruit-skin of blister, for > exposing that inwardness will > increase your pain, for you > are part of the world. You think > I am speaking in riddles. But I am not, for
>
> The world means only itself.
>
> Robert Penn Warren, Riddle in the Garden

With the peach opened, the pudeur nowhere to be found, is anywhere safe or must all suffer together the fate of a savage humanity?

Fuller Integration

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/fuller-integration/

> Man is in love and loves what vanishes,
> What more is there to say?
>
> Yeats, Nineteen-Hundred and Nineteen

They cannot last, these dreams of love come down to roost on earth from heaven. They may point the way toward a fuller integration of our many selves, a deeper understanding, but they are no destination.

The Alchemy of Ourselves

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/the-alchemy-of-ourselves/

Tumbling on stormy waters, in search of a balance of power and love, the two interchangeable, certainly capable of harmony or mutual destruction…let each flow into the other,
neither destroying nor fully consuming, the alchemy
of ourselves in a fervent display.

Light and Shadow

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/light-and-shadow/

Oh, I did fall
for the seductive illusions
of an undercover guttersnipe,
but I took the first step
with full knowledge.

But if I broaden my perspective, I see that these complications are part of the appeal.
I yearn for the feminine in all of its mystery.
But can I now find within me the source of all yearning, and rest there, expecting no other to soothe what is mine and mine alone?

The trial is somehow thrilling, an ordeal to test my manhood, proving at last that I have arrived. But of course this arrival has really so little to do with another. It is my own self who arrives.

But that self includes parts of love
half-fulfilled, never reaching their fullest potential alone. I would love one who also arrives.

Light and shadow interplay nicely on the windowsill,
but beyond the window, outside the house,
they are violent, gnawing, tormenting
each other, at times to the point of devastation.

But there is a better way, here, with a few drops of civilized conduct, good habits, and healthy desire.
I take this path. I will find who I find upon it and bear life's burdens to the end.

Female Deity

14 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/14/female-deity/

God works for women, but men need a female deity, to summon the inner life, to make active the inner feminine, which never was satisfied by love on earth.

But does the deity come to save or to torment? Gods can be resisted, and they should be, when they contradict each other,
when they push against the flow of life itself.
The sacred feminine deserves respect,
but so does the sacred masculine.

Seductive illusions pull a man outside himself
and into the dark of chthonic energies,
the land of Woman's rule. If he would survive there,
he must bring a sturdy mind, and hold fast to the golden thread that leads back to the light.

Ariadne, I do not expect to worship you, although your myth points in that direction. I have seen too much of who you really are, of what all women are.
But you do make a potent symbol of regeneration, not unlike Demeter, though more forceful. Holy wife of Dionysus, turn the tables, change the stakes,
and let us realign around that ruptured place.

You are not the first woman who has sought my worship,
but you may be the last, having finally answered my deepest question. Even sex can be sacred, and even the most fervent worship must keep in the back of its mind that our animal side never entirely tires, cannot be expunged.
You awaken libido. For that I do thank you. But is it libido or libido dominandi, a drive for love or for power?

The evidence points to the latter,
and so I again bid adieu,
but there's something about you that keeps you here as my muse.

Venus and Apollo

21 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/21/venus-and-apollo/

Venus drifts out of orbit,
threatens to crash the whole solar system.
Apollo intervenes with a gentle nudge
and reaffirms normal planetary motion.

Love Waits

21 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/21/love-waits/

One never knows how the twists and turns of flowing time bring love around and around again
from the sediments of the past, the ashes of passions long since burned up. What new sprouts grow from these soils long tilled in forgotten reaches of memory,
the volcanic embers now quieted by gentle streams?
The potential is there. A single drop of water slides down my window. I remember the heat and the cooling power of rain. Time past and future collide right here, to decide my path.
It will be a slow journey. Love waits for those who are ready. They find their way to each other, having found their ways to themselves.

This Holy Place

21 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/21/this-holy-place/

I see again those hidden mysteries, ancient unwavering stones at the basis of all that we are. They cannot be toppled or shaken by storms. We are where we are despite protestations, despite deceptive chagrin.
I invite you to see this holy place,
a place open to those with pure hearts.

Truer, Higher, Deeper

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/truer-higher-deeper/

Drifting about, once more searching for myself
I remember what God used to mean to me…
Can I pick up those pieces, restore to false hearts
one true thing, one solid truth that remains even when all else topples? What is man, and how far has he come from the jungle
to think he might think himself free?

How far must I go into unreached places,
unnamed spaces, the desolate chambers
of love abandoned, before I discover the answer?
Life's question perennial, how to make sense
of all urges, demands no special prerogative, no lonely sage. The man of action learns what he is by doing.

Can a man be happy without a woman around whom he can orbit? Hence libido, hence his deepest longing, hence his truest self. But is there a woman worthy of his sacrifice? Not even one.

And yet he is called to sacrifice
by divine command. Is there no other way?
Love breaks the day into pieces, until he can only say "take all I have."

Can a truer, higher, deeper love fulfill the needs of libido, or will it suck the soul out of itself and into some cosmic affair, so-called "holy" love between souls, where no body interferes?

I must embrace the pain in order to be fully human. I cannot shrink

from my obligations or refuse to suffer.
I must know where I am.

Openness to Pain

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/openness-to-pain/

She brought change, and a kind of openness to pain, a refusal to fear the unpleasant. I still must admire that. I have it too.

Motivation

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/motivation/

Pain at least provides motivation,
a moving force to get people going.

Christian Siren

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/christian-siren/

She summons libido for a holy end,
to get men moving toward God,
but with her intermediating, always her shining before them as beacon and hope for arrival in port. She will speak of love, the love of God,
and they hear all too clearly her meaning,
for she is their god, and no other,
and she would have it no other way.

The Right Occasion to Strike

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/the-right-occasion-to-strike/

How was one ever to arrive
with the nymphs proclaiming love here
or love there, always with an eye to desolation?
One arrives by discovering deeper truths,
the deep pull of the earth, the dark draw of sex, asking all, giving nothing in return. With this knowledge one sails on through, toward meatier shores, with real substance, understanding
both the horror and the appeal,
and waits for the right occasion to strike.

Unveiling

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/unveiling/

I don't know what will come of it,
maybe my own transformation, maybe nothing, or maybe some glorious unveiling.

Another New Day

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/another-new-day/

Today is another new day, this one following the last, starting over, beginning what longs to begin.

Strength for Love

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/strength-for-love/

Sara was not my muse for long, though she did wake up something, inspire a desire that now finds fruition in itself, in the fuller picture of man as part man and part woman, part beast
and part angel, all human, flourishing here or dying in the attempt.

Was Dionysus alive then too, working through even Abraham's wife, to bring nourishment into my bone-dry soul? She did call, and perhaps she meant it, and I was the miserable seducer.

I could not have loved at that time, and I knew it, though I did not know how to heal. With some luck
I found fountains of carnal energy, long trapped, awaiting explosive release. Have I since found another in the same predicament?

Or have I just finished my own story, using a useful mirror to reveal to me parts of myself still asleep? But are these parts not best left asleep?

They shall wake when the waking is called for
by one who is also waking, and only on these terms, for no other terms satisfy, no other waking is worth the trouble or free from degradation.

Having degraded others, was I not due for karmic retribution? Will those who degrade me face the same fate?

The slaves revolt, always, and often overcome their masters when it's least expected. Therefore I swear off slavery and walk free.

But Sara still calls out to me from the reaches of far-off memory, one who dared love with apparent sincerity. I was the weak one, Sara,
I was the one without strength to say yes
or to bend without breaking, to give and take.
You showed me the way.

Can I now show the way? I will try.
But I look once again to the broken sky and remember my discipline. I would be strong without love. I will not trade my strength for love.

Where are the lovers
who wish for my strength?
Penelope, I arrive!

Hiccupping Whiskey

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/hiccupping-whiskey/

Now I get it, having turned myself around and around, asking everyone
if they had seen the reason why love continues without respite, why men and women continue to dance in the midst of egregious pain…It's all clear to me now,
all too clear, but I stand here hiccupping whiskey, unloved, maybe better for it, maybe not so far from life after all. What is eros? Our master or slave? Or some petulant neighbor who interrupts our lives now and then?

That Door

27 May 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/05/27/that-door/

Let me revisit the question of love,
which I swore to escape, just to find myself pulled back down to the swamp of desire when desirable visions arrived. She offered herself as a vision of immaculate desirability. She offers nothing more than a vision, and yet that vision entrances, serves as an entrance to a fuller version of myself, the self I would like to be.

I walked through that door, and found hope and despair. I was really there, all of me, even the parts that I could not see. She could see them, or made me believe she could see. Was I free or enslaved? Perhaps both. I was on my way.

The Dark Lady

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/the-dark-lady/

The Dark Lady swirls around and around in a mind no longer whole without her.
Who is she? The shadow, the hidden feminine,
the bedroom rage and silent, seductive gaze
of eternity, endless sex and consequences,
life itself brought down to its elements.

Are there women who can control her,
truly, and not by man's interjection?
Or must we feel afraid forever
of the Bacchae and their eruptions?

In Open Air

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/in-open-air/

Through that door, into mystical grace, having lavished myself with all praises, I find an at-oneness surpassing all understanding,
the hollow parts fall away, and I'm full of the hope of the universe, pulsing forever
through hearts big and small. I'm alive with a life that demands introspection, respect, and small dignities played out before a crowd of peers. I will walk before God, stand erect, and fear nothing, not even inevitable death. Though I do fear the shadow, I know that for now it retreats and gives life its soft timbre, the darkness that fills out the image with tension,
without which all falls apart.

Teach me something, remind me of pain,
but do also remember that hope springs eternal,
that life is not bad for longer than we can bear.
So go anywhere, do anything, be anyone, so long as you find in your heart no remonstrance, no doubting despair. You were there. I was there.
All was clear. Do remember. Become what your dreams prepare, and walk freely, in open air.

Codependency

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/codependency/

Have I uncovered my own codependency, mastered through years of bad lessons,
ancestral wounds passed down through the generations?
I walk freer now. I see where I am going and where I have been.

The Purpose of Power

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/the-purpose-of-power/

The purpose of power is health, well-being, good-spirits. All power pursued beyond these ends is at best unneeded, at worst destructive.

The purpose of power is love,
to make possible clearing the ground,
to make way for a soft place
for lovers to love and be loved.

Not the Sky

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/not-the-sky/

I called to you across the stars.
Who answered? All of me answered, even the parts I despised. I now find my own life, and I'll cherish it even if I must see with my own eyes
how pain answers and sprouts from the earth
in all lives. I take off my disguise, and I sing here half mad but at least fully human, and therefore less mad than those civilized beyond any point of return, to the center,
the origin of life. Who cries? Who calls now hearing my song? Some wild babe half asleep, in search of some manger
to occupy, next to the animals, free from mankind and its silly demands. But the kettle is empty,
the stores have run dry, and who feeds us?
Who keeps out the wind? Not the sky!

Sacred Fire

02 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/02/sacred-fire/

I live my life
near the sacred fire.
Sometimes it burns,
but without it, life grows cold.

A Glimpse

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/a-glimpse/

I glimpsed one
free of the stains of modernity,
deeply human, deeply alive,
and I would have loved her,
but time has carried her away.

Love to Believe

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/love-to-believe/

Is it possible to believe? To believe in what? In life? In hope?
The abundance of nature and nature's energies pouring through us? I would love to believe.

Man of Peace

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/man-of-peace/

I have found myself again,
the man of peace, the one who would feel safe and pass on the same. I would like to be at home. I would like to rest.

Journey Begins

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/journey-begins/

Your journey begins, and I am alone with myself again,
but in peace, with a new half awoken and ready to greet those whose path I cross. I meet obstacles, ready to honestly face them.

Glass Castle

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/glass-castle/

A time came when questions
no longer mattered, the matters of fact bore no weight against feelings erupting from the palace floor. The glass castle shattered, sending shards here
and there, through my eyes and beyond,
into time, where ideas dwell, waiting to form.
I was ready, and in a sense
I had asked for the pain, or at least for the lessons that come with pain.
Now I know. I still find my mind intact and plugged into the world of things beyond. I will visit but make my home here on the earth.

Out of Myself

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/out-of-myself/

Out of myself, into reaches unknown, far-off spaces, the places where ashes are always reborn into birds whose song rises through air to remind mankind to believe in itself, despite evidence to the contrary…Here I will sing
and take wing against perilous doubt,
the cold fingers of dying fate, the harsh pestilence lingering under each sighing moon.
It was never too soon to begin, it was only the wrong appointment, the vagueness of time still reminding, reminding of fate's cold shoulder and the agonies of being left behind.

The Stag Returns

12 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/12/the-stag-returns/

The stag returns to the woods alert to its many changing leaves,
the multicolored epiphanies of those who are lost, now found, now lost again.
It will be a cool afternoon here
under the shade of these living pillars, testaments to life itself. But don't tarry, he says, do not linger here under the false impression that you might belong
at last in this forest. It is no home, it offers no rest. A voice echoes which once had been silent, and he sees his purpose served. He moves on, after pausing to soak the sound in.

Loss of Power

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/loss-of-power/

Who can remember, when tomorrow arrives,
why today meant so much, means so little now,
in the fading light of a distant and dying star?
We press on, not because of significance, but in spite of the lack of it, waiting for nothing more than ourselves and our mysteries coming to light in the somber gaze of the morning star, the one that replaces its parent, and leaves little room for investigations into the meaning of what we are or would like to be.

Is love ever safe without safeguards,
without some communal protection
in the form of punishment for transgression?
No, love is not safe even so, it is never safe,
life is not safe, and we must make amends
for ourselves and our natures in some other way.

But what ways are available? How can one love without damaging self and others, without some restrictions? But if these restrictions are not self-imposed, will they really survive
the night terrors, the force of awakened desire?

Only the restraints that one chooses
can truly bind, without degradation.
All other restraint will make weak
and pathetic the ones who would be strong.

But strength is not all, we also must love…but can love endure
without loss of power?

Some Brighter Day

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/some-brighter-day/

Abbey burns through time like a memory
discarded, the lost film that tells the story
I tried to forget. I was almost whole, and she almost mine, but that miscreant time would carry away what little hope we had. She moved on, so did I,
but some part of my soul still remained incomplete,
never knowing how love might fulfill the deep longing
or make straight the narrow, crooked road.
There was something that had to explode,
locked up tight, and I'm glad to be free of it,
glad to have kept to myself (for the most part)
the pain that could only hurt others, the pain
that would make love impossible until some brighter day.

That day finally came, and the sun now shines with more purpose. I have not forgotten
the pain or the feeling of chains on my body and heart, but I walk free and stand taller now. I know where I am going
and where I have been.

What comes next? I would love if love does come my way, but I cannot say whether any will answer or even hear my plaintive call, from the depths of a most human soul, fully human, accepting no compromise. Who can endure it?
Who can stand tall in the rain of the storms of unconsciousness, pouring down over us? I know I can. But is there another?

I wait even so, never knowing if such a one could exist. I have glimpsed her, at least in the mind's eye, through the veil of imagination, and I will not settle for less.

Only Together

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/only-together/

Anima and Animus rise through time
to their fated meeting, collide and again
decide to go on together, to live as one whole, against chaos, against the formless dance of isolation and painful solitude. Only together can either make sense. They will find their way to each other. They have no choice.

Stop Being Human

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/stop-being-human/

We don't stop being human,
no matter how hard we try.

The Sacred Feminine

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/the-sacred-feminine/

> If I could only turn back the clock to when God and her were born.
>
> Bob Dylan, Shelter From the Storm

The pantheon expands to make room for the sacred feminine, the divine urgencies of procreation, flowing through time
and body to meet us here, right now.
How little we knew when cloistered within the abbey walls, the silent halls of Palestine and Rome,
the masculine single God demanding total obedience, total desolation. Sex always rears its ugly head, always pokes through the sternest walls at the most inopportune time. We must learn to embrace it, to love what we are, as we are, all we are. We will never be other than animal, never transcend or escape from the swamps of desire,
nor do any who try find true happiness,
but we can sail well, with sure rudder (at least sure enough) to ensure that our time in the sun is not wasted,
but we will not ever find land or (goddess forbid) flutter off into the sky.

Even In Our Own Hearts

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/even-in-our-own-hearts/

They journeyed together
on the ship of fate,
not lost, not quite found,
always reaching, never grasping…

Was there a tomorrow to answer their longing? Or were they forever adrift, underneath changing stars?

We know who they are. We were like them, before love
arrived, with its promise of pain.

But which path leads to happiness?
Does any path? Or are paths insignificant, mattering only as a kind of ephemera, the stage
upon which the same human affairs
play out time after time?

We would choose well, but in the end
we must fight for ourselves, if we ever intend to matter, even in our own hearts.

In the Mind Alone

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/in-the-mind-alone/

I wanted to love her, and I am not ashamed,
for the flowing of time and energy
cannot be halted, even for a moment.

When love awakens, see it through,
even if in the mind alone.

Her Cool Touch

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/her-cool-touch/

The mad goddess drifts in and out of time,
reminding of lessons learned, and the pain of negligence, the pain of forgetting her place in my heart. We did start to remember, she says, and yet now you begin to forget. And she does not ask nicely for supplicants, does not pretend to hear praise, but instead waits for action
to give her cool touch away.

Ongoing Flow of Dreams

30 June 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/06/30/ongoing-flow-of-dreams/

Am I losing my mind
or finding it, here in the shadows,
the darkness of unfelt desires come to life? It will be an unravelling, answering only that one question, life itself,
with its ongoing flow of dreams.

A Bed Neglected

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/a-bed-neglected/

A bed neglected
waits for the one who will press with loveliness
all the four corners of my heart.

Troika

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/troika/

I now understand better. Now
I can rest, until she appears,
and when she does appear, I will know what she carries inside, and I will not hide from her energy,
nor will I cower or snuff it,
for I will engage in the dance
of all dances, the troika of man and wife.

Show Me the Goddess

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/show-me-the-goddess/

Show me the goddess in you so that I may love her
and grow into a better man,

but do not expect me to kneel forever.
Your temple is not my destination.

Always

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/always/

I don't know why my eyes
chose this time to awaken,
or why you were there to fulfill my gaze,
but I know that my life has been changed,
and some part of me will love some part of you always.

Stardust

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/stardust/

There comes a time
in every man's life
when he answers the call to be human, but he must never forget his time in the stars.
He must carry his stardust with him.

Jesus Again

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/jesus-again/

I remember a Jesus
who meant the world and more to me,
who led my way.

He always knew just what to say,
and I needed his words to inform my formlessness.

I feel warmly for him,
though my pantheon grows,
for the seeds he sowed
have grown ripe for harvest.

Life of a Certain Kind

07 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/07/life-of-a-certain-kind/

There is a blinding kind of faith
that I have known too well,
a faith that refuses to be human,
refuses to admit that our weaknesses
never entirely vanish, not even with age.
This faith is a prison, and I will not stomach it, not even if it gives life of a certain kind.

But there is a middle way between certain strength and real strength, the latter always knowing that falling is possible, the former refusing to concede that we are not perfect. The complex dissolves, and I walk free.

Where does this leave you and me?
I have known you, in faith, or in vision,
but I have not known the real you.
I am watching a puppet who masquerades an impossible strength. I do not wish to wound but to heal. Phony strength has a dark side, and I prefer life as an interplay of shadows.
I thought you did too.

I am finding my way through the undergrowth, tangled in canopies far too long. There are monsters lurking, shadows that need to be heard. I will hear them, and utter their truths. I see more than some certainties allow.

Too Many Nightingales

13 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/13/too-many-nightingales/

What was the meaning of these nightingales
come to haunt my sight, until I awoke still alone but healed fresh with new vigor?
How could they know me, and how, after traveling farther than any man should alone, could I not at least pause to hear their complaints? They sang sadly of tragic dreams, of love's failing refrain, the impossible yearnings of an empty heart. But then something did start to stir, to imagine itself
full of life. So these birds sang together, and it was a beautiful, tragic song, that fell short at the moment of impact. I will not forget it.
When next I hear nightingales sing, I will pause and smile…and walk on.

Meaning

13 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/13/meaning/

Is there a meaning, after sadness,
after despair rears its ugliness, vaunting emptiness onto center stage? There is meaning in what one can learn. There is hope in becoming better able to manage.
There is joy in the journey itself.

The Man Who Speaks Plainly

13 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/13/the-man-who-speaks-plainly/

Let me summon the man who speaks plainly about things to come. He will answer the call.
He will sing, he will love, he will stumble and fall.
He will rise again. He will know what he's doing, forget, then remember again. He will be fully human. He will be what he is.

I Would

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/i-would/

Would that you would hear my call,
would that love would come first, then fall down to earth, would that you'd know your worth and I mine, would that we would transpire together, grow tall, would that love would be easy, would that songs would fill up the hall.
I would. I would.

She Stands For Something

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/she-stands-for-something/

She stands for something celestial,
out there in heaven, yet also here in our own hearts. She awakens a love that flows over and under, through body and mind, into others, the hope of combining, togetherness, belonging.
She is the center of a tribe still forming,
the core of a life that could be,
for her womb carries hope and potential.
Her body is the gateway to a higher life,
a fulfilled spirit, a spirit surrounded by familiar faces and bodies and souls.
She embodies life's greatest desire, the flourishing of all that man is. She could bring to bear the great hope of posterity, and answer
life's most daunting question with a resounding "yes".

She could also refuse, and that refusal threatens to tear limb from limb the man who introjects it. But does she refuse for her own reasons? Might the role be too big for her? She cannot escape it regardless.

And yet her refusal cannot destroy the image of what she stands for, and the vision is holy despite her many flaws.

Two Lives

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/two-lives/

How can two lives
with such resonance never collide?

Sacred Candle

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/sacred-candle/

She carries a sacred candle
in a storm of mind
and guards with her life
its immortal flame.

She comes in the name of the goddess.
She waits for the power of rain.

Whence We Have Come

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/whence-we-have-come/

Who would answer them, these voices sent from afar, under all that we are, asking only to be heard? These ghosts haunt every corner of waking dreams,
they inhabit the dusks of our arrogance,
taunting those who consider themselves most secure.
I was never quite sure where to find them
or how to dissolve the bonds that keep them here, pulling us under without remorse. But of course
we still have our most cherished beliefs,
the hard facts carved on stone, to remind us that nothing ever changes, that nothing ever will…
but this "nothing" boils with changeling energy,
a vat of unconscious premonitions and unthought dreams,
where what we would most like to be waits for answer,
having been denied for too long. So speak, voices.
Here echo your thoughts and remind us all
whence we have come.

Through Sacrifice

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/through-sacrifice/

I summoned the goddess through sacrifice. She brought my mind down to earth.

The Real Thing

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/the-real-thing/

I wanted to hear her voice, to touch her,
to laugh together, to eat together, to lie in bed and do nothing together. I wanted the real thing.

Why then did the goddess appear?
Was it her decision, or did I call to her out of the depths of my soul?

She answered my call for mortality
with immortal visions, a punishment for some crime (for the crime of passion I suppose).

Yet I do not regret this meeting.
It has made me ready to endure the real thing.
It has made me the man I hoped to be.

Heaven and Hell

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/heaven-and-hell/

She has the power
of heaven and hell,
to make either appear
at a moment's notice.

How can she be trusted
to wield it?
How can she be made
to obey?

A Sudden Joy

27 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/27/a-sudden-joy/

A sudden joy in the strangest way,
a new day, like that other new day,
here reminding me not to despair
when there's love there, inside me,
and strength to maintain my position,
to stand my ground against chaos
and eros, the feminine's sacred gravity.

She Waits As She Waits

29 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/29/she-waits-as-she-waits/

She waits for the storm to pass, knowing only that one fate, the coolness of rain, washing over the dry touch of an empty refrain. This restraint is now gentle, it bears with its burden and goes proudly forward into the new morning,
the one always following storms. When the sun again rises
she has no faults to expose, no more follies, but only the sweet drifting sound on the breeze. All these summer epiphanies echo throughout, down her spine, into softer regions awaiting exploration. But the storm has not passed, and she waits as she waits for another epiphany, the one that will answer at last her longing
and send her askance into ecstasy.

The epiphany waits for no man. It bubbles up of its own accord, when the vessel is ready.
She sighs again, having tried to suppress it.
She cannot put it down. She cannot escape it,
and try as she might, she is ready,
even though she doesn't know it. But somewhere lurk shadows that chain her to emptiness, reminding of all past failures. She would climb higher towards the light, wherein all things are revealed.

In that light waits another kind of demon,
disguised as an angel, the wolf in sheep's clothing
that draws all sufferers hence as a kind of predation.
Her answers lie elsewhere, and though this light grants certain vision, it never can satisfy. Darkness is in her, and any home must take this seriously.
She might still find her way in the coolness of an autumn day,
but she would not fly madly away from home
or forget to belong somewhere.

Come Again, Vesta

29 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/29/come-again-vesta/

Come again, Vesta, again, again!
Awaken the fire and light many torches
to lighten the pathway home.

Encounter For Solo Violin

29 July 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/07/29/encounter-for-solo-violin/

She carries authentic composure,
the confidence of one who knows well
how to do what she sets out to do.
She knows inside and out her violin and the world of sound. She brings into being a brightness, overshadowed only by her smile, which appears
when the audience hears what she hears.

She is lovely, and later she smiles at me,
and I know I will keep that smile safe
in some vault, for a rainy day.

What strange resonance summons me back to encounter her, just at that moment, with perfect timing? And what strange resonance summons me now to remember?

Likely folly. But fools are spared
the burden of pretending to have life under control. Therefore lovers are foolish and must be so. But this is not love, not yet, not without some reply.

What does she feel? Is she flattered, annoyed, confused, excited? "This poet at least has confidence," she mutters, "but is there anything there?"

I don't know, just a glimmer, a vague recollection of something I've seen in my dreams.

Adagio Romance

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/adagio-romance/

She wonders. He waits.
The call comes from above and underneath. It would be an adagio romance, in the key of seeing and being seen. Is it magic?
Or are they deceived?

Searching For You

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/searching-for-you/

Time swirls, over and under,
through space and mind, into self made new, where the gravity calling all dreamers awaits to enliven and make something true. I was nowhere, not even inside myself, not even aware of the turmoil, only becoming, forever becoming, and searching for rest, even temporary rest, and searching for you, always for you…

Not Out of the Woods

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/not-out-of-the-woods/

I am not out of the woods.
I have only begun to explore the many paths
that expose the inner sanctums of nature.

Jesus Calls

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/jesus-calls/

Jesus calls, out of some dream,
walking proudly down an impossible road
'til he veers into wildness, the madness
of Bacchus and the children of nature…
what storm does this portend? What future comes, wherein these images find their sense?
I cannot be afflicted, but neither can I fully escape this entanglement, feeling these prophecies swoon and wash over my humbling heart. I will play my part.
I will find my way home.

Forbidden Fruit

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/forbidden-fruit/

Something comes again to grip my mind
with the fingers of flowing time, an uncovered uncertainty, lingering here in the garden. What fruit waits to ripen and expose its hidden nectar?
Must all be forbidden? Or are there some fruits both pleasing to the eye and good for food?

Another Me

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/another-me/

I arrive again at the strangest place,
the strange vista wherefrom I detect in the distance
another me, coming with certainty, ready to live here, now. But who is he really? And why is she here, still carving out space for herself?

The Canyon of Life and Death

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/the-canyon-of-life-and-death/

I did not know I was coming, did not know that I would appear and arrive in the most sudden adventure, the deepest and widest ravine not being enough to consume me. No, I grew taller and rose to gaze over the edge of the canyon of life and death, where all humans depart and arrive. I saw many not knowing,
a few knowing all too well.

Finding Herself

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/finding-herself/

She sets out in search of passion and meaning but finds instead the forbidden fruit, the knowledge of what people do to each other. If only she could put back together the broken pieces and discover the wholeness she once imagined…
if only she could find her way home. She was not to succeed, at least not in the way that she dreamed,
though she would find her answer, in the calm
after a storm, when the dust settles, feeling her own soul, in its fullness, pulsing with life and powering her body's animation. This soul was still part of the world, still a holy shrine, still a part of the larger sacredness of life.
But she now would fight harder and be more cautious
to protect it from life-destroying winds.

Thanks

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/thanks/

I would love
to thank you
for granting me strength.

Dark Passion

03 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/03/dark-passion/

> But there are things that happen between a man and a woman in the dark—that sort of make everything else seem—unimportant.
>
> Tennessee Williams, A Streetcar Named Desire

I remember the surge of her, storming dark passion through dark eyes, with a wildness from the earth itself. She was animal, asking for animal in return. But it would not last.
It was only a moment. Had I complied with her wishes, would I now be animal, enjoying the punishment and bliss of a beast
that has found sex at last, freed from civilization?
Or would I have been discarded?

The End of It

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/the-end-of-it/

This is the end of it, this is the point of the journey where love becomes possible. This is the last hope made manifest, the final answer to the question one had been afraid to ask.

Heaven's Feigned Bliss

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/heavens-feigned-bliss/

Shall I flutter off again,
into some unseen sky, the forbidden
reaches of heaven's feigned bliss?
There are many children there, not accepting life's burdens, not growing into full men and women, and yet
I must feel uneasy around them,
I must not allow their imaginary paradise
to pull me away from life's struggles.

Nothing Says I Love You

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/nothing-says-i-love-you/

Nothing says "I love you"
like an angry letter, sent in despair. It proves the feeling, even as it dies. It shows that one was not joking. It burns what one cannot have.

Flying Lessons II

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/flying-lessons-ii/

Bird big and bird small fly out of view.
The lessons are over.

Under the Sweetest Desire

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/under-the-sweetest-desire/

> Just between us, did the love affair maim you too?
>
> Taylor Swift, All Too Well

Not maimed, just bruised, and bruises heal. It's a wonder that so much pain waits under the sweetest desire.

If Not Hers

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/if-not-hers/

Her darkness drew me, and there I found an image of me, a version of me that had not been welcome. But was she this or some other? Why was she the perfect screen? And was she aware of the ties that bound my heart,
if not hers?

Seeds of a Dying Rose

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/seeds-of-a-dying-rose/

I take these seeds
and replant them
in soil now fertilized
by decay. I wish you sweet progress as you move towards light of day.

Sweet Sophia

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/sweet-sophia/

How many songs shall I write for you!
Muse of the stars, knowing all that we are,
sweet Sophia or manifest grace, you are flowing above, over, through all things. You are here,
I have found you, I know your name and your presence. I wait for your sweet embrace.

Into Mortals

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/into-mortals/

The mad goddess descends in luxurious robe. The poet rises to meet her, atop the stair. They embrace there, and both are transformed
into mortals.

Rainbow

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/rainbow/

A rainbow reminds of that other storm
so long ago, when the sky was torn open and man washed away, and now time
with its sweet embrace decides nothing, and everything flows on forever, towards some new synthesis, nothing stands still, amid aching and yearning, denying and trying, and climbing forever
up those colors, toward heaven…

I don't want to let go

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/i-dont-want-to-let-go/

I don't want to let go, because love
is more real than all other distractions, and nothing else satisfies, nothing else
answers the call or fills in the deep longing in quite the same way. Only love comes to roost in the heart in a permanent way.
Only love breaks the day and lights the way home.

Think

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/think/

There's a madness to my method, but I think
I know what I'm doing. Yes, I think
I can find my way. You know
I have come to remind you that time keeps on flowing. You know that it comes and it goes on its own. I think there are answers that bubble up in what we think.

I Met the Goddess

10 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/10/i-met-the-goddess/

I met the goddess and learned her name.
She touched me with her flame,
and promised pain. I said yes anyway.

Dry No More (Real Enough)

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/dry-no-more-real-enough/

I have been to the desert places.
I found myself parched and denied any access to water, or the healing power of love. But I kept walking through.
Near the end I saw you, who reminded of so many things that I could not flee.
I was no longer free, but not sick either,
finally allowed to heal. Were you real?
I think so, in some sense, and yet not in the simplest terms. You were real to me, and that is real enough. I would still call it love, of a certain kind,
but the love of a teacher and friend.
It will do. I will carry it. It moistens my lips.

A Culminating of Destiny

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/a-culminating-of-destiny/

I call to her still. What strange resonance, what strange ennui
in the face of mysterious connection,
the ties that bind two hearts across space and time…can it be? Are we free? And for you and me does some future believe in our meeting,
a culminating of destiny into the lives
we have only begun to dream?

A Possible Salve

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/a-possible-salve/

What a strange silence now nestles within and without, in the absence of any found love…but the love took to bed its own folly, and drowned
the old wounds in a possible salve:
the forgiveness of self, the beginning of hope, and the power of letting go.

Still Human Beings

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/still-human-beings/

Believe it or not, we are still human beings,
knee-deep in shit, but gazing at the stars.

For Eternity

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/for-eternity/

I see you, even now. I feel your warmth but it is never mine. You came and went.
But did you ever leave? And did you ever come?
I have awakened now to what love longs to be.
You set me free. For that, you earn a place here
for eternity.

The Right Person

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/the-right-person/

Maybe I just need to hop on a unicorn
and ride into the land of make-believe.

That's where I'll find her.

Saint Teresa

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/saint-teresa/

When the faithful discover eros
it ravishes body and mind. They must learn a devotion less than total. They must learn how to love and yet hold back some love
in reserve, for themselves, for a rainy day.
They find no lover worthy of the love
they were taught to carry, and soon it burns up.

Saint Teresa, come and instruct these holy pilgrims
in the ways of the earth, with Bernini's help.

We Have To Believe

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/we-have-to-believe/

Even in the midst of egregious pain,
we have to believe in ourselves,
truth be damned.

The Missing Piece

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/the-missing-piece/

Ariadne, the stars shall welcome you after your journey is done. You have played your part in the eternal myth. You have shaped my heart with strength and pith. You were lovely and terrible, beautiful, tragic, and cruel,
and you brought my life under your rule
for a moment, just long enough to expose and expunge the minotaur, just long enough to set us both free. I return now your golden thread.
I will not be needing it, and your cocoon is near finished. This may be the missing piece.

Other Skies

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/other-skies/

I take off my hat
and put on the mystical veil,
and walk in secrets, down streets
of time, where spirits arise, combine,
and fly off into other skies.

It gets cold here, but I don't mind.

In the Kitchen

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/in-the-kitchen/

He sits in the kitchen, wondering
how his mother became a demon,
how terror and love can coexist in the female body. Where does this rage originate? What is the source of this shame and the fear of connection? Life is a troubling thing, and not any less problematic
the older one grows.

The Habit of Silence

17 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/17/the-habit-of-silence/

The pain answers its own question.
It has no remorse. In the course of forsaken time, one flows on,
while another gets stuck in the shallows and struggles to breathe. There will be no reprieve. The pain speaks for itself, and no other voice comes to soothe or erase the dark shadows, for shadows are children of voices that ought to have soothed, and failed. What now?
There is some room for comfort, but rarely enough. There is mostly the habit of silence.

The Whole Story

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/the-whole-story/

My mother didn't hug me enough (or did she hug me too much?) and now I must face
the consequences. Still she appears a fine woman, to those unaffected,
and even to me on my better days.
Which is the truth? Can any truth really contain the whole story?

Storm Still Raging

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/storm-still-raging/

You've entered a storm still raging,
set foot on shifting shores, and asked the way home.
I do not know myself, but this tome gathers facts and feelings, hopes and dreams that make ourselves as we would seem instead of as we are. Home is not far,
but it is hard to grasp, beneath these violent stars.

In Search of the Face

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/in-search-of-the-face/

We set sail for Troy
still in search of the face
that can launch our ships, embarking on the most human voyage
toward ourselves and our greatest potential.
What comes of it matters less than the endeavor,
for we are mere dreamers in a land too real to believe.

The Fragrance of Love

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/the-fragrance-of-love/

The mind goes blank, losing all forms, like an etch-a-sketch given a solid shake.

She steps into that emptiness,
and illumines it with flowers
and the fragrance of love.

It's enough.
It is finally enough.

Predicament

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/predicament/

What a predicament,
women in slacks and men in dresses,
and Anima stuck in a factory somewhere working herself to the bone.

Self and Stars

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/self-and-stars/

The mother grips her son with a love
laced with fear, holds on, and demands in return his whole being, the total surrender of all he would like to be. He will never be free, so long as she answers
his deepest question, so long as she stands in the place of hope, as a constellation of fear and desire and need. But he can be freed by the process of integration,
by learning with finality the lessons
she stumbled to teach, and remembering where this hope comes from.

It was never in her.
It was in the stars,
and in himself.

But where is there room for the love of another,
if not this tainted love, but a love made to weather
all storms, instead of creating storm itself? There is room in the heart, in the secret place, where the wounds cannot reach, where hope springs eternal, where life will continue to blossom under any conditions.

From here we can grow, and there is no other soil to replenish our storehouses,
no other place wherein hope can be planted and brought to harvest. We are the soil, and we must take good care not to fallow ourselves in the desperation of winter. Hope grows
if we tend it, but many are the forces that devour the crop or sow salt in the field.

What then is revealed? Only pain, and the labor of reducing it, the truth of our concourse here
on the earth, in the land between self and stars.

So Wrong

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/so-wrong/

She still sings to me (out there, somewhere)
her beautiful song
and although I have listened too long,
I'll keep listening…is that so wrong?

Machines and Their Servants

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/machines-and-their-servants/

A man in white answers the call to emasculate himself and all others
with whom he comes into contact.
What for? To sustain the institution?
But the institution itself longs for death
and he serves to perpetuate only the myth of infantilizing rationality, the mommy-zeitgeist that nurses all wounds with a sneer.
He was never more wrong than the moment
he exercised masculine strength in the service of psychological castration, denying pain or even the possibility of pain, as outmoded relics of a bygone era. Without pain, who needs men to step up with courage?
What calls for gusto or the rush of energy that addresses emerging chaos and keeps stable everything civilized? Machines cannot answer the call of the shifting seas, and will never deliver the peace that they promise.
All nature requires our shaping,
and so few remain who know how to engage in the struggle for form,
to make life again bearable,
to live out our human potential.

What is the answer to the call of the earth, if not smug desolation,
the paving-over of nature with the concrete
of fixed ideas and mechanical ingenuity?
The answer is life, lived well. The answer is self-understanding and the corresponding knowledge of others, allowing for connection and hope.
The answer is belief in the cycles of birth and acceptance of death as a part of the rhythm.
The answer is thinking again.

All of this has been said before, but now
it gains a new urgency, as I myself am infected
by the urge to sublate. This cold toxin, contagious and ill-advised, fills this poem with pain.
But I name now this pain, and accept it as part of my burden, a cross I must bear to the end of my days, on the way to new freedom,
a freedom from the tyranny of machines and their servants,
a freedom from this desolation of stars.

Act of Worship

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/act-of-worship/

Every orgasm
is an act of worship,
and we cannot escape this
no matter how hard we try.

The Answer

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/the-answer/

She is the answer,
the clarion call,
the deciphering voice…

She is the one who matters.

Perfect Timing

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/perfect-timing/

> Being crazy about a woman like that is always the right thing to do.
>
> The Last Picture Show

> Be gracious
> you woman-maddening
> bull-god.
>
> Homer, Hymn to Dionysus

Time passes. We still remain.
In the aftermath of passion, what hope sustains? I saw her shimmer with the magic of the gods,
no more sane than a wolf that howls at the moon. Was it too soon, or was it perfect timing
to bring us both into ourselves?

Mad Dog

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/mad-dog/

The mad dog lunges
through the ego.
Two become one.

Madness of Stars

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/madness-of-stars/

Sophia, your madness shimmers now out of the ether, in song made lovely by chaos brought into form. I can hear you even now, and I don't know how, but you answer my call with your own, in unison, always reminding, remembering, ready to speak and inform what needs forming. So come fill my life with your song, as I answer with love and the madness of stars. This is all that we are or ever shall be.

Devourer

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/devourer/

Vines shoot out
from her heart, clutching
all who are near, demanding stasis, forbidding movement.
Her roiling vat of shadows
devours her prey.

Toward Sunset

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/toward-sunset/

He walks over sand, past cacti and buzzards picking bones, through the desert heat and cold, toward sunset, the only thing on the horizon.

He hears a slow trickle of water,
but knows one thing:

This stream is polluted.
He walks on.

Ritual

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/ritual/

He walks in silence, and into the mystical chamber, where sunlight touches the dial, letting loose the embers of hope and the shadows that so often flutter away. The light dapples the skin with a cosmic form of grace.

Penelope's Bed

29 August 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/08/29/penelopes-bed/

Odysseus arrives after too much wandering.
At first she does not believe him, although he has passed over two immortal goddesses
who offered him endless sex without consequences,
as well as a princess whose parents begged him to stay.
He knew where his heart was. She tests him with questions, and he knows the answer,
the only answer to life's most important question.
He says their bed cannot be moved. He says that when he built their home, he planted an olive tree in the earth, to bloom
in their marriage room, and the bed, built around it, stays rooted, unless she has chopped it down. Then she knows who he is. Then she knows who she is,
and embraces him. This is the image.
There will be no other. There will be none better.

How Hope Feels

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/how-hope-feels/

Gwen sees the world in white,
and the hearts of people glitter even at airports (which may or may not be totally depraved).
She has eyes for goodness everywhere and loves it, in spite of some evidence to the contrary. She will let me borrow those eyes
for a moment, as I remember how hope feels, and how time's passing cannot extinguish that feeling or the longing for it, no matter how bad things appear.

Patient Expectation

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/patient-expectation/

Under the summer sky, words spread their wings, time passes, and all of love's beautiful things come to roost in patient expectation. There will be an answer one day.

Somewhere New

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/somewhere-new/

Life crashes through the jungles of feeling into somewhere new. The mists of time part and make way for you.

How Close

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/how-close/

How close is too close and how far
is not close enough?

Ravens

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/ravens/

Ravens fly overhead,
a distanced pair,
tethered by invisible strings.

House of the Dead IV

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/house-of-the-dead-iv/

I return again to the house of the dead
where the ghost of Isis haunts these hallowed walls with a face too kind to be true.
Why were these walls sacred? Must it be that they keep out some evil, the kind that wells up in the secret place, when another expresses desire? But why desire? The voice of the call summons pain and the swirling of water,
a whirlpool that drowns all identity in darkening spirals.
What can survive? Have there been too many questions?
Too much revising, softening old stones, that now
the ground itself simply melts?

I would find a place to stand,
or the strength to stand, or the strength to keep out the water, to keep the ground solid and firm. Only then could I open the door to a guest.

The Call of the Wild

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/the-call-of-the-wild/

She answers the call of the wild and descends and arises and finds herself broken, then whole, then broken again.
She had nowhere to go but the wilderness,
leaving the city, only to return a changed figure,
alluring, yes, but now grounded and safer
with fewer erotic temptations.

Erotic Domination

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/erotic-domination/

> …pulled my trigger, now he's dead.
>
> Queen, Bohemian Rhapsody

> We are the only ones that give birth to men.
>
> Plutarch, Sayings of Spartan Women

The family eros ensures control, decides in advance who can love, and when, and how. It determines the pecking order, keeping the smallest small forever.
Evil moves downhill, and the youngest must swallow what no one else wanted to carry. But one can imagine a love unlike this, a domestic life free from the tyranny of erotic domination, laced as it always must be with aggression and the tinge of hate. Can such things be?
It is doubtful, but worth pursuing, because in the final analysis
we are all lovers and cannot escape it, no matter the pain.
But why does the mother use eros?
Can she be so foolish to not understand the damage
of paralyzing the child with confusion, the call to obey and forever obey her small norms? What gives her the right to inflict desolation, to banish the child's own potential for virile endeavors? It is only her fear that makes such things forgivable, appearing necessary to keep the house in order.
But these things are never necessary. Eros is poison in the hands of the mother, and trains the child to switch off his libido forever, leaving him wishing for death and death alone. Why would he not flee from all future encounters? How could he trust them not to be more of the same? And how could he forgive her, and loosen the shackles of hate, and put down the burden that drags him forever down into Hades?

Disagreement

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/disagreement/

I simply disagree
with the modern conception
of what man is,
and I will need twelve-hundred poems
to explain what I mean.

Home Once More

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/home-once-more/

Clouds have their own kind of beauty,
shrouding the mountains in mysterious white,
masking the summits beyond humanity's reach.
Were we not meant to know what's up there on Olympos, or does the mist invite speculation into ourselves and our origins, the staggering pinnacles bringing us home once more?

From Kananaskis

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/from-kananaskis/

Clouds drift over the scent of pine and the vague ash of dwindling fire. The sky is covered, but still makes its presence known.
I am on a journey, just like this place,
with its shifting of rocks and water,
the trees that grow to speckle the landscape and fall when their time is ripe. I will bow to this power, whatever its name. A raven calls, seeking its mate. They belong here, and so do I.

Still Burning

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/still-burning/

Fire dances in the swirling wind and in my heart, awoken now and still burning.

Waitress

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/waitress/

I see the longing, see the desire,
not for me, but for the sacred masculine,
words that can shape wild hearts.
I offer a taste. The waitress smiles, a little bit more than politely. We have been understood.
We have seen each other.

Bikini Preview

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/bikini-preview/

The bikini signifies repression
for men, as revenge for repression of women. It says "You must look, but you cannot touch." It exposes a woman entirely except her erogenous zones, her sole sources of vulnerability and connection. It says "I am impervious to fucking." Is this the message?
Toxic femininity gives no solution to toxic masculinity,
and probably makes it worse. Just go naked.
At least then you remain honest, and free from the violence of half-arousal, the seductions
of the dangling carrot.

Even a goddess can still be fucked
by a hero, and thus appears nude in sculpture and painting.
The bikini says no forever.

The only possible purpose of her allure
is fucking and being fucked.
Has she turned sex to power
in a literal misreading of libido dominandi?
She will never be happy, having made herself impervious to influence. Surely no woman can want what these symbols mean.

We must love each other.
We cannot fight violence with violence
unless we intend to make everything toxic.
The struggle between men and women will never allow total victory.
Let us fight gently.

Bikini Studies

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/bikini-studies/

She gazes
with perfect skin exposed, except
her erogenous zones.
She is seen
but not touched,
and remains unknown.
Can this make her happy?
Or does she pose
for the pleasure
of others?

Pleasure is one possibility,
cruelty another. Does she wish to impose a double bind, inviting and thwarting desire in a single bound?
She wishes to leap over nature, and seeks revenge
for the suffering of centuries of women.
She sets herself free,
and gives man no reason for hope.

The bikini is chastity in disguise,
holy kink, cut off from fertility
and the goddess of love.
It will never satisfy.

What will satisfy? Only a mutual knowing, in toto, especially one that breeds children, willing to bear life's burdens to the end.
She is not empowered by the cheapening of desire, but instead brought down to the level of entertainment.

Would she find the divine
in chastisement, punishment inflicted on men who cannot help gazing
and therefore deserve to be punished?
Or would she find loneliness
when only castrati remain?

What inspires this reflection? Perhaps hidden rage for the overexposure of something sacred,
the desolation of mystery, the final revelation
of woman as shrink-wrapped candy.
Could anything be more blasphemous?

The goddess will not endure the sacrilege and flees to some hidden chamber where love can endure.
Seek her, seeker. She answers.

Orpheus and Ariadne

08 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/08/orpheus-and-ariadne/

Orpheus emerges on Naxos
and finds Ariadne, half-nude,
awaiting her lover, enjoying the sun.
Both have been abandoned, but recognize in each other a sacred power,
the strength to lead others through danger.
What music awaits them?
Can sacral harmonies disrupt the fatal ending, and lead both into a new story?

What's Good For Them

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/whats-good-for-them/

Everything a good man does is done in the service of the goddess of fertility, whom women also serve
if they know what's good for them.

Orpheus and Ariadne II

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/orpheus-and-ariadne-ii/

Orpheus says "You are beautiful."
She smiles, demurely, "I know."
"Has another told you so?"
"One who knew how to tame beasts."
He circles and sits in amazement,
but she does not stir. They lock eyes,
and the stars align.

Diminishing Love

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/diminishing-love/

Shall I fall back into childhood just to remember how it feels, just to taste
the sweet milk of the breast of a woman who can do no wrong? Of course there is no such woman, not even the literal mother,
but she dwells in the imagination
awaiting projection and incarnation. Woe upon us!
I cannot escape her but will not embrace her either.
No less than my manhood is at stake.

Was there ever a mother, or is she imagined only,
a veil disguising a secret self-interest with cruel implications?
How little she knows! And how much she yearns to devour, to soften, to smooth the rough edges and make a man safe for the nursery, where he can never belong.
He has war in him, always, forever, unless he succumbs to her torment, the tempting softness of diminishing love.

She will never stop trying, for try as she might she destroys and then hates her prey. It's a fact that some women use love to abuse, and all will when they feel under siege. I will arm myself, ready to battle with words and to pull away
when the need arrives. I will not be made small,
not for love or any other compensation.

All Poisoned

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/all-poisoned/

It's all poisoned,
everything everyone offers,
and there is no escape from it,
not even here in the mind's eye.

Cruel Disregard

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/cruel-disregard/

What do you have to teach me,
ghost of a hope long past,
still reminding me where I have come from and where I must go? I have learned all your lessons too thoroughly, and now
I must bow, I can only pretend to be whole without you. But I am without you still, cross-purposed and lost in a tangle of growths
that won't reach maturity without an impossible effort.
But there is still one way to you, through the bitter heart, the transgressions of sense and the cruel disregard for the world we call real.
We both know how that feels. We both know what that pain reveals.

Keep Wishing

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/keep-wishing/

Strange how the shifting of leaves
meets the dying heat of the summer sun,
and what once meant mad passion
now simmers. My golden one,
you are still with me, and I haunt the spaces between who you were and would wish to be. But keep wishing.
You're on your way now.

Puzzle

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/puzzle/

How many visages bring me to you and your many forms…I have been the mad lover, doting father, scared son, and the supplicant
bent by the goddess. Which do you prefer?
Or is each just a piece of the puzzle?

Beating Heart

15 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/15/beating-heart/

She walks down
into herself, past the wreckage of too many years spent waiting for something untouchable, something just barely beyond her reach. Does she find it at last at the center, affixed to her beating heart?
Or does she require the heart of another to beat in time with hers?

Shared Dream II

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/shared-dream-ii/

I saw you dream.
It spoke to me,
and woke up my own dream.

I share your dream.
I share it in the deepest part of me.

Sleeping Angels

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/sleeping-angels/

You woke my sleeping angels
and the beast they guard.
Our souls passed through each other,
and I saw your essence.
Only time knows why
this love was hard,
or why we lost our senses.

Homesteading

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/homesteading/

He leaves the city, journeys
as far as his legs will take him, and settles somewhere unknown. Here his manhood responds to the chaos with a new kind of order, one never seen before. Here he finds what he could not find: a chance to build for himself a home that suits
his peculiar eccentricities. Here lies new vigor, the scent of the freshly tilled earth, and the hope that some part of his dreams may come true.
He builds forward and up to the stars.

Men and Women

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/men-and-women/

They see God from different angles
and hunger for each other's view, but each soon grows exasperated
when the other traipses over something sacred.

Awakening

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/awakening/

There was only one way up to the heavens, only one true answer to life's most terrible demands, and her name was Desire, brutal master
but competent friend. She taught birds how to sing, and inspired a hope that would never relinquish its grip. She was there, forever, and always.

Would Buddha relent? Or was suffering inevitable either way? There was something to gain through denial, the clarity of empty vision,
but the main thrust of life does and shall remain
the libido, the center of man's deepest hope.

Yet the inner guide must awaken before man or woman walks free, and there's no guarantee, for this wakening answers a call that comes from another who may or may never appear.

To the Girl on the Bus Tour in Banff

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/to-the-girl-on-the-bus-tour-in-banff/

I never learned your name,
but I knew your face long before this strange gravity brought us around and around again to each other.
You were not yet wise enough to survive
the encounter, and so I refrained, but I saw you wonder as I too wondered how such things come to pass and whether their meaning is true or the illusion
of two lonely souls seeking home.

In My Head

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/in-my-head/

Sure, it's in my head,
but how did it get there?

Dwindling Light

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/dwindling-light/

The results are in. She comes with a love drenched in venom, a closed door masquerading as an open one, dancing in artificial spotlight, never the light of day. Was she really there when morning came, and the gods spoke plainly about what is past, and passing, and to come?
There would be no clearer answer than a shimmer
in the dwindling light…

Unreal Happiness

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/unreal-happiness/

She is overburdened with shame, consumed by the quest for perfection. Though never far from home, she cannot arrive, cannot settle where shadows lie, for her war against shadows is total, and she will not rest until heaven descends from its altar and fills her with unreal happiness.

Dignity

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/dignity/

Sometimes there is just not enough
dignity
to go around.

All Told

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/all-told/

Two muses in the orbit of Sarasota.
One leaves as the other arrives.
Both wear a persona not their own.

Would there be an answer to the startling synchronicity, yet another confusion piled high atop the pyre
of burning hopes and dreams?
It was not as it seemed, it was not the ephemeral wishing of an empty heart, but instead something grander, some meaning pulled down from the stars, to where we are,
still lonely, perhaps, but now caught in a story worth telling. I'll listen and make for myself this memento of whatever meaning falls sharply from heaven and enters my heart. And I'll listen until it's all told.

Slice

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/slice/

She holds a rabbit
and slices through its vital heart,
the seat of fertility.

Knead Through

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/knead-through/

It was only a matter of time before love would arrive and knead through the sexual tangle, bringing peace.

Dimwit

28 September 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/09/28/dimwit/

Even the dimwit, body older than mind,
knows to hold the door for a lady.

How does he know?

Love Reimagined

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/love-reimagined/

I promise to tease you relentlessly
unless you are sad, in which case
I will only tease you a little bit.

This is what all of the war was for,
these tender moments, next to the roaring fire.
The hearth burns hotter for each hour
spent curled up near the flame.

Dragon

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/dragon/

The dragon dwells inside the damsel.
The distress is within.
Slay gently.

Meatloaf and Peas

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/meatloaf-and-peas/

He sits in the kitchen for some reason terrified. The smell of meatloaf and peas would be burned in his mind forever,
a memento of one thing that felt safe, the harbor in a whirling storm.
The cause of that storm would be lost,
but the damage remains.

'Mid the Pines

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/mid-the-pines/

> We believe that some ideas are better than others, and we teach them.
> Brad Lingo, President of Grove City College

We chose it because it felt like home,
a tradition of enquiry and life within which answers can be found. It still speaks and will go on speaking. "What is man?"
these stone buildings seem to ask, in a world that says "Man is whatever he wishes." One place disagrees. The result is community, hope, belonging, and clarity, the root and the branch of good order,
a place to grow and believe, to become something one otherwise could not be. It's a chance to be free in the deeper sense, free from the passions, distractions of a disordered soul, and this gift is a pearl of great price.

Fugue of Space and Mind

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/fugue-of-space-and-mind/

There are only so many avenues, only so many twists and turns for both body and soul in the whirling gears of time. Does it help to rhyme, or are we still dizzy with spinning,
lost in the fugue of space and mind?

Sliced One Last Time

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/sliced-one-last-time/

Healing would not be forthcoming, not for a long time,
though the road winds through many a glimmering village.
There was no escape from the pain, not really, though many would try to light fires or kindle the dwindling stars.
Only pain remained when one looked with suspicion upon the false stories and instruments of control that could only crush life. There were no more sprouts in the concrete, no room for a blossom or bloom
in these shades of doom, this dark canopy of man gone astray from himself and his origins, sliced
one last time from the womb.

Insane Freedom

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/insane-freedom/

The city is full of monsters
grifting an insane freedom, and so many rules that one cannot think straight. When combined, these give some sense of balance, but detached
each can only mean madness.

Shame

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/shame/

Shame usually makes things worse,
if it is not itself the problem,
but this does not stop women everywhere
from shaming to their hearts' content.

Snare of Delilah

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/snare-of-delilah/

Right back down in the throes of forever,
my intellect refuses to die, it refuses to be caught in the snare of Delilah,
where strength is lost for no gain.

Self-sacrifice

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/self-sacrifice/

Self-sacrifice is the meaning of libido,
the ultimate giving, the final surrender,
but where is an object worthy of so much devotion, or one who at least takes the measure of what kind of power she summons?

We're All Traitors Now

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/were-all-traitors-now/

They take dignity, having none to spare,
and assume that you also will find your place
among huddled masses, stretching cold fingers before an insufficient flame. Is revolution coming, or has it passed, or is there no hope at all? Keep your knife sharp, and watch your back.

Ariadne's Shadow

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/ariadnes-shadow/

Ariadne's shadow burns her mark here in the sacred chamber, shaped like a shapely woman transcending body and time…even mind cannot find or explain the answers she brought from below, from the maze of all hearts.
For my part, I'll remember and store here
this story, for any with ears to hear.

The Dance of Men and Women

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/the-dance-of-men-and-women/

The dance of men and women
will go on, despite all protestations,
with no regard for the pain.

Vesta Still Answers

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/vesta-still-answers/

Vesta still answers and will always answer
the call to be born and to die. Sacred hearth, bring to bear what flame lingers in embers left after the cold wind blows.

anti-identity

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/anti-identity/

The ego is not the point, nor is the individual, for there is no self without others, no I without multitudes of influence. Whitman knew this much, and we carry on in his shadow, for what is a person, and what warrants safeguarding? Not the individual's lonely solitude, not some constructed persona, but only the deeper flow of life that moves through us all.

Four Birds

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/four-birds/

Four birds glide in conic spirals, higher and lower and higher still.
Let some tether bind them to earth.
May they find it below their feet.

Last Train

07 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/07/last-train/

I have been on a journey, far away
though here all along, inside these pages and in this heart. But the heart pretends to be civilized, claims a restraint that we know
in face only…what happens to such a heart?
Does it break? Or does it arrive on the train of time, at its destiny, flowing through bumps and bruises, until day comes? I await the last train out of town.

Romance Revisited III

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/romance-revisited-iii/

Why does this ghost reappear (en photo)
after all these years, to haunt me now with reminders of what could have been?
She still smiles that radiant smile,
rocks her cowboy hat, ring on her thumb,
and walks joyfully through the years her two kids and husband. She could have been mine, had I been something else, something suited to life in a house with a woman and the family such situations tend to produce. She was lovely, and still is, but just out of reach for the part of me under the mask,
the part that lives here in these poems,
the part that will never be silenced.

What was this sacred space, this grove
of mind unfurled, enclosing the avenues of possibility? Did Plato beckon, and why was there no resisting the allure of Sophia, even when faced with the warmth of love? Love came and went, but lingers forever, like it always does.

Yet she hasn't changed, and possesses still that spark of illumination that first lit my fire
so long ago, long before so much was lost, never to return again. Other muses appear but few soften my heart like she did, and fewer inspire the hope and trust that I know she knew how to fulfill. And I see her fulfill it even now.

But time presses on. So must I.
As I gaze at the desolate sky, fist raised,
I imagine a safer place for those hearts
whose simplicity grants them a peace unknowable by we who have seen too much. I will do what I can to protect them. I lend them my voice.

I have lent them my heart already.

Who Knows Why

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/who-knows-why/

Who knows why answers
fall from the sky…
from one Penelope to the next
this cold sailor sails on.

Husk

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/husk/

A woman can destroy civilization
in the heart of a man, and the bad ones take advantage, and turn this power into domination, leaving a husk
where there once was a hero.

Shape of the Goddess

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/shape-of-the-goddess/

She descends the stair in bloom and enters the radiant room with a shimmer, like those left by gods when they speak, and she says to strive harder. I must obey.

Lady in the Temple II

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/lady-in-the-temple-ii/

She barges in,
traipsing mud and touching everything, shattering priceless relics, and runs off with the silver.

In My Experience

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/in-my-experience/

In my experience
women wound me,
steal my strength,
and give nothing in return.

Now do we understand each other?

Both

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/both/

It's not you
or me.
It's both of us.

Two Moons

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/two-moons/

There would be no final union,
no coming together in the cosmic sense.
There was too much resistance, and no one could join two together without repercussions.
The orbiting would continue, two moons rotating, just out of reach. There was no better way to avoid catastrophic impact.

To the Girl in the Library

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/to-the-girl-in-the-library/

You catch my eye and I yours.
We share a forbidden moment of electric possibility. You hide, you return to the scene of the glance,
you slide and provide a better view, you pass by
on your way to the books behind,
and I notice your scent.
Do you know what you're doing?
Or is this how you learn? I see you need something from the bottom shelf,
but remember this lesson: I like your dance,
but save it
until you can love and be loved in return.

Soothing Illusions

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/soothing-illusions/

> You won't feel a thing.
>
> Ancient Wisdom

> Everything is going to be okay.
>
> Ibid.

There is a class of statements
that we only say when they are false, because they are false. They are soothing illusions, designed to counterbalance uncomfortable truths. Beware the soothing of silver-tongued manipulators! Don't let their false be your true. But we need some illusions to survive here.
We simply can't swallow all truths.

Bottle

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/bottle/

You must never leave.
I will bottle your essence
and place it here, just in case.

Staring Still

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/staring-still/

I stood staring for longer than would be polite, and you stared too…before taking flight. Was that glance not the surest sign, and the look of pain that came after?
You knew I knew, and we both know now that these ties that bind are unlike any other.
I doubt your escape, or mine. I doubt that we could escape, or find any way out of love.
I stood staring, and part of me stands staring still until you come down offstage into destiny.

Remembering Well

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/remembering-well/

I cannot escape you, you from the poems.
Are you woman or dream? I can't tell,
but I sit here remembering well what you meant
on a cold day in February, a warm day in June,
and the many dark nights in between…

Holy Invitation

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/holy-invitation/

I can see her dancing her dance
for the stars, and I wonder what dance waits where we are…

a holy invitation unopened sits still in an envelope on the table.

Glance

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/glance/

A glance in the library reminds of another, one prior,
the glance that still echoes months later, refining
my heart with its power…

Beyond Words

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/beyond-words/

I cannot explain it,
it's beyond words,
beyond words even
for a poet, which really is saying something…

Negotiation

15 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/15/negotiation/

We live on the border
of spirit and instinct
in the midst of a tense negotiation.

Democracy

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/democracy/

I don't like Democracy
because most people are stupid.
I like Democracy
because leaders are stupid too.

Article of Faith

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/article-of-faith/

Our article of faith
is a blank page…
we worship that page
with all the zeal we can muster.

Strange Breeze

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/strange-breeze/

The attunement of lovers
in a strange breeze, that brings some to their knees, and brings others
to power…let it bring all to friendship.
Let it shine the way forward.

Inner Beloved

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/inner-beloved/

You do not hate men,
you hate the inner masculine,
your beloved within. You must come to terms.
You must hear what he has to say.

Beatrice, Not Virgil

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/beatrice-not-virgil/

Beatrice, not Virgil,
knows the way
to heaven.

Not Afraid

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/not-afraid/

A damaged woman, wounded
by too much love neglected, too many unseen glances and gestures forgotten,
cries out now for help in a storm…now furious,
now self-abasing, now recalcitrant, now cute
and cuddly, she knows not what she is.
Like Jonah I flee to the belly of the whale.
Must I play Hosea and love what consumes and destroys? Or must I be more like Caesar, proud and not afraid to say no?

Cold Disregard

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/cold-disregard/

Why this sudden anger, bouncing from pain to pain, as if
to assuage some deep grief hidden down in some vein…I can claim to be happy, I can claim to be free,
but between you and me there are chasms
that blank and deceive, and beyond them
I only see Nothing, the dark shade of life's unperturbable silence, the cold disregard into which all desire must fade.

Brown Hawk

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/brown-hawk/

Brown hawk soars over white in a gentle breeze, blue sky
always in view, never free.

Call on Her

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/call-on-her/

The coaxing would never stop, the unending calls to canalize self towards this that and the other…
the only way out was to find the center, the point
of eternal gravity, the depths of the soul, and to learn her name, to call on her
any time decisions are made.

You Still Are

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/you-still-are/

I still weep for the thought of you, nightwatcher, eternal muse, the one from the stars…yes, you are what I wanted. You still are.

The Chase (She Who Flees)

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/the-chase-she-who-flees/

> Man is in love and loves what vanishes,
> what more is there to say?
>
> Yeats, Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen

Quite a lot, it turns out.
A flame flickers in the breeze,
but it does not go out, does not vanish,
if one can hold on through the ceremonies
of presence, summoning again she who flees.
She brings men to their knees, and she does not obey, but she thrives at the center and still waits for visitors, even those not yet worthy. She changes their essence, or wakens their essence, with fire,
the spark of eternal desire, the flame
of the stars, placed deep in hearts
brought to life by the hope of fulfillment that never burns out. She knows what she's about,
and her supplicants cannot help asking her where she is going and where she has been.

Does she vanish for those who know?
Or does she entice to the chase?

Starlady

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/starlady/

I come again to this sacred space, naked and ready to learn…who can teach me? Who knows the way down from heaven and into ourselves,
when those very selves carry heaven,
and earth waits with gravity, taunting any Icarus? Who knows
if not the inner guide, sweetest muse,
the starlady who speaks in riddles
and answers all answers with questions?

Well-Nourished Soil

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/well-nourished-soil/

We must be brought back to ourselves over and over. We keep on forgetting that home is within and that happiness grows from well-nourished soil, not from altering the wind and the rain.

Abundance, Not Need

24 October 2026
https://poems.culturing.net/2026/10/24/abundance-not-need/

What terrible things they have made you believe in the name of care, in the name of their own care, for you, but really for them…
They don't care, not really, not if what you need falls outside of their paradigm, the one where they get to be big, no matter what happens to you.

True care comes from a surplus of strength,
nowhere else, so how dare they commiserate and expect to make anything better? Love is not a snuggle in grimy streets but a daring adventure requiring extraordinary strength and devotion to avoid a wreck.
I will not wreck. I will see love through, and I will not bring any on board who cannot hold their own in a storm, which cannot be avoided, as wave-tossed hearts grapple over where to find land.

I am not a storehouse that fills a need or a meal to satisfy hunger. I am a man, and until this is understood, I walk proudly
and give no devotion, but spare no generosity either.
I give from abundance, not need.

Index

•• A Bed Neglected 1173
•• A Blend of Struggles 626
•• A Culminating of Destiny 1219
• A culture in which we can thrive 495
•• A Glimpse 1157
••• A Home of My Own Design 591
• A Man at Last 1048
•• A Moon of Surprising Size 909
• A more tolerant order 292
•• A New Day 975
• A New Here 794
• A New Way 391
•• A Platonist declares 221
••• A poem 93
•• A Possible Salve 1220
•• A Raid on Delphi 363
• A Relief 454
••• A Resonant Ordeal 619
••• A Seat at the Table 640
••• A Signal in Smoke 738
•• A silence that no one has heard 108
•• A Start 466
•• A Sudden Joy 1191
••• A Time for Beginning 516
•• A Time is Coming 438
•• A Typical Day 383
••• A walk through a graveyard 110
• A Warning 472
•• A Woman You Admire 1012
••• Abundance, Not Need 1335
••• Abundant Fuel 764
• Academia 125
•• Access 824
•• Act of Worship 1239
••• Adagio Romance 1195
• After "A Late Walk" by Robert Frost 258
••• After Lincoln 159
• After Reagan 194
• After the Fall 94
• After Tomorrow 250

•• Aftermath 111
••• Afterthought on the Romantics 242
• Against Ice Sculptures 143
• Against the Cold 1124
•• Ahura Mazda (the Question Remains) 296
• Aletheian 227
•• All as One 453
•• All Else Could Be Forgiven 1013
• All Has Been Forsaken 120
• All Man Has Been 424
••• All Must Again Be Decided 447
• All past times are terrible 180
• All Poisoned 1268
•• All Rise 519
•• All Silence 245
••• All that could be lost again 558
••• All the Tender Pathos 172
•• All Those Ages Ago 375
••• All Told 1283
••• All Too Soon 514
• Already Thinking of Love 1016
• Altar 943
•• Always 1176
•• Am I Right? 698
• America (Northeast) 124
•• America or Aristotle 127
•• Amidst the shadows 606
••• An Ear to the Whole 627
•• An Example 174
••• Anatomy of Shadows 849
••• Ancient Masters 478
•• Angry, Solid Blue 548
•• Anima 1041
• Anima Dialogues 1047
•• Anima Song 1102
•• Animus Possession 1095
• Another Destination 598
••• Another ending 85
•• Another Hand 667
•• Another Life Beckons 646
•• Another Me 1200
• Another New Day 1146
•• anti-identity 1301

••• Anti-Nature 448
• Any Longer 947
•• Approaching Song 653
••• Ariadne 549
•• Ariadne II 771
••• Ariadne's Shadow 1298
••• Arrival 364
•• Article of Faith 1323
•• As All Time Passes By 460
• As Ever 246
•• As I Wander 45
• As If Love Can't Be Questioned 711
•• As Life May Yet Be 283
••• As Only You Can 541
••• As She Was 631
•• As She Will 305
•• Assassination 467
•• At Eleusis 309
••• At Sea 228
•• At the Entrance 916
•• At the Matinée 1005
•• At The Same Time 850
••• Ave Maris Stella 265
••• Awakening 1277
•• Babylon 856
••• Back to the Mines 268
•• Banishing Night 336
•• Barrel of Monkeys 418
• Beasts 486
•• Beatific Visions 217
••• Beating Heart 1272
•• Beatrice Among the Daffodils 148
•• Beatrice and Penelope 583
••• Beatrice Laughs 1105
••• Beatrice, Not Virgil 1326
• Being 126
• Believe in the Dawn 456
••• Belly of the Whale 211
•• Belonging 105
• Beneath the Willow Bough 1099
•• Better Care 1010
• Better Judgment 350
•• Better Things 1126

- Better to Know 927
- Beyond Good and Evil 1101
- Beyond Me 792
- Beyond Power 188
- Beyond the Locked Door 426
- Beyond Words 1320
- Bikini Preview 1261
- Bikini Studies 1262
- Bind 359
- Bird sits still 116
- Birth 49
- Bitter Taste 1018
- Bitterness 952
- Black Sheep 896
- Blanche 1081
- Blank Space 352
- Blaze 894
- Blaze II 913
- Blossom 608
- Blossom II 805
- Body/Mind 942
- Bones (How Things Stand) 396
- Bones on the Inside 586
- Both 1311
- Both How and Why 345
- Both True and False 630
- Bottle 1315
- Broken Wing 552
- Brown Hawk 1329
- Burn 904
- Burn What Must Burn 1098
- Burning Burning Burning 722
- By Example 405
- Call on Her 1330
- Calling 635
- Calmly Without Fear 574
- Calypso 690
- Calypso Returns 1008
- Can It Make Us Happy? 742
- Can't Be Put Out 702
- Can't Wait 703
- Care Again 494
- Care For Yourself 1015

••• Carefully 432
•• Caretaking 1087
••• Carried Away 693
• Catalyst and Observer 881
••• Caught in the Gears 487
•• C'est la vie 498
••• Chiaroscuro Girl 613
••• Child you are the water 86
• Children 843
•• Children of Earth and Sky 1129
•• children of terror 95
•• Christian Siren 1143
• Chrysalis 169
• Cities Are Natural 1043
•• Civilization for the First Time 555
• Clarity is like Death 354
•• Classes Begin 736
• Cleverness 867
•• Closed Door 938
• Clothes Back On 701
•• Coauthor 644
• Codependency 1153
••• Cold Disregard 1328
• Come Again 298
• Come Again, Vesta 1193
• Come and See 688
••• Come What May 791
• Compromise 274
• Congregation 1059
•• Connections Worth Having 571
• Contempt 1070
•• Contra Kant 831
•• Contrition 327
•• Corners of Strangeness 528
••• Corporate Man 340
•• Countrified 97
••• Cracks Forming 638
• Craftsman 225
••• Crickets 145
••• Crimson Days in the Depths of Time 263
• Critical Velocity 765
• Crossroads 406
•• Crown Jewel 785

••• Cruel Disregard	1269
•• Cruelty	873
•• Cruelty II	924
•• culmination	318
• Cultural Marxism	451
•• Culture the Past	832
•• Dance of Hope and Doubt	929
• Dark Abyss	616
•• Dark Passion	1204
•• Darkness Becomes You	261
•• Dawn	101
•• Daylight	539
• Dealbreaker	959
•• Debut	672
•• Deciding What To Do	733
• Decision	599
•• Democracy	1322
• Demonstration	734
••• Devourer	1244
••• Dig For Some Hope	1052
••• Dignity	481
•• Dignity	1282
••• Diminishing Love	1267
•• Dimwit	1286
•• Dionysus at the Matinée	1104
•• Disagreement	1256
• Discard Them Already	395
•• Do What I Say	918
•• Doctor of Words	399
•• Doubt	420
••• Dragon	1288
••• Drawing Blood	762
••• Dream Wisely	509
• Dreaming	483
• Dreaming	1093
•• Dreams	349
•• Dry No More (Real Enough)	1218
•• Dual Polarity	730
• Duty	324
•• Dwindle	289
•• Dwindling Light	1280
••• Dying Roses	713
• Earnest Contemplation	1030

•	Ebb and Flow	776
•••	Eccentricities	768
•	Egotism spreads	68
•	Electricity	200
•	Elite Waters	277
•••	Elsewhere	621
••	Emerge	213
••	Emptiness That None Can Understand	286
••	Encounter For Solo Violin	1194
•	Energies Flow	1120
•	Entropy	819
••	Envelop	612
•	Epilogue	968
•••	Erotic Domination	1255
•	Eternal Winter	910
••	Eudaimonia	337
•••	Eudaimonia	1115
••	Even In Our Own Hearts	1169
•••	Ever Ready to Blossom Again	517
•	Everyone's Wrong	477
••	Evil Afoot	842
••	Excavation	581
••	Extended Silence	652
••	Extraordinary Discipline	876
••	Eyes Open	796
•••	Face the Day	553
••	Fading Feeling	205
•	Falling	900
••	Fantasy	958
••	Far Away	198
••	Farewell	718
•	Farewell, Isis	546
••	Father Knows Best	737
••	Feeling Dry (A Pain From Long Ago)	827
•••	Feet Firmly Planted on Earth	727
•••	Feet of Rain	230
••	Female Deity	1134
••	Fertility Exam	852
•	Fetch It	699
••	Few and Far Between	582
••	Field	815
••	Fill In The Blanks	841
••	Final Diagnosis	963

•• Finally Alive 729
••• Find Your Way Home 1094
•• Finding Herself 1202
•• Finding Sophia 1063
• Fire 887
• Fire and Earth 1085
•• Firm Beginning 1069
••• First Dance 995
•• Flirting With Danger 777
• Floating Castle 999
•• Flood (Too Much Speaking) 577
• Flowering 170
••• Flying Lessons 347
•• Flying Lessons II 1208
••• For an Old Lover 80
•• For Eternity 1222
• For Once 618
•• For So Long I've Dreamed 991
••• For the First Time 1116
• For the Innocent 147
• For the Love of Aristotle 129
• For What Purpose 1051
• Forbidden Fruit 1199
••• Forever To Yourself Be True 682
•• Forgive My Sternness 919
••• Four Birds 1302
••• Fragments Shored Against Ruin 64
• Free Will 834
• Freedom's End 259
•• Friend in Need 977
• Friend To Nothing 772
•• From Afar 725
• From Beyond 500
••• From Kananaskis 1258
•• From Place to Place 1034
•• From The Tropics 787
•• From Time to Time 390
• Fugue of Space and Mind 1291
•• Full Gravity 994
• Full Strength 1082
• Fuller Integration 1131
• Game Over 957
•• Gaseous At Last 992

•• Genius 489
•• Getting There 696
• Gettysburg 243
• Ghosts 755
•• Ghosts From Another Room 1128
• Girl Who Cried Love 956
•• Glance 1319
• Glass Castle 1161
• Go not alone 144
•• Good Enough 457
•• Good Eyes 321
• Good Fruits 837
• Good Left Undone 471
• Governed, Not Destroyed 775
• Grains of Salt 1025
• Growing Up 870
••• Growth 547
•• Habits 341
•• Had You Been There 529
••• Hair on Fire 846
•• Half Mad, Half Civilized 1002
••• Handkerchief 724
•• Hard to Explain 518
•• Hard to Tell 878
•• Hardly Beginning 629
•• Hardly two millennia 511
• Head Held High 1067
•• Healing 826
• Heaven and Hell 1190
•• Heaven's Feigned Bliss 1206
•• Hegel 267
• Heidegger in Japan 167
• Heights Worth Exploring 840
• Helen 1075
• Heloise 940
•• Help and Not Harm 607
•• Her Cool Touch 1171
••• Her Sky (New At Last) 636
• Here on Earth and Now 1113
•• Hero's Journey 1108
•• Hetaera 1118
• Hiccupping Whiskey 1149
• History 121

•• History 262
• Hitler's Bunker 231
••• Hitler's Grave 377
•• Hole 130
•• Hollow Moon Rises 983
•• Holy Brew 890
••• Holy Invitation 1318
• Home From Elysium 409
•• Home Once More 1257
•• Home Right Here 1054
••• Homecoming 165
•• Homesteading 1275
••• Hook 885
•• Hope 594
• Horizons 278
••• Hors D'Oeuvres 795
• Hot and Cold 112
••• House of the Dead III 972
••• House of the Dead IV 1253
• How Are You 759
•• How Close 1251
•• How Hope Feels 1248
•• How I Hear It 836
• How Much 810
•• How much love 538
• How Much Time 526
•• How to Garden 560
•• How we grow sane 988
•• Husk 1307
•• I believe 726
•• I could do no other 567
•• I could go to her 533
•• I don't want to let go 1215
• I have known women 362
• I have wandered streets 61
••• I have withdrawn from the world 137
•• I Know How You Feel 660
••• I Met the Goddess 1217
• I speak for the people 419
•• I went to her 981
• I Will Live Well 858
• I Would 1183
•• Ideal Republic 346

••• If Any Vigor Remains 669
••• If God Speaks, He Whispers 84
••• If He Would Speak Today 310
• If I Can 751
•• If I Could 993
••• If I Yearn For More 440
• If Not Hers 1210
• If there are still men 69
•• If tomorrow will be any better 559
• Imagine 886
• In Any Case 264
• In Memory 276
• In My Experience 1310
••• In My Head 1279
•• In Open Air 1152
•• In Our Midst 449
•• In Search of the Face 1232
• In the Beginning 150
• In the depths of it 358
••• In the Field 365
• In the Kitchen 1228
•• In the Mind Alone 1170
•• In This Field 649
•• In this hour of wakening 369
••• Industrial Man 222
•• Inexorably Ever After 355
•• Inexperienced 920
• Initiation 979
• Inner Beauty 809
••• Inner Beloved 1325
•• Inner Harbor 59
•• Innocence 934
•• Insane Freedom 1293
•• Inside You All Along 1055
••• Inside You, Dormant 935
•• Integrate the Shadow 1107
••• Into Mortals 1213
• Into The Abyss 833
••• Into the Sea 417
• Intuition 807
• Inventory 1039
•• Irrigation 712
• Is This Love? 658

- It is not for me 251
- It may also help you 425
- It Takes Two 681
- Itself as a Prize 458
- Jesus Again 1178
- Jesus Calls 1198
- Journey Begins 1160
- Journey of the Self 950
- Journeying Ones 492
- Jungle 735
- Just For Us 659
- Just Let Me Know 648
- Just One Moment More 535
- Just Time 964
- Justice 463
- Katana 808
- Keener Insight and Better Plans 505
- Keep It Sharp 892
- Keep Wishing 1270
- Kennedy's Peace 382
- Kindle the Flame 469
- Kindling 162
- King Henry in the Playpen 134
- Knead Through 1285
- Labor of Love 845
- Labor Pains 531
- Labyrinth 949
- Lady in the Dark 151
- Lady in the Rain 232
- Lady in the Temple 153
- Lady in the Temple II 1309
- L'amour n'est pas 1029
- Larger Accomplishments (Pragmatism) 304
- Lark (She Could Fly) 754
- Last Train 1303
- Leave Me 371
- Legion of Incubi 1001
- Less Imposing Principles 493
- Less perfect than it seemed 544
- Let Go 203
- Let Your Body Explain 907
- Letting Go 868
- Liberty and Justice 214

••• Life Is Strange 747
•• Life of a Certain Kind 1179
•• Life Over Victory 428
••• Light 206
•• Light and Shadow 1133
•• Light Bent by Earth 501
•• Like A Fever 761
• Like No Angel 291
••• Lincoln's Memory 155
• Little Bird 320
•• Live By Dying 774
••• Live Wire 665
•• Lone wolf howls 119
• Lonelier 926
••• Longing 91
••• Look Inward 1042
•• Lord will it also be sweet 515
• Loss of Power 1164
•• Lost Forest 185
• Lost Voice 757
•• Love Calls 651
• Love Can Be Done 677
• Love conquers little 557
•• Love is a flame 551
•• Love is made 187
• Love Left Unsaid 779
••• Love Must Come True 611
•• Love Reimagined 1287
•• Love to Believe 1158
••• Love Waits 1137
•• Love Yourself 1122
•• Lover and Guide 974
•• Lovers' Bond 945
•• Lyceum 209
••• Machine State of Mind 442
••• Machines and Their Servants 1237
•• Mad Dog 1242
••• Made In America 103
••• Madness of Stars 1243
•• Make It Last 802
••• Make Me More Worthy 601
•• Make my dreams true 540
••• Make Ourselves Anew 675

- Make the Growing Things Grow 1106
- Making Sausage 184
- Man of Peace 1159
••• Many, Instead of One 490
•• Many Smiles 527
•• Marriage 140
•• Marriage Bed 550
•• Marriage Bed II 835
- Marxists 275
•• Master/Slave Dialectic 922
•• Matinée 749
•• Maybe for the Last Time 609
•• Meaning 1181
••• Meant For Your Ears 645
•• Meatloaf and Peas 1289
•• Megalopolis 70
•• Memorandum 854
•• Men and Women 1276
••• Menagerie of Rules 331
•• Mere Dream 800
•• Messy Heart 928
•• 'Mid the Pines 1290
•• Mild Bitterness 1096
•• Milton Usurped 131
•• Mingled Being 233
- Miseducation 579
•• Modern times 47
•• Moldy Thinking 360
•• Monotheism 330
••• More alarming by the day 513
•• More Authentic 434
- More Than One Power 412
•• More Than Power 915
•• Mother and Son 139
•• Motivated 788
- Motivation 1142
•• Much In Common 871
•• Much More Down Below 799
•• Mulch by the Scoop 207
- My people 63
•• Mysteries 115
- Mysteries 855
•• Myth at Twilight 208

•• Naked But Unashamed 684
•• Naomi 114
•• Narcissism 1057
••• Near Mountains 215
•• Nearly Bound 773
•• Needed Alarm 1014
•• Needed Inner Work 1083
••• Negotiation 1321
• Never Been Wrong 502
•• Never One-Sided 962
••• Never What It Used To Be 429
•• New Adventures 1097
•• New Beginning 960
• New Clarity 969
• New Dawn 575
• New Future Begins 931
•• New Healing 436
•• New Hearts 512
•• New Moon Phase 683
•• New Mountain 823
• New Opportunities 1114
• New Self 1110
• New Vitality 1092
••• Next to the Flame 895
•• Night Sweats of the American Dream 293
••• Nixon at the Threshold of the Lincoln Memorial 128
•• No Day But Today 708
• No Entry Beyond 252
• No Ken At All 917
• No Leg Up 491
• No Longer Sand 668
•• No Matter How Civilized 671
• No More 439
• No Other Way 700
•• No Reason 248
•• No Single Force 348
•• No Way Out 556
••• No Will to Deceive 256
•• Not Afraid 1327
••• Not All is Lost 603
• Not Even Rebirth 1119
••• Not even sure who to ask 306
•• Not Meant For This World 617

- Not Out of the Woods 1197
- Not Quite At Peace 620
- Not Rational 903
- Not So Useful Anymore 710
- Not Sole Composer 634
- Not the Sky 1155
- Not Today 664
- Not Too Soon 628
- Not What I Hoped 622
- Not Without Fuel 786
- Not Without Reason 135
- Notes for Mr. Pound 87
- Nothing 525
- Nothing but Chaos 480
- Nothing Changes 572
- Nothing Says I Love You 1207
- Now and Then 499
- Nutrition by Faith Alone 288
- Obvious By Now 813
- Odds of Success 822
- Offerings 1061
- Old Flames 238
- Old House 182
- On Nothing 132
- On the Meaning of Blue at the Matinée 1023
- On the Side of the Earth 530
- On the Verge 476
- On this rock 226
- On Wading 133
- On Whose Authority 313
- One More Cave 122
- One More Line 503
- One of Those Days 504
- One of Us 239
- One Too Few 643
- Ongoing Flow of Dreams 1172
- Only As Humans 847
- Only Begin 88
- Only in the Waiting 647
- Only Shadow 1011
- Only to Strengthen 866
- Only Together 1166
- Only Your Heart 687

•• Open Hearts 715
•• Open onto other things 107
•• Opened Door 625
•• Openness to Pain 1141
••• Origins II 401
••• Orpheus and Ariadne 1264
•• Orpheus and Ariadne II 1266
•• Other Skies 1227
•• Our Next Lives 740
••• Out came a cry 109
•• Out of Doors 58
••• Out of Myself 1162
•• Out on the Frontier 410
• Out there in history 496
•• Out to Plant a Garden 96
••• Outside the Law 510
•• Over the Atlantic 240
••• Overflowing 781
• Pain 961
•• Pain, Real Enough 1074
•• Pain That One Calls Home 343
••• Paper Tower 803
•• Paper Tower II 986
••• Paper Tower III 1017
•• Paper Tower IV 1036
•• Paper Tower V 1086
• Participation Mystique 1022
•• Parting 76
•• Parting Words 967
•• Parting Words Reconsidered 1020
• Parts of Vanda 879
•• Passion chokes out thinking 536
•• Patient Expectation 1249
•• Peeking Eyes 1006
••• Penelope's Bed 1247
•• Perfect Timing 1241
•• Perhaps Not 884
• Perspicuity (For Example) 50
• Persuasion 260
•• Phalanx of Mind 191
•• Phenomenology of Science 189
••• Phoenix 632
•• Phony 955

•• Pile of Handkerchiefs 1084
• Pilgrims 497
•• Plain and True 308
••• Plant in the Dark 691
•• Plant It 554
•• Planting Time 168
••• Plants in Their Soil 479
•• Playing with Fire 953
•• Pliable by Nature 407
•• Plurality 593
•• Poor Man's Lover 1031
•• Possibilities 705
•• Postscript to Venus in Fur 1103
••• Power 176
••• Practicing 801
• Predicament 1234
• Predication 181
••• Preferring Penelope 1077
• Prepared To Make Good 818
••• Presence 820
••• Progress 48
•• Puella Aeterna 666
• Pull Me In 760
•• Puzzle 1271
••• Quarter Moon 744
••• Quiet, Quiet River 568
•• Rainbow 1214
•• Raphael's Madonna 996
•• Rapt Futility 379
•• Rarely Tempted Again 1076
•• Ravens 1252
•• Ready 1073
••• Ready For Change 402
•• Real Strength 901
•• Reasonable Measure 218
• Red Tinge on East Star 408
•• Regular Release 789
• Remember The Ladies 797
••• Remembering Well 1317
•• Repressed Lover 946
•• Resist Nature 899
• Respect 944
•• Response to a Query 430

• Rest and Recover 563
•• Rest Unassured 287
• Risible Time 249
•• Rising Halfway 661
••• Ritual 1246
••• Rolling Waves 339
••• Romance Revisited 56
••• Romance Revisited III 1304
•• “Romance Revisited,” revisited 123
•• Room For Doubts 812
••• Rosie 138
•• Rule By Consent 416
•• Ruling Rod 891
• Rupture 888
••• Sacred Candle 1186
•• Sacred Fire 1156
•• Saint Teresa 1224
•• Sainthood 141
•• Sandcastles 241
••• Sara 161
••• Savage Dew 427
• Savage Humanity 1130
•• Saving Daylight 307
• Saving Earth 193
•• Saying New Sayings 344
• Scattershot 1091
••• Scents of the Divine 71
•• Schedule 723
•• Scheduled Procreation 584
•• Science and Technology 204
•• Searching for Occupancy 1111
•• Searching For You 1196
•• Second Nature 875
• Seed 685
•• Seed of Love 970
•• Seeds of a Dying Rose 1211
• Seeds of You 720
•• Seeking Authorization 443
• Seeking Shelter 1071
••• Self and Stars 1235
• Self-love 966
••• Self-sacrifice 1296
• Send in the Cavalry 1000

•• Sending Signs 455
•• Sense of the Darkness 656
•• Set to Expire 452
• Sex 897
• Sexual Awakening 905
• Shadow (Wherever Light Shines) 673
• Shadows 971
• Shame 1294
••• Shape of the Goddess 1308
••• Shared Dream 580
•• Shared Dream II 1273
••• Shattered Image, Fallen Breast 186
••• She Stands For Something 1184
•• She Waits As She Waits 1192
••• She's There 473
••• Short of a Miracle 573
••• Show Me the Goddess 1175
•• Sick With Struggle 284
•• Silent Repose 614
•• Sleeping Angels 1274
• Slice 1284
••• Sliced One Last Time 1292
•• Slumber Much Better 279
•• Small All the Same 300
•• Smoothie 564
•• Snare of Delilah 1295
• So Very Greek 303
• So Was I 641
•• So Wrong 1236
•• Socrates and Confucius 219
•• Soft Inner Knowledge 1053
• Solitary Bird 1109
•• Some Brighter Day 1165
•• Some Happy Song 1090
••• Some Men 338
•• Some Natures 311
•• Some Other 325
• Some Penelope Awaits 1009
• Someone Tell Wittgenstein 387
•• Something About Plato 316
•• Something Serious 982
••• Somewhere New 1250
• Somewhere Other Than Belief 470

- Somewhere She Smiles 741
- Somewhere, Somehow 523
•• Somnambulance 53
•• Song 77
••• Song of Sophia 51
•• Songs of Youth 55
••• Soon Will I Love You In Return 798
•• Soothing Illusions 1314
•• Sophia Again 985
•• Sources 314
- Sources II 373
•• Speak It Out Loud 444
•• Specimens 280
•• Spelunking 650
- Spelunking II 1080
•• Spin Gently 654
- Spiraling 356
- Spring Cleaning 272
•• Stable Hearth 941
- Stand Up For Yourself 889
- Standard Repertoire? 756
•• Stardust 1177
••• Staring Still 1316
••• Starlady 1333
•• Start at the Center 1112
•• Starting Again 709
••• Still Burning 1259
•• Still Human Beings 1221
•• Still More 400
- Still Point of Wholeness 1040
•• Stop Being Human 1167
•• Stop the Bombing 329
•• Storm Still Raging 1231
••• Strange Breeze 1324
- Strange Predicament 990
- Strange That I Do Not Regret 1024
- Strangeness of the Ordinary 385
••• Strangers 285
- Streets I Never Knew 201
•• Strength 863
•• Strength for Love 1147
••• Strength II 921
- Strong Enough Now 793

••• Stronger Knowledge 392
•• Stronger Still 912
•• Struggle, Promethea 750
• Sturdy Example 1062
• Submission in Disguise 386
•• Succubus 930
••• Such Surprises Must Be 234
• Sufficiently Motivated 853
•• Surely We Know Best 461
• Surgeon or Assassin 893
• Sweet Sophia 1212
•• Sweetheart 851
•• Sweetheart Like You 908
•• Synchronicities 748
•• Take These To Heart 1026
•• Talking To Myself 732
••• Teach Me How To Love You 663
•• Teachers' Lounge 906
••• Technology 196
• Tell Me About Yourself 778
•• Tell Me I'm Pretty 1100
•• Terror 117
• Terror Remembered 177
• Tethered to Freedom 459
•• Thanks 1203
•• That Door 1150
•• That Hollow Moon 532
• That Line 576
• That which wants to be said 381
•• The Abbey 393
• The Absurd 75
•• The Alchemy of Ourselves 1132
•• The Answer 1240
•• The Beast In Man 844
• The bigness of the sky 79
•• The Bird in the Glue Trap 98
•• The Burdens of Pregnancy 898
••• The Call of the Wild 1254
•• The Canyon of Life and Death 1201
• The Center (Contra Hegel) 589
• The Central Dream 731
••• The Chase (She Who Flees) 1332
••• The Choir 72

•• The Clock 475
•• The Curtain Falls 520
• The Dance of Life 766
•• The Dance of Men and Women 1299
•• The Dark Lady 1151
• The Darkest Possibilities 932
• The day is dark 83
• The Discipline of Virtue 484
•• The Dream of the Birds 624
••• The Drums of Alexander 299
•• The End of It 1205
•• The End of Suffering 81
•• The End of Time 92
••• The Enduring and Unchanging Dao 166
••• The Eternal Dance 706
•• The Flux 431
•• The Form of the Matter 507
••• The Fragrance of Love 1233
•• The Fulcrum of Time 468
•• The Game of Life 1004
••• The Girl and the Stag 615
••• The Goal 1056
• The Gospel According to Us 254
• The Great Mortality (Famine, Death, Rebirth) 74
• The Great Motion 164
•• The Ground is Lava 235
•• The Habit of Loving 877
•• The Habit of Silence 1229
••• The Hard Road In Between (Madonna/Whore) 936
• The Hard Rock of Reality 590
• The hollow part of me 600
••• The House of the Dead 367
•• The House of the Dead II 398
••• The Lady 142
••• The Lady Knows 158
• The Lady Sings for Hobbes 149
• The Lady Speaks of Progress 152
••• The Lady Will Not Slumber 984
••• The Loss of Justice 485
••• The Mad Goddess 1032
••• The Mad Goddess II 1038
•• The man who knows 44
• The Man Who Speaks Plainly 1182

••• The Missing Piece 1226
•• The Most Peaceful Stream 389
• The Muse 102
•• The New Bird 136
•• The New Frontier 224
•• The New Science 99
•• The New World 100
•• The Night of the Pigtails 816
•• The One That Deserves To Be Heard 689
•• The one who will understand 543
• The One You Will Be 864
• The only thing left 1028
•• The Other Half 783
•• The Other Side 565
•• The Pain of Knowledge 595
•• The Pain of Reality 882
• The Path of an Insect 784
•• The Presence of Love 537
• The Present 578
• The Promise of the Lady 290
••• The Promises of Birth 1078
•• The Protestant 326
• The Punished Become The Punishers 680
•• The Purpose of Power 1154
• The Quest for the Immortal Self 294
•• The Question of Democracy 315
•• The Real Thing 1189
• The Realm of Reason 302
•• The Reason For Discipline 874
•• The Rebuke of Venus 973
• The Right Occasion to Strike 1144
•• The Right Person 1223
•• The Ring (What Your Desire Is For) 655
•• The Sacred Feminine 1168
••• The Scientist 328
••• The Secrets of Country Living 113
•• The Sexual Development of Exceptional People 817
••• The Ship of Rome 421
• The Shroud 175
•• The Simple Self 1049
• The soil we have tilled 639
• The Sound a Plant Makes 295
•• The Source of Most Problems 482

••• The Stag Returns 1163
••• The Task of Man 441
••• The Thin Veil 332
•• The Throne of Cyrus 297
••• The Troubles of Love 686
••• The View Is Lovely 704
•• The Way of the Night 319
•• The Whole Story 1230
•• The Wind and My Place in It 465
••• The wind in the leaves 171
•• The Winds of Change 197
•• The Work of the Anima 1060
••• Theodicy 220
•• There are no words 62
•• There is too much noise 60
••• Theseus Says Goodbye 1037
•• They Don't Even Know 707
••• They May Be Right 333
• They prefer the abuse 542
• Thing in Progress 253
• Thing of Eternity 814
• Things Themselves 195
••• Things Unseen Though Known 462
• Think 1216
•• Think Harder 508
••• Think Not Absolutely 282
• Think with Me 506
•• Thinking Begins 522
••• Thinking Deeply 236
•• This And No Other 642
•• This and No Other As Well 1123
•• This Holy Place 1138
••• This One Lesson 1058
••• This Secret Warmth 743
•• This Way Forever 357
•• Thomas, Not Vanda 939
• Thorns 865
•• Thorns and Briars 746
•• Three Rivers 89
••• Through All Our Fears 378
•• Through her I see 637
•• Through Sacrifice 1188
••• Through the Horizon 388

•• Through the Unknown 435
• Through This Experience 811
•• Time 247
• Time Is Coming Soon 678
• Tired 859
•• To be me 570
•• To Even Have a Dream 361
•• To Men on Women 106
• To Rest At All 716
• To Tell This To You, or Changing of the Gods 271
••• To the Girl Behind the Pharmacy Counter 413
••• To the Girl in the Library 1313
••• To the Girl on the Bus Tour in Banff 1278
• Token 1072
•• Too Many Nightingales 1180
••• Too Playful 237
••• Tools in the Soil 569
•• Touch 415
• Touch and Soothe 719
• Touched 951
••• Toward Some Ithaca 753
••• Toward Sunset 1245
•• Tradition 160
• Tragic Figures 869
•• Transference 976
• Transformation 948
•• Trauma Bonding 1121
• Troika 1174
•• Truce 1027
•• True Healing 437
•• Truer, Higher, Deeper 1139
• Trust and Open Dialogue 721
• Trust or Freedom 376
• Truth or Power 1065
•• Turbulence 989
•• Turning the Page 394
• Twilight Over Virginia 154
••• Twin Eagles 674
•• Two Birds 782
••• Two Black Sheep 695
•• Two Lives 1185
••• Two Moons 1312
• Two Together 780

• Unauthorized thinking 199
•• Uncertain Certainties 1046
•• Uncertain Times 257
•• Uncharted Waters 767
••• Uncivilized After All These Years 342
•• Uncomfortable Peace 1003
• Under the Sweetest Desire 1209
• Unfriendly 301
••• Unreal Happiness 1281
•• Untested Ways 255
•• Untold Misery 322
•• Unveiling 1145
•• Unyielding Peace 978
•• Upon the Dawn 450
•• Ursa Major 1117
••• Valediction to Images 82
• Vanda 861
•• Vassals of Despair 545
••• Velocity 923
•• Venus 860
• Venus and Apollo 1136
•• Very Lucky 825
• Vessel 806
••• Vesta 414
••• Vesta, Return 596
••• Vesta Still Answers 1300
• Virgin Queens 210
•• Vortex Afterglow 273
•• Vulnerable Narcissist 911
• Wait For Another 281
• Wait For Me 446
••• Wait, Think, Speak 335
• Waiting 838
• Waiting to Heal 1044
•• Waitress 1260
•• Waking, Dreamlike 770
•• Walk Alone 857
•• Walking the Line 380
• Wallow 323
•• Wander on Stormy Seas 566
•• Wandering Sheep 183
••• Wane and Dwindle 585
• Warm Light 1035

•	Wayfarer	1033
•	We didn't move	488
••	We Have To Believe	1225
•	We Silly Mammals	384
••	We were always at war with nature	370
••	Well-Nourished Soil	1334
•••	We're All Traitors Now	1297
••	Westward Ticket	372
•	What Are They?	1068
•••	What calls for poetry?	202
•	What it is	163
•	What Surprises Remain	351
••	What time is this	312
•••	What Waiting Means	561
••	What Waiting Meant	1088
•••	What You Are Fighting For	839
•	What You Offer	1066
••	What You Were Feeling	758
••	What Your Longing Requires	662
••	Whatever Comes	445
••	Whatever This Call Entails	587
•	What's Best For You	692
•	What's Good For Them	1265
••	When a man loves	633
•	When Called to Build	602
•	When God Dies	997
••	Whence We Have Come	1187
•	Where Daylight Touches Earth	1050
•••	Where it Belongs	366
••	Where They Can See You	334
•••	Where True Power Lies	604
••	Where You Are Stepping	474
••	White Shade	146
•	Whitman	914
••	Who are they?	216
••	Who are we?	317
••	Who Does the Promising?	411
•••	Who is in charge here	192
•	Who is the One	1127
•	Who Knows Why	1306
••	Who You Are (Out of the Chrysalis)	623
••	Who You Would Like To Be	883
•	Whoever You Are	1045

•• Whole, Complete 872
•• Why and How 657
• Why Not Both 1064
•• Why Obey? 269
••• Why Reason? 266
• Why write poetry 90
•• Wild Stallion 933
• Will You Come? 679
• Wisely in Spite of Ignorance 597
•• With Great Justice 374
•• Without Fear And Trembling 790
• Without Losing Yourself 848
•• Woken by Storms 534
• Woman Now 1007
••• Words 190
• Worth a Try 954
••• Worth Asking 745
•• Worth Fighting For 987
• Worth Something 717
• Wouldn't it be nice 353
•• Wrong Turn 1125
•• Yeats' Footsteps 521
•• Yet To Be Named 752
• You Are The Way 270
••• You Carry It Always 524
• You Have Helped Me 965
•• You Still Are 1331
• Your Eyes 676
•• Your Future 998
• Youthful Infatuation 980